GENESIS.

CHAPTER THE TWENTY-THIRD.

2894. IT is written in John, "In the beginning was the WORD, and the WORD was with God, and God was the WORD. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him, and without Him was not any thing made, which was made. In Him was life, and the life was the light of Men. And the light appeareth in darkness, but the darkness comprehended it not. And the WORD was made Flesh, and dwelt in us, and we saw his glory, the glory as of the Only-Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth," i. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 14: few know what is here meant by the Word; that the Lord is meant, is evident from every particular: but the internal sense teaches, that the Lord as to the Divine Human [principle] is meant by the Word, for it is said, that the Word was made flesh, and dwelt in us, and we saw His glory: and whereas the Divine Human [principle] is meant by the Word, thereby is meant also every truth, which relates to Him, and is derived from Him, in His kingdom in the heavens, and in His Church on the earth; hence it is said, that in Him was life, and the life was the light of men, and the light appeareth in darkness: and whereas all truth is meant by the Word, thereby is meant also all revelation, consequently the Word itself or holy scripture.

2895. As to what concerns the Word in particular, it has existed in all times, but not the Word which we have at this day; there was another Word in the most ancient Church which was before the flood; and another in the ancient Church which was after the flood; but the Word written by Moses and the prophets in the Jewish Church; and finally the Word written by the evangelists in the new Church. The reason why the Word has existed at all times is, because by the Word there is a communication of heaven with earth; and because the Word treats of goodness and truth, whereby man may live happy to eternity; and therefore in the internal sense it treats of the Lord alone, inasmuch as all goodness and truth is from Him.

2896. The Word in the most ancient Church, which was before the flood, was not a written Word, but revealed to every one who was of the Church, for they were celestial men, consequently in the perception of goodness and truth like the angels, with whom also they had consort; thus they had the Word inscribed on their hearts; concerning whom see n. 597, 607, 895, 220, 1114 to 1125. And inasmuch as they were celestial, and had consort with the angels, whatsoever things they saw and were made sensible of, were to them representative and significative of things celestial and spiritual, which are in the Lord's kingdom; so that they saw indeed worldly and terrestrial things with their eyes, and were affected with them by their other senses, but from them and by them they thought of things celestial and spiritual; thus, and no otherwise, they were enabled to discourse with the angels, for the celestial and spiritual things, which appertain to the angels, when they come to man, fall upon such things as appertain to man in the world. That all the particular things which are in the world, represent and signify those things which are in the heavens, has been shewn heretofore from the first chapter of Genesis to the present chapter. Hence came representatives and significatives, which when communication with the angels began to cease, were collected by those who are meant by Enoch, as signified by these words, Gen. v. 24, "Enoch walked with God, and he was not, for God took him," see n. 521.

2897. But the Word in the ancient Church, which was after the flood, was hence derived; the men of this Church, as being spiritual but not celestial men, knew but did not perceive what was involved in representatives and significatives; and whereas Divine things were involved therein, they were applied to use, particularly in their Divine Worship, and this with intent that they might have communication with heaven; for, as was observed, all things which exist in the world represent and signify such things as exist in heaven. They had also a written Word which consisted of historicals and propheticals, like the Word of the Old Testament, but that Word in process of time was lost; the historicals were called the Wars of Jehovah, and the propheticals were called Enunciations, as appears from Moses, Numb. xxi. 14, 27, where they are cited; their historicals were written in the prophetic style, and for the most part were historical facts, [or things reduced to an historical form,] like what are contained in Genesis from chap. i. to xi., as is evident from what is thence quoted in Moses; where are these words, "Therefore it is said in the BOOK OF THE WARS OF JEHOVAH, Vaheb in Supha, and the rivers of Arnon, and the running down of the rivers, which inclined to the dwellings of Ar, and leans on the border of Moab," Numb. xxi. 14, 15. Their propheticals were written like the propheticals of the Old Testament, as is also evident from what is quoted thence in Moses, where are these words, "Therefore say the ENUNCIATIONS," (or the prophetic enuntiators,) come ye to Heshbon, it shall be built, and the city of Sihon shall be strengthened, because a fire hath gone forth from Heshbon, a flame from the city of Sihon, it hath devoured Ar of Moab, the lords of the high places of Arnon. Wo to thee Moab, thou art undone O people of Chemosh! he hath given his sons that escaped, and his daughters into captivity unto Sihon king of the Amorite; and we have shot at them, Heshbon hath perished even to Dibon, and we have laid them waste even unto Nopha, which is even to Medebah," Numb. xxi. 27, 28, 29, 30. That these propheticals involve heavenly arcana, like the propheticals of the Old Testament, is very manifest, not only from the consideration that they were written by Moses, and applied to the state of things then treated of, but also from this circumstance, that nearly the same words occur in Jeremiah, in which it must be very plain, from what has been said concerning the internal sense of the Word, there are contained as many heavenly arcana as there are words; the passage is this, "A fire hath gone forth from Heshbon, and a flame from between Sihon, and hath devoured the corner of Moab, and the top of the heads of the sons of noise: Wo to thee Moab! the people of Chemosh perisheth, because thy sons are taken into captivity, and thy daughters into captivity," Jer. xlviii. 45, 46; hence also it is evident that that Word had also an internal sense. Concerning the ancient Church which was after the flood, see n. 640, 641, 765, 1238, 1327, 2385.

2898. That they had propheticals, which in an internal sense treated of the Lord, and of His kingdom, may not only appear from the above considerations, but also from the prophetic sayings of Balaam, who was of Syria, spoken of in Moses, Numb. xxiii. 7, 8, 10, and 18 to 25; chap. xxiv. 3 to 10, and 15 to 25; which are delivered in a similar style with the other propheticals of the Word, and manifestly predict the Lord's coming in these words, "I see Him, and not now, I behold Him and not nigh: a star shall come forth from Jacob, and a sceptre shall arise out of Israel, and shall break the corners of Moab, and shall destroy all the sons of Seth," Numb. xxiv. 17; these propheticals are in like manner called ENUNCIATIONS, for the expression is the same, as may be seen, chap. xxiii. 7, 18; chap. xxiv. 3, 15, 20.

2899. A Word afterwards succeeded in the Jewish Church, which in like manner was written by representatives and significatives, to the intent that it might contain in it an internal sense understood in heaven, and thus by the Word a communication might be effected, and the Lord's kingdom in the heavens might be united with the Lord's kingdom on the earth; unless all and singular the things contained in the Word were representative, and unless all and singular the expressions, by which those things are written, were significative of Divine things appertaining to the Lord, the Word would not be Divine; and as this is the case, it could not possibly be written in any other style, for by this style, and by no other, human things and expressions correspond with celestial things and ideas, as to the smallest jot and tittle: hence it is, that if the Word be read only by an infant, the Divine things which are therein are perceived by the angels, see n. 1776.

2900. As to what concerns the Word of the New Testament, written by the evangelists, inasmuch as the Lord spake from the essential Divine [principle,] therefore also all and singular the things spoken by Him were representative and significative of Divine things, consequently of the celestial things of His kingdom and Church, as hath been abundantly shewn above.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1. AND the lives of Sarah were an hundred years, and twenty years, and seven years, the years of the lives of Sarah.

2. And Sarah died in Kirjath-Arba, this is Hebron in the land of Canaan, and Abraham came to mourn for Sarah, and to weep for her.

3. And Abraham arose from upon the faces of his dead, and spake to the sons of Heth, saying,

4. I am a sojourner and inmate with you, give me the possession of a sepulchre with you, and I will bury my dead from before me.

5. And the sons of Heth answered Abraham, saying to him,

6. Hear us, my Lord, thou art a prince of God in the midst of ours, in the choice of our sepulchres bury thy dead; none of us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre, from burying thy dead.

7. And Abraham arose, and bowed himself to the people of the land, the sons of Heth.

8. And spake with them, saying, if it is with your soul to bury my dead from before me, hear me, and intercede for me with Ephron the son of Zohar.

9. And let him give me the cave of Machpelah, which is his, which is in the end of his field, in full money let him give it me, in the midst of yours, for a possession of a sepulchre.

10. And Ephron was sitting in the midst of the sons of Heth, and Ephron the Hittite answered Abraham, in the ears of the sons of Heth, all that entered the gates of his city, saying,

11. Nay, my Lord, hear me, the field give I thee, and the cave which is therein, I give it thee, to the eyes of the sons of my people I give it thee, bury thy dead.

12. And Abraham bowed himself before the people of the land.

13. And he spake to Ephron in the ears of the people of the land, saying, nevertheless if thou, it please thee, hear me, I will give money for the field, receive from me, and I will bury my dead there.

14. And Ephron answered Abraham, saying to him,

15. My Lord, hear me, the land of four hundred shekels of silver, between me and thee, what is this, and bury thy dead.

16. And Abraham heard Ephron, and Abraham weighed out to Ephron the silver, which he spake in the ears of the sons of Heth, four hundred shekels of silver passing to the merchant.

17. And the field of Ephron, which is in Machpelah, which is before Mamre, the field and the cave which was in it, and every tree which was in the field, which was in all it's border round about,

18. Was made sure to Abraham for an acquisition to the eyes of the sons of Heth, in (the eyes) of all that entered in at the gate of his city.

19. And after this, Abraham buried Sarah his wife, at the cave of the field Machpelah upon the faces of Mamre, this is Hebron in the land of Canaan.

20. And the field, and the cave which was in it, was made sure to Abraham, for a possession of a sepulchre from the sons of Heth.

THE CONTENTS.

2901. THE subject here treated of, in an internal sense, is concerning a new Spiritual Church, which was raised up by the Lord, after that the former Church was altogether extinct: and concerning the reception of faith with those who are of the Church: Sarah here is the Truth Divine which expired: burial is raising up again: Ephron and the sons of Heth are those with whom the good and truth of the Church was received: Machpelah which is before Mamre is regeneration: Hebron in the land of Canaan is a new Church.

2902. The subject treated of is concerning Truth Divine, in that it expired, verses 1, 2, 3: and that the Lord established a new Church, verse 4: and was kindly received, verses 5, 6: whence came joy, verses, 7 and 12: that their first state was obscure, and they believed the good of charity and the truth of faith to be from themselves, verses 8, 9, 10, 11, 14, 15; but they were instructed that good and truth were not from themselves, but from the Lord, verse 13: and that thus they were redeemed, verse 16: and regenerated, verses 17, 18: thus there was established a new Church, verse 19; from the Gentiles, verse 20.

THE INTERNAL SENSE.

2903. Verse 1. AND the lives of Sarah were an hundred years, and twenty years, and seven years, the years of the lives of Sarah. The lives of Sarah were, signifies times and states of the Church, as to Truths Divine which preceded: an hundred years, and twenty years, and seven years, signifies their fulness: the years of the lives of Sarah, signifies when any Truth Divine remained in the earth.

2904. "The lives of Sarah were"—that hereby are signified times and states of the Church, as to Truths Divine which preceded, may appear from the signification of lives in this passage, and from the representation of Sarah; lives here, as regarding age and periods of age, viz. infancy, youth, adult age, and old age, signify states, as all times in general do, see n. 2625, 2788, 2837; and inasmuch as the subject treated of in the following verses, is concerning the Church, therefore lives signify times and states of the Church; that Sarah is Truth Divine, may be seen, n. 1468, 1901, 2063, 2172, 2173, 2198, 2507: hence it follows, that by the expression here used, "the lives of Sarah were," in an internal sense, are signified times and states of the Church, as to Truths Divine which preceded. That Sarah, when she lived a wife to Abraham, represented the Divine Truth of the Lord conjoined to His Divine Good, may be seen from the places above cited; and whereas she represented the Divine Truth of the Lord, so she signifies also the Truth Divine of the Church, for in the Church no other truth is given than what is of the Lord; the truth which is not from Him, is not truth; as appears also from the Word and the doctrine of faith thence derived; from the Word in this passage, "A man can take nothing except it be given him from heaven," John iii. 27; and in another place, "Without me ye can do nothing," xv. 5; and from the doctrine of faith asserting, that the All of faith is from the Lord, that is, all truth. This is the case with representatives and significatives in the Word, that all and each of them in a supreme sense have respect to the Lord, hence is derived the essential life of the Word; and inasmuch as they have respect to the Lord, they have respect also to His kingdom, for the Lord is the All in His kingdom; the Divine things which are from the Lord in His kingdom constitute His kingdom; wherefore in proportion as an angel, a spirit, and a man, receives good and truth from the Lord, and believes it to be from the Lord, in the same proportion he is in the Lord's kingdom; but in proportion as he does not so receive and believe it to be from the Lord, in the same proportion he is not in the Lord's kingdom; thus the Divine things, which are from the Lord, constitute His kingdom, or heaven, and this is what is meant by the Lord's being the All in His kingdom.

2905. "An hundred years, and twenty years, and seven years"—that hereby is signified the fulness of those times and states, appears from the signification of hundred as denoting what is full, concerning which see n. 2636; and from the signification of twenty, or twice ten, as denoting also what is full, see n. 1988; and from the signification of seven, as denoting what is holy, see n. 395, 433, 716, 881; consequently the fullness or end of the holy [principle] of the Church, is what is here signified; that numbers in the Word all signify things, may be seen, n. 482, 487, 647, 648, 755, 813, 1963, 1988, 2075, 2252; their fulness, viz. the fulness of the states and times of the Church, signifies their end; the case with the Church is like that of man in regard to the several ages of infancy, of youth, of manhood, and of old age; the last of which is called the fulness or end; it is also like the seasons and states of the year, the first of which is spring, the second summer, the third autumn, and the fourth winter, which last is the end of the year; it is also like the times and states of the day, the first of which is morning, the second noon, the third evening, and the fourth night, and this last is the fulness or end; to these also the states of the Church are compared in the Word, and by the same they are signified, because by times are signified states, see n. 2625, 2788, 2837. Good and truth with those who are of the Church, is thus wont to decrease; and when there is no longer any good and truth, or, as it is called, any faith, that is, charity, then the Church comes to it's old age, or to it's winter, or to it's night, and it's time and state in this case is called decision, consummation, and impletion, see n. 1857; the same is signified when it is said of the Lord, that He came into the world in the fulness of time, or when there was fulness, for in such case there is no longer any good, not even natural good, consequently there is no longer any truth; this is what is signified in particular by what is said in this verse.

2906. "The years of the lives of Sarah"—that hereby is signified when any Truth Divine remained, appears from the signification of year, as denoting an entire period of the Church from beginning to end, thus from the signification of years as denoting periods, concerning which see immediately above, n. 2905; and from the signification of the lives of Sarah, as denoting states as to Truth Divine, see above, n. 2904; thus denoting here the term when there was no longer any Truth Divine remaining; which follows also from what immediately precedes. That year signifies an entire time of a state of the Church from beginning to end, or, what is the same thing, an entire period, and consequently that years signify times or periods within the general time or period, may appear from the following passages in the Word: "Jehovah hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the afflicted, he hath sent me to bind up the broken in heart, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and to the bound all kind of opening, to proclaim the year of the good pleasure of Jehovah, and the day of vengeance to our God," Isaiah lxi. 2; speaking of the Lord's coming; where the year of the good pleasure of Jehovah denotes the time of a new Church; again in the same prophet, "The day of vengeance is in My heart, and the year of My redeemed is come," lxiii. 4; speaking in like manner of the Lord's coming, where the year of My redeemed denotes the time of a new Church; again in the same prophet, "The day of vengeance of Jehovah, the year of retributions for the controversy of Zion," xxxiv. 8; where the signification is the same. The same time is also called the year of visitation in Jeremiah, "I will bring evil upon the men of Anathoth in the year of their visitation," xi. 23; again, "I will bring upon Moab the year of their visitation," xlviii. 44; and more manifestly in Ezekiel, "After many days thou shalt be visited, in the posterity of years it shall come upon the land returned from the sword, gathered together out of many people, on the mountains of Israel, which shall be for a waste continually," xxxviii. 8; where the posterity of years denotes the last time of the Church, which then becomes no Church, those being rejected who were before of the Church, and others being elsewhere received; so in Isaiah, "Thus said the Lord unto me, within a year, according to the years of an hireling, and all the glory of Kedar shall be consumed," xxi. 16; denoting also the last time: so in Ezekiel, "In thy blood which thou hast said, thou art become guilty, and in thy idols which thou hast made, thou art polluted, and thou hast caused thy days to approach, and hast come even to thine years, because I have given thee a reproach to the Gentiles, and a mocking to all lands," xxii. 4; where to come even to years signifies to come even to an end, when the Lord retires from the Church; so in Isaiah, "Now hath Jehovah spoken, saying, in three years, as the years of an hireling, and the glory of Moab shall grow vile in all that great multitude, and the residue shall be very small," xvi. 14; where in three years denotes also the end of the former Church. That three signify what is complete and a beginning, may be seen n. 1825, 2788; the same is also signified by seven, and likewise by seventy, see n. 720, 728, 901; hence it is said in Isaiah, "And it shall come to pass in that day, that Tyre shall be given to oblivion seventy years, according to the days of one king; from the end of seventy years, it shall be to Tyre according to the song of an harlot; and it shall come to pass at the end of seventy years, Jehovah shall visit Tyre, and she shall return to her whorish hire," xxiii. 15, 17; where seventy years denote an entire period, from the beginning of the Church's existence until it expires, which also is signified by the days of one king, for king signifies the truth of the Church, see n. 1672, 1728,

2015, 2069. Somewhat similar is also implied in the captivity of seventy years, in which the Jews were held, concerning which it is thus written in Jeremiah, "These nations shall serve the king of Babel seventy years, and it shall come to pass when the seventy years are fulfilled, I will visit upon the king of Babel, and upon this nation, saith Jehovah, their iniquity," xxv. 11, 12. chap. xxix. 10. That year, and also years, denote an entire period of the Church, or the time of its duration, may yet further appear from Malachi, "Behold I send My angel, and he shall prepare the way before him, and the Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to His temple, and the angel of the covenant whom ye desire, behold He cometh, saith Jehovah of Zebaoth, and who endureth the day of His coming? then shall the offering of Judah and of Jerusalem be sweet to Jehovah, according to the days of an age, and according to the ancient years," iii. 1, 2, 4; speaking of the coming of the Lord; the days of an age denote the most ancient Church; the ancient years denote the ancient Church; the offering of Judah denotes worship grounded in celestial love, and the offering of Jerusalem worship grounded in spiritual love; that neither Judah nor Jerusalem are here meant, is evident. So in David, "I have considered the days of old and the years of ages," lxxvii. 5; where days of old and years of ages denote the same Churches as above; this is still more manifest in Moses, "Remember the days of an age, understand the years of generation and generation, ask thy father and he will declare to thee, thy old men and they will tell thee; when the Most High gave an inheritance to the nations, and himself separated the sons of man," Deut. xxxii. 7, 8. That year and years denote a full time of the Church, is plain also from Habakkuk, "Jehovah, I have heard Thy fame, Jehovah, I have feared Thy work, in the midst of years, vivify it, in the midst of years, make it known, in wrath remember mercy: God shall come from Teman, and the Holy One from mount Paran," iii. 2, 3; speaking of the Lord's coming; in the midst of years denotes in the fulness of times; what is meant by the fulness of times, may be seen above, n. 2905. As year and years signify a full time between each term, the beginning and the end, when they are predicated of the Lord's kingdom on earth, that is, the Church, so they signify what is eternal when they are predicated of the Lord's kingdom in heaven; as in David, "O God, Thy years are for generation and generation, and Thou Thyself, and Thy years shall not be consumed; the sons of Thy servants shall continue, and their seed shall be confirmed before Thee," Psalm cii. 24, 27, 28; again, "Thou shalt add days upon the days of the king, his years according to generation and generation," Psalm lxi. 6, 7; where years denote what is eternal, for the subject treated of is concerning the Lord and His kingdom. That the lambs, which were offered for burnt-offering and sacrifice, should be, "sons of their year," Lev. xii. 6; chap. xiv. 10; Numb. vi. 12; chap. vii. 15, 21, 27, 33, 39, 45, 57, 63, 69, 75, 81; and in other places signified the celestial things of innocence in the Lord's kingdom which are eternal; hence also the burnt-offering of calves, the sons of a year, is mentioned in Micah as being most grateful, chap. vi. 6. That year in an internal sense does not signify year, may also appear from this consideration, that the angels, who are in the internal sense of the Word, cannot have an idea of any year, but inasmuch as year denotes a full period of time in the natural world, therefore instead of year they have an idea of what is full in respect to states of the Church, and of what is eternal in respect to states of heaven; times with them are states, see n. 1274, 1382, 2625, 2788, 2837.

2907. Verse 2. And Sarah died in Kirjath-Arba, this is Hebron in the land of Canaan; and Abraham came to mourn for Sarah, and to weep for her. Sarah died, signifies night as to the truths of faith; in Kirjath-Arba, this is Hebron in the land of Canaan, signifies in the Church; and Abraham came to mourn for Sarah and to weep for her, signifies a state of the Lord's grief.

2908. "Sarah died"—that hereby is signified night as to the truths of faith, appears from the signification of dying, of dead, and of death, when they are predicated of the Church, as denoting it's last time, when all faith, that is, all charity has expired, which time in the Word is every where called night, see n. 221, 709, 1712, 2353; that by dying is signified the ceasing to be of such a quality as the thing was before, may be seen, n. 494; and from the representation of Sarah, as denoting Truth Divine, concerning which see above, n. 2904; hence it is evident that these things are here signified.

2909. "In Kirjath-Arba, this is Hebron in the land of Canaan"—that hereby is signified in the Church, may appear from the signification of Kirjath-Arba, as denoting the Church as to truth; and from the signification of Hebron in the land of Canaan, as denoting the Church as to good. In the Word, especially the prophetical, where truth is treated of, good is treated of also, by reason of the heavenly marriage which hath place in all and singular parts of the Word, see n. 683, 793, 801, 2173, 2516, 2712; therefore here, when mention is made of Kirjath-Arba, it is also said, this is Hebron in the land of Canaan; that the land of Canaan denotes the Lord's kingdom, may be seen, n. 4413, 1437, 1607; and that the places therein were severally representative, may be seen, n. 1585, 1866. In regard to Kirjath-Arba which is Hebron, it was the country where Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob dwelt; that Abraham dwelt there, appears from what was said above, "Abraham came and dwelt in Mamre, which is in Hebron," Gen. xiii. 18; that Isaac dwelt there, appears from what follows, where it is said, "Jacob came to Isaac his father unto Mamre Kirjath Arba, this is Hebron, where Abraham and Isaac sojourned," Gen. xxxv. 27; that Jacob dwelt there, appears from this passage, "Joseph was sent by his father Jacob to his brethren from the valley of Hebron," Gen. xxxvii. 14. From the representation of those three persons, as spoken of above, it is manifest that Kirjath-Arba, which is Hebron, represented the Church, before it was represented by Jerusalem. That every Church in process of time decreases, until it hath nothing left of faith and charity, and that then it is destroyed, was also represented by Kirjath-Arba which is Hebron, in that it was possessed by the Anakims, by whom are signified dreadful persuasions of what is false, see n. 581, 1673; that it was possessed by the Anakims, may be seen, Num. xiii. 21, 22; Joshua xi. 21; chap. xiv. 15; chap. xv. 13, 14; Judges i. 10; and that it came to its end or consummation, and was destroyed, was represented by this circumstance, that all things therein were given by Joshua to the curse, Joshua x. 36, 37; chap. xi. 21; and the Anakims were smitten by Judah and Caleb, Judges i. 10; Josh. xiv. 13, 14, 15; chap. xv. 13, 14; and that there was established again a new Church, was represented by the same place being ceded to Caleb for an inheritance, as to the fields and villages, Joshua xxi. 12; but the city itself was made a city of refuge, Joshua xx. 7; chap. xxi. 13; and a priestly city for the sons of Aaron, Joshua xxi. 10, 11; in the inheritance of Judah, Joshua xv. 54. Hence it is evident, that Hebron represented the Lord's spiritual Church in the land of Canaan; on which account also David by the command of Jehovah was required to go to Hebron, and was there anointed to be a king over the house of Judah; and after that he had reigned there seven years and six months, he went to Jerusalem, and took possession of Zion, see 2 Sam. ii. 1 to 11; chap. v. 5; 1 Kings ii. 11; and then first the Lord's spiritual Church began to be represented by Jerusalem, and the celestial Church by Zion.

•2910. "And Abraham came to mourn for Sarah, and to weep for her"—that hereby is signified the Lord's grief, viz. on account of the night as to the truths of faith in the Church, appears from the representation of Abraham, as denoting the Lord, see n. 1893, 1965, 1989, 2011, 2172, 2501, 2833, 2836; that to mourn and to weep signify a state of grief, appears without explication; to mourn has respect to grief on account of night as to what is good in the Church, and to weep as to what is true. The subject treated of in these two verses is concerning the end of the Church; its end is when there is no longer any charity; this subject is frequently treated of in the Word, especially by the prophets, and by John in the Apocalypse; the Lord also describes the end of the Church in many passages in the Evangelists, and calls it the consummation of the age, and also night : for with respect to Churches the case is as follows ; in the beginning charity is held as a fundamental, every one in this case loves another as a brother, and is affected from a principle of good, not for himself, but for his neighbour, for the general good, for the Lord's kingdom ; and above all things for the Lord ; but in process of time charity begins to grow cold and to become none ; afterwards there arises hatred one towards another, which, although it does not appear in an external form, by reason of their being subject to the laws of civil society, and to external bonds of restraint, yet it is nourished inwardly ; these external bonds of restraint are derived from self-love and the love of the world, and consist in the love of honour and eminence, in the love of gain and of power also grounded in gain, consequently in the love of reputation ; under these loves hatred conceals itself, which is of such a nature, that it wishes to bear rule over all, and to appropriate to itself the property of all ; and when these loves are opposed, the persons under their influence inwardly despise their neighbour, breathe revenge, have a sensible delight in their neighbour's ruin, yea, exercise cruelty towards him as far as they dare ; such is the consequence of the departure of charity from the Church when its end comes, and in such case it is said of it, that there is no longer any faith, for where there is no charity there can be no faith, as has been abundantly shewn above : there were several Churches, which are noticed in the Word, and which came to such an end ; the most ancient Church thus expired about the time of the flood ; in like manner the ancient Church which was after the flood ; and also another ancient Church which was called the Hebrew Church ; and lastly, the Jewish Church, which was in no respect any Church commencing from charity, but was only representative of a Church, to the intent that by representatives communication with heaven might be kept open, before the Lord came into the world ; afterwards a new Church was raised up by the Lord, which was called the Church of the Gentiles, and which was an internal Church, inasmuch as interior truths were revealed from the Lord ; but this Church is now at its end, because now there is not only no charity, but hatred instead of charity, which hatred, although it does not appear in an external form, still exists internally and breaks forth externally as often as possibility allows, that is, as often as external bonds do not operate to prevent it. Besides these Churches there have existed several others, which are not so particularly described, and which in like manner decreased and destroyed themselves. There are several causes of such decrease and destruction ; one is, that parents accumulate evils, and by frequent use, and at length by habit, implant them in their nature, and thus transmit them to their offspring hereditarily ; for the principle which parents imbibe in consequence of actual life, and by frequent use, is irradiated in their nature, and is transmitted hereditarily to posterity, and unless posterity is reformed and regenerated, the same principle is continued to successive generations, and this with perpetual increase; hence the will is more prone to evil and false principles. But when the Church is consummated and perishes, then the Lord always raises up a new Church elsewhere, yet seldom, if ever, from the men of the former Church, but from the Gentiles who were before in ignorance. The subject which now comes to be treated of is concerning such Gentiles.

2911. Verse 3. And Abraham arose from upon the faces of his dead, and spake to the sons of Heth, saying. Abraham arose, signifies elevation: from upon the faces of his dead, signifies in that night: and spake to the sons of Heth, saying, signifies those with whom was a new spiritual Church.

2912. "Abraham arose"—that hereby is signified elevation, appears from the signification of arising, as implying somewhat of elevation, concerning which see n. 2401, 2785, in the present case elevation from grief, because a new Church was about to be raised up instead of the former. That from upon the faces of his dead, signifies in that night, appears from the signification of dying, of death, and of the dead, as denoting night as to the state of the Church, concerning which see above, n. 2908.

2913. "And spake to the sons of Heth, saying"—that hereby are signified those with whom was a new spiritual Church, may appear from the signification of Heth and of Hittite. There were several inhabitants of the land of Canaan, who are enumerated in the Word throughout, and amongst them the Hittites, see Gen. xv. 20; Exod. iii. 8, 17; chap. xiii. 5; chap. xxiii. 23; Deut. vii. 1; chap. xx. 17; Joshua iii. 10; chap. xi. 3; chap. xii. 8; chap. xxiv. 11; 1 Kings ix. 20, and in other places; several of them were of the ancient Church, which, as may be seen, n. 1238, 2385, was extended over several lands, and also over the land of Canaan. All who were of that Church acknowledged charity as a principal [constituent of the Church], and all their doctrinals were doctrinals of charity or of life; they who cultivated the doctrinals of faith were called Canaanites, and were separated from the other inhabitants of the land of Canaan, Numb. xiii. 29; see also n. 1062, 1063, 1076. The Hittites were among the better sort of inhabitants of the land of Canaan, as may also appear from these considerations, that Abraham dwelt amongst them, and afterwards Isaac and Jacob, and were also buried there, and that they behaved themselves with piety and modesty towards Abraham, as is very manifest from what is related of them in this chapter, particularly in verses 5, 6, 10, 11, 14, 15. Hence it is that by this people, as by a well-disposed nation, is represented and signified the spiritual Church, or the truth of the Church; but it came to pass with these as with the rest of the nations who composed the ancient Church, that in process of time they declined from charity or the good of faith, and hence it is that by them is afterwards signified the false principle of the Church, as in Ezech. xvi. 3, 45, and in other places; that still the Hittites were among the more honourable, may appear from this consideration, that Hittites were attendant on David, as Abimelech, 1 Sam. xxvi. 6, and Uriah, who was a Hittite, 2 Sam. xi. 3, 6, 17, 21; whose wife was Bathsheba, of whom David had Solomon, 2 Sam. xii. 24. That Heth signifies exterior knowledges which have respect to life, and which are the external truths of the spiritual Church, may be seen, n. 1203. The subject treated of in this verse is concerning a new Church which the Lord establishes when the former Church expires; and the subject treated of in the subsequent verses is concerning the reception of faith amongst the men of the Church; it is not to be supposed that any Church is treated of as raised up among the sons of Heth, but only in general the raising up of a spiritual Church by the Lord, after that the former Church is fallen away or consummated; the sons of Heth are only representative and significative. See on this occasion what hath been said above concerning Churches, viz. that every Church in process of time decreases and is contaminated, n. 494, 501, 1327, 2422. That it recedes from charity, and produces evils and falses, n. 1834, 1835. That in such case the Church is said to be vastated and desolated, n. 407 to 411, 2243. That the Church is established amongst the Gentiles, and why, n. 1366. That there is always preserved somewhat of a Church, in the Church which is vastated, as a nucleus, n. 468, 637, 931, 2422. That mankind would perish unless there was a Church on the earth, n. the same. That the Church is as the heart and lungs in the grand body, that is, in the human race, n. 637, 931, 2054, 2853. Concerning the nature and quality of the spiritual Church, n. 765, 2669. That charity, and not faith separate from charity, constitutes the Church, n. 809, 916. That the Church would be one if all had charity, notwithstanding a difference as to doctrinals and worship, n. 1285, 1316, 1798, 1799, 1834, 1844, 2385. That all men on the earth, who are in the Lord's Church, notwithstanding their dispersion, still as it were make one, as in the heavens, n. 2853. That every Church is internal and external, and both together constitute one, n. 409, 1083, 1098, 1100, 1242. That the external Church is nothing, if not internal, n. 1795. That the Church is compared to the rising and setting of the sun, to the seasons of the year, and also to the times of the day, n. 1837. That the last judgment is the last time of the Church, n. 900, 931, 1850, 2117, 2118.

2914. Verse 4. I am a sojourner and inmate with you, give me possession of a sepulchre with you, and I will bury my dead from before me. I am a sojourner and inmate with you, signifies their first state, that although the Lord was unknown to them, still He could be with them; give me possession of a sepulchre with you, signifies that they might be regenerated; and I will bury my dead from before me, signifies that thus He would emerge and rise again from the night which appertained to them.

2915. "I am a sojourner and inmate with you"—that hereby is signified their first state, that although the Lord was unknown to them, still He could be with them, appears from the representation of Abraham as denoting the Lord, whereof much has been said above; and from the signification of being a sojourner with them, and being an inmate with them, as denoting being unknown and still being with them. That this is the internal sense of these words is evident from what precedes and from what follows; for the subject treated of is concerning a new Church, and in this verse concerning the first state thereof, which is such, that the Lord is unknown to the members of the Church, but nevertheless, inasmuch as they live in the good of charity, and as to civil life are principled in justice and equity, and as to moral life in honesty and decorum, they are therefore in such a state that the Lord may be with them. For the Lord's presence with man is in goodness, and consequently in justice and equity, and moreover in honesty and decorum: (honesty is the complex of all moral virtues, decorum is only the form thereof;) for these are the good principles which have an orderly arrangement, and are planes appertaining to man, on which conscience is founded by the Lord, and consequently intelligence and wisdom; but they who are not thus principled in heart and affection, are incapable of receiving any thing of heaven in the way of insemination, there being no plane, nor ground, consequently nothing recipient; and inasmuch as nothing of heaven can be inseminated, neither can the Lord, for the same reason, be present. The presence of the Lord is predicated according to good, that is, according to the quality of good, and the quality of good according to the state of innocence, love and charity, in which the truths of faith are implanted, or capable of being implanted.

2916. "Give me possession of a sepulchre with you"—that hereby is signified that they might be regenerated, appears from the signification of a sepulchre; sepulchre in the internal sense of the Word signifies life or heaven, and in the opposite sense death or hell; the reason why it signifies life or heaven is, because the angels, who are in the internal sense of the Word, have no idea of a sepulchre, inasmuch as they have no idea of death, wherefore instead of a sepulchre they perceive nothing else but a continuation of life, consequently resurrection ; for man rises again as to his spirit, and is buried as to his body, see n. 1854 ; and whereas burial signifies resurrection, it also signifies regeneration, for regeneration is man's first resurrection, inasmuch as he then dies as to the old man, and rises again as to the new ; by regeneration man from being dead becomes alive ; hence comes the signification of a sepulchre in an internal sense : that an idea of regeneration occurs to the angels, when an idea of a sepulchre is presented, is evident also from what was related concerning infants, n. 2299. The reason why sepulchre, in an opposite sense, signifies death or hell is, because the wicked do not rise again to life, and therefore when the subject treated of is concerning the wicked, and mention is made of a sepulchre, in this case there occurs to the angels no other idea than that of hell ; this is the reason why hell in the Word is also called a sepulchre. That sepulchre signifies resurrection and also regeneration, is evident from these words in Ezechiel, "Therefore prophesy, and say unto them, thus saith the Lord Jehovah, behold I will open your sepulchres, and will cause you to ascend out of your sepulchres, O my people, and will bring you to the ground of Israel, and ye shall know that I am Jehovah, in my opening your sepulchres, and causing you to ascend out of your sepulchres, O my people, and I will give My spirit into you, and ye shall live, and I will place you on your own ground," xxxvii. 12, 13, 14 ; in this passage the prophet treats of vivified bones, and in an internal sense of regeneration ; that he treats of regeneration, is very evident, for it is said, "I will give My spirit into you, and ye shall live, and I will place you on your own ground ;" sepulchre here denotes the old man, with his evil and false principles, which to open and from which to ascend, is to be regenerated ; thus the idea of a sepulchre perishes and is as it were put off, when the idea of regeneration, or new life, succeeds. The same is implied by the "sepulchres being opened, and many bodies of sleeping saints rising, and going forth out of their sepulchres after the Lord's resurrection, and entering into the holy city, and appearing to many," Matt. xxvii. 52, 53 ; denoting resurrection by virtue of the Lord's resurrection, and in an interior sense every particular resurrection. By the Lord's raising Lazarus from the dead, John xi. is also implied the raising up of a new Church from amongst the Gentiles, for all the miracles which were wrought by the Lord, as being Divine, involved states of His Church. The like is implied also by what is related of the man, who, being cast into the sepulchre of Elisha, came to life again on touching the prophet's bones, 2 Kings xiii. 20, 21 ; for by Elisha was represented the Lord. Inasmuch as burial signified resurrection in general, and every particular resurrection, therefore the ancients were especially solicitous about their burials and the places where they were buried, as appears from the case of Abraham, in that he was buried in Hebron in the land of Canaan, and also Isaac and Jacob with their wives, Gen. xlvii. 29, 30, 31; chap. xlix. 30, 31, 32; and from the case of Joseph in that his bones were carried from Egypt into the land of Canaan, Gen. l. 25; Exod. xiii. 19; Joshua xxiv. 32; and from the case of David and the kings after him, in that they were buried in Zion, 1 Kings ii. 10; chap. xi. 43; chap. xiv. 31; chap. xv. 8, 24; chap. xxii. 50; 2 Kings viii. 24; chap. xii. 20; chap. xiv. 20; chap. xv. 7, 38; chap. xvi. 24; the reason was, because the land of Canaan and also Zion represented and signified the Lord's kingdom, and burial represented and signified resurrection; but that place contributes nothing to resurrection may be obvious to every one. That burial signifies resurrection to life, is manifest also from other representatives, as where it is ordered that the wicked should not be bemoaned, neither buried, but should be cast out, Jer. viii. 2; chap. xiv. 16; chap. xvi. 4, 6; chap. xx. 6; chap. xxii. 19; chap. xxv. 33; 2 Kings ix. 10; Rev. xi. 9; and that the wicked, who were buried, should be cast out from their sepulchres, Jer. viii. 1, 2; 2 Kings xxiii. 16, 17, 18. But that sepulchre, in an opposite sense, signifies death or hell, may be seen in Isaiah xiv. 19, 20, 21; Ezech. xxxii. 21, 22, 23, 25, 27. Psalm lxxxviii. 5, 6, 11, 12; Numb. xix. 16, 18, 19.

2917. "And I will bury my dead from before me"—that hereby is signified, that thus He would emerge and rise again from the night which appertained to them, appears from the signification of burying, as denoting to rise again, concerning which see immediately above, n. 2916; and from the signification of dead, as denoting a state of shade or night, that is, of ignorance, concerning which see also above, n. 2908, 2912, from which state the Lord emerges and rises again with man, when He is acknowledged by man; before this He is in night, because He doth not appear. He rises again with every one who is regenerated. •

2918. Verses 5, 6. And the sons of Heth answered Abraham, saying unto him, Hear us my Lord, thou art a prince of God in the midst of us, in the choice of our sepulchres bury thy dead: none of us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre, from burying thy dead. The sons of Heth answered Abraham, saying unto him, signifies a reciprocal state with those who were of the new Church; hear us, signifies reception; my Lord, thou art a prince of God in the midst of us, signifies the Lord as to Good and Truth Divine with them; in the choice of our sepulchres, signifies well pleasing as to regeneration; bury thy dead, signifies that thus they should emerge out of night, and be raised up into life; none of us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre, signifies that all were prepared to receive regeneration; from burying thy dead, signifies that they might emerge out of night and be raised up.

2919. "The sons of Heth answered Abraham, saying unto him"—that hereby is signified a reciprocal state with those who were of the new Church, appears from the signification of answering when assent is given to what is asked, as denoting what is reciprocal; and from the signification of the sons of Heth, as denoting those who were of the new spiritual Church, see n. 2913.

2921. "My Lord, thou art a prince of God in the midst of us"—that hereby is signified the Lord as to Good and Truth Divine with them, appears from the signification of Lord, and of prince of God, and from the signification of the midst of us: that the term Lord is used, when good is treated of, is evident from the Word of the Old Testament, where Jehovah, is sometimes called Jehovah, sometimes God, sometimes Lord, sometimes Jehovah God, sometimes the Lord Jehovah, sometimes Jehovah Zebaoth, and this from a mysterious ground, which can be known only from the internal sense; in general, when the subject treated of is concerning the celestial things of love, or concerning good, then He is called Jehovah, but when the subject treated of is concerning the spiritual things of faith, or concerning truth, then He is called God; but when concerning both together then He is called Jehovah God; and when concerning the divine power of good, or omnipotence, then He is called Jehovah Zebaoth, or Jehovah of Hosts, and also Lord, so that Jehovah Zebaoth and Lord are of the same sense and signification; hence, viz. from the power of good, also men and angels are called lords, and in an opposite sense they are servants, who have either no power, or a power derived from lords. From these considerations it may appear, that Hear my Lord, in an internal sense, signifies the Lord as to good, which will be presently illustrated from the Word: but prince of God signifies the Lord as to the power of truth, or as to truth, as may appear from the signification of prince or of princes, as denoting primary truths, concerning which see n. 1482, 2089, and from this consideration, that he is called a prince of God, for the appellation God is used in treating of truth and the appellation Jehovah in treating of good, see n. 2586, 2769, 2807, 2822: that in the midst of us denotes amongst them or with them appears without explication. That in the Word of the Old Testament, Jehovah Zebaoth and the Lord have the same sense and signification, appears from Isaiah, "the zeal of Jehovah Zebaoth will do this; the Lord hath sent a word unto Jacob, and it hath fallen in Israel," ix. 7, 8; and again, "A mighty king shall rule over them, saith the Lord Jehovah of Zebaoth," xix. 4. So in Malachi, "Behold the Lord, whom ye seek shall suddenly come to His temple, and the angel of the covenant whom ye desire, behold He cometh, saith Jehovah Zebaoth," iii. 1; and still more manifestly in Isaiah, "I saw the Lord sitting on a throne high and lifted up! above it stood the seraphim; each had six wings; one cried to another, Holy, holy, holy, Jehovah Zebaoth, wo unto me, because I am cut off, because mine eyes have seen the king Jehovah Zebaoth, and I have heard the voice of the Lord," vi. 1, 3, 5, 8; from which passages it is evident that Jehovah Zebaoth, and the Lord have the same sense; but the appellation Lord Jehovah is used, when the aid of omnipotence is more especially sought for and supplicated, as in Isaiah, "Say to the cities of Judah, behold your God, behold the Lord Jehovah shall come in strength, and His arm shall rule for Him; behold His recompence is with Him, and his work before Him, as a shepherd He shall feed His flock," xl. 9, 10, 11; see further to the same purpose, Isaiah xxv. 8; chap. xl. 10; chap. xlviii. 16; chap. l. 4, 5, 7, 9; chap. lxi. 1; Jer. ii. 22; Ezech. viii. 1; chap. xi. 13, 17, 21; chap. xii. 10, 19, 28; chap. xiii. 8, 13, 16, 18, 20; chap. xiv. 4, 6, 11, 18, 20, 21; Micah i. 2; Psalm lxxi. 5, 16; and in several other places. Moreover in the Word of the Old Testament, the appellation Lord implies the same thing as the appellation Jehovah, in that it is used when the subject treated of is concerning good, wherefore also Lord is distinguished from God, in like manner as Jehovah is, as in Moses, "Jehovah our God, He is God of gods, and Lord of lords," Deut. x. 17: and in David, "Confess to the God of gods, because His mercy endureth for ever; confess to the Lord of lords, because His mercy endureth for ever," Psalm cxxxvi. 1, 2, 3. But in the Word of the New Testament, with the evangelists and in the Apocalypse, there is no mention made of Jehovah, but instead of Jehovah the appellation Lord is used, and this for secret reasons, of which we shall speak presently: that in the Word of the New Testament the appellation Lord is used, instead of Jehovah, may appear evident from the following passage, "Jesus said, the first (primary) of all the commandments is, Hear O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord, therefore thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy thought, and with all thy strength," Mark xii. 29, 30; which is thus expressed in Moses, "Hear O Israel, Jehovah our God is one Jehovah, and thou shalt love Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength," Deut. vi. 4, 5; where it is manifest the appellation Lord is used instead of Jehovah: In like manner in the Apocalypse, "Behold a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne; and round about the throne were four animals full of eyes before and behind, each had for himself six wings round about, and within full of eyes; and they said, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God omnipotent," chap. iv. 2, 6, 8; which is thus expressed in Isaiah, "I saw the Lord sitting on a throne high and lifted up; the seraphim were standing above it, each had six wings; and one cried to another, Holy, holy, holy, Jehovah Zebaoth," vi. 1, 3, 5, 8; in which passage of the Apocalypse, the appellation Lord is used for Jehovah, or Lord God omnipotent for Jehovah Zebaoth; that the four animals are seraphim or cherubim, is plain from Ezechiel, chap. i. 5, 13, 14, 15, 19; chap. x. 15: that in the New Testament the Lord is Jehovah, appears also from several other passages, as in Luke, "The angel of the Lord appeared to Zachariah," i. 11; where the angel of the Lord is the angel of Jehovah: again in the same evangelist, "The angel saith to Zachariah concerning his son, many of the sons of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God," i. 16; where to the Lord their God means to Jehovah God: again in the same evangelist, "The angel saith to Mary concerning Jesus, He shall be great, and shall be called the son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of David," i. 32; where the Lord God denotes Jehovah God: again, "Mary said, my soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath exalted itself on God my Saviour," i. 46, 47; where the Lord also denotes Jehovah: again, in the same evangelist, "Zacharias prophesied, saying, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel," i. 68; where the Lord God denotes Jehovah God: again, in the same evangelist, "The angel of the Lord stood near them" (speaking of the shepherds), "and the glory of the Lord shone round about them," ii. 9; where the angel of the Lord and the glory of the Lord denote the angel of Jehovah and the glory of Jehovah: so in Matthew, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord," xxi. 9; chap. xxiii. 39; Luke xiii. 35; John xii. 13; where the name of the Lord denotes the name of Jehovah; not to mention other passages, as Luke i. 28; chap. ii. 15, 22, 23, 24, 29, 38, 39; chap. v. 17; Mark xii. 9, 11. Amongst other secret reasons for calling Jehovah Lord, were the following, viz. that if it had been declared at that time, that the Lord (our Lord Jesus Christ) was the Jehovah so often mentioned in the Old Testament, see n. 1736, it would not have been received, because it would not have been believed; and further, because the Lord was not made Jehovah as to His Human [principle] also, until He had in every respect united the Divine Essence to the Human, and the Human to the Divine, see n. 1725, 1729, 1733, 1745, 1815, 2156, 2751; the plenary union was effected after the last temptation, which was that of the cross, wherefore the disciples after the resurrection always called Him

Lord, John xx. 2, 13, 15, 18, 20, 25; chap. xxi. 7, 12, 15, 16, 17, 20; Mark xvi. 19, 20; and Thomas said, "My Lord and my God," John xx. 28; and inasmuch as the Lord was the Jehovah, who is so often mentioned in the Old Testament, therefore also He said to the disciples, "Ye call me Master and Lord, and ye say right, for I am," John xiii. 13, 14, 16; by which words is signified that He was Jehovah God; He is here called Lord as to good, and Master as to truth; that the Lord was Jehovah, is understood also by the words of the angel to the shepherds, "Unto you is born to day a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord," Luke ii. 11; where Christ denotes the Messiah, the Anointed, the King, and the Lord denotes Jehovah, the former having respect to truth, the latter to good. They who examine the Word without much attention, cannot know this, believing that our Saviour, like others, was called Lord merely from respect and veneration, when yet He had this appellation in consequence of His being Jehovah.

2923. "Bury thy dead"—that hereby is signified that thus they should emerge from night, and be raised into life, appears from the signification of burying, as denoting to rise again or to be raised into life, concerning which see n. 2916; and from the signification of dead, as denoting night as to the goodnesses and truths of faith, concerning which see n. 2908, 2912, 2917.

2924. "None of us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre"—that hereby is signified that all were ready to receive regeneration, appears from the signification of sepulchre, as denoting regeneration, see n. 2916; and from the signification of not withholding, as denoting a will to receive.

2925. "From burying thy dead"—that hereby is signified that they might emerge from night and be raised up, appears from the signification of burying, and of dead, as denoting to be raised up from night as to the goodnesses and truths of faith, concerning which see above, n. 2923, where the same words occur.

2926. Verses 7, 8. And Abraham arose, and bowed himself to the people of the land, the sons of Heth. And spake with them, saying, if it is with your soul to bury my dead from before me, hear me, and intercede for me with Ephron the son of Zohar. Abraham arose and bowed himself, signifies the joy of the Lord by reason of a kind reception: to the people of the land, the sons of Heth, signifies by those who were of the new spiritual

Church : and spake with them, saying, signifies thought and perception concerning them : if it is with your soul, signifies if from the affection of truth from the heart : to bury my dead from before me, signifies that they were willing to emerge from night and to rise again : hear me, signifies that they should obey : and intercede for me with Ephron the son of Zohar, signifies those with whom the truth and good of faith might be received.

2927. "Abraham arose and bowed himself"—that hereby is signified the joy of the Lord by reason of a kind reception, appears from the signification of arising, as implying somewhat of elevation, see n. 2401, 2785 ; by gladness and joy the mind is elevated, therefore it is here said he arose ; and from the representation of Abraham, as denoting the Lord, of which we have spoken frequently above ; and from the signification of bowing himself, as denoting to rejoice ; bowing is a gesture of the body proceeding both from humiliation and from joy ; that it here proceeds from joy, and this by reason of a kind reception, is evident both from what precedes and from what follows.

2928. "To the people of the land, the sons of Heth"—that hereby is signified by those who were of the spiritual Church, appears from the signification of people, as denoting those who are principled in truths, consequently the spiritual, see n. 1259, 1260 ; and from the signification of land, as denoting the Church, see n. 662, 1066, 1067, 1262, 1733, 1850, 2117, 2118 ; and from the signification of the sons of Heth, as denoting those who were of the new spiritual Church, see above, n. 2913. There is mention made of the people of the land in the Word throughout, where the subject treated of is concerning Israel and concerning Jerusalem, and thereby is signified, in an internal sense, the spiritual Church, or those who are of the spiritual Church, for by Israel and by Jerusalem is meant that Church : when the subject treated of is concerning Judah and concerning Zion, then the term nation is used, and by nation is signified the celestial Church, for by Judah and Zion is meant this Church : that the people of the land is spoken of, when the subject treated of is concerning Israel and concerning Jerusalem, appears from several passages of the Word, consequently where the spiritual Church is treated of, as in Ezekiel, "Say unto the people of the land thus saith the Lord Jehovih to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, to the ground of Israel, they shall eat their bread in sorrow, and shall drink their waters in vastation, to the end that the land thereof may be given to devastation, the inhabited cities shall be wasted, and the land shall be desolate," xii. 19, 20 ; where, in an internal sense, Jerusalem and the ground of Israel denote the spiritual Church ; bread and waters denote charity and faith, or goodness and truth ;

the land denotes the Church itself, which is said to be wasted (vastated) as to good, and desolate as to truth: again in the same prophet, "The house of Israel shall bury Gog and his multitude, that they may cleanse the land seven months, and all the people of the land shall bury," xxxix. 12, 13; Gog denotes external worship separate from internal, which is idolatrous, see n. 1151; the house of Israel denotes the spiritual Church as to good, the people of the land as to truth; the land denotes the Church itself; the reason why land denotes the Church is, because the land of Canaan represented the kingdom of the Lord, consequently the Church, for the Lord's kingdom in the earths is the Church: again, in the same prophet, "All the people of the land shall be for this oblation to the prince of Israel; and the prince shall offer in that day for himself and for all the people of the land, a bullock of sin: the people of the land shall bow themselves at the inner door of the gate, on the sabbaths and the new-moons: And the people of the land shall enter in on the stated feasts," xlv. 16, 22. xlv. 3, 9; speaking of the New Jerusalem, that is of the Lord's spiritual kingdom; they who are therein are called the people of the land, Prince is Truth Divine which is from the Lord. They are called sons of Heth, because sons signify truths, see n. 489, 491, 533, 1147, 2623; the reason why truths are predicated of the spiritual is, because the spiritual by truths are initiated into good, that is by faith into charity; and whereas they do good from the affection of truth, not knowing it to be good from any other ground but because they are so instructed; therefore their conscience also is founded on those truths of faith, see n. 1155, 1177, 2046, 2088, 2184, 2507, 2715, 2716, 2718.

• 2929. "Spake with them, saying"—that hereby is signified thought and perception concerning them, appears from the signification of speaking and saying, as denoting to think and perceive, see n. 1898, 1919, 2080, 2271, 2287, 2506, 2515, 2552, 2619.

• 2930. "If it is with your soul"—that hereby is signified, if from the affection of truth from the heart, appears from the signification of soul in an internal sense. In the Word throughout occur these expressions, from the heart and from the soul, or from the whole heart and from the whole soul, whereby is signified, from all the will and from all the understanding: That man has two faculties, viz. the will and the understanding, may be plain to every one, also that the will is a faculty separate from the understanding, for we may understand what is good and true, and yet will what is evil and false. Man from the beginning was so created, that the will and the understanding appertaining to him should make one, so that he should not think any thing but what he willed, nor will any thing but what he thought ; such is the state with the celestial, and such was the state in the celestial Church, which was called Man or Adam ; but with the spiritual, or in the spiritual Church, one faculty is separate from the other, viz. the intellectual from the will-faculty, and man, as to the former part, viz. the intellectual is reformed by the Lord, and therein is formed a new will and a new understanding, see n. 863, 875, 895, 897, 927, 928, 2023, 2044, 2256 ; the new will therein, which is from the Lord, is what is called heart, and the new understanding is what is called soul, and when it is said, from the whole heart and from the whole soul, thereby is signified from all the will and from all the understanding. This is what is signified by heart and soul in Moses, where it is written, "Thou shalt love Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength," Deut. vi. 5 ; and again, "Now O Israel, what doth Jehovah thy God require of thee, but to fear Jehovah thy God, to go in all His ways, and to love Him, and to serve Jehovah thy God, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul," Deut. x. 12 ; chap. xi. 13 ; and again, "This day Jehovah thy God commandeth thee to do these statutes and judgments, and thou shalt keep and do them, with thy whole heart, and with thy whole soul," Deut. xxvi. 16 ; so in the book of Kings, "David said to Solomon, Jehovah shall establish His Word which He spake over me, saying, if thy sons take heed unto their way, to walk before Me in truth with all their heart, and with all their soul, saying, there shall not be cut off for thee a man from the throne of Israel," 1 Kings ii. 4 ; so in Matthew, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God from thy whole heart, and in thy whole soul," xxii. 37 ; Mark xii. 29, 30. The like is predicated also concerning Jehovah or the Lord, because thence comes the affection of good which is of the will, and the affection of truth which is of the understanding, appertaining to the man of the Church, as in Samuel, "I will raise up to Myself a faithful priest, according to what is in My heart, and in My soul," 1 Sam. ii. 35 ; and in Jeremiah, "I will rejoice over them, to do them good, and I will plant them in this land in truth, with all My heart, and with all My soul," xxxii. 41. Soul also signifies the affection of truth in other passages of the Word throughout, as in Isaiah, "With my soul have I desired Thee in the night, also with my spirit in the midst of me have I sought Thee in the morning, because according to Thy judgments of the earth, the inhabitants of the world learn justice," xxvi. 9 ; where soul denotes the affection of truth, and spirit the affection of good : that judgments are predicated of truths, and justice of good, may be seen n. 2235 : again in the same prophet, "The fool speaketh foolishness, to make empty the hungry soul, and to cause to fail the (soul) thirsting for drink," xxxii. 6 ; where hungry soul denotes the desire of good, which the fool makes empty, and the soul thirsting for drink denotes the desire of truth, which the fool causeth to fail; so in Jeremiah, "Their soul shall become as a watered garden; and I will water the wearied soul, and will fill every sorrowful soul," xxxi. 12, 25; where soul denotes the affection of truth and of good: again, in the same prophét, "All her people groan, they seek bread, they have given their desirable things for food, to bring back the soul. The Comforter that bringeth back my soul, is far from me, my sons are become desolate; they have sought food for themselves, that they might bring back their soul," Lam. i. 11, 16, 19; where soul denotes the affection of good and of truth; food denotes wisdom and intelligence. It is said that soul signifies the affection of truth from the heart, because there are affections of truth which are not from the heart, as those which are grounded in self-love or the love of eminence, in worldly love or the love of gain, and in the love of meriting; from these various kinds of love, affections of truth derive existence, but they are not genuine affections, for they originate in the will of the flesh, and not in the heart; what is from the heart is from the Lord. Moreover the term soul, as used in the Word, signifies in an universal sense all life, see n. 1000, 1005, 1040, 1742; for soul in an universal sense is that by and from which another thing is and lives, thus the soul of the body is it's spirit, for by and from the spirit the body lives; but the soul of the spirit is it's life still more interior, by and from which it hath wisdom and intelligence.

2931. "To bury my dead from before me"—that hereby is signified that they were willing to emerge from night and to rise again, appears from the signification of burying, as denoting to rise again; and from the signification of dead, as denoting night in respect to the goodnesses and truths of faith, concerning which, see n. 2923, 2925; where the same words occur.

2932. "Hear me"—that hereby is signified that they should obey, appears from the signification of hearing, as denoting to obey, see n. 2542.

2933. "And intercede for me with Ephron the son of Zohar"—that hereby are signified those with whom the truth and good of faith could be received, may appear from this consideration, that the field, and the cave in the field, where Sarah was to be buried, was Ephron's, and inasmuch as by burial is signified regeneration, see n. 2916, it follows that by Ephron are signified those with whom the truth and good of faith could be received; the sons of Heth represent also the same, so far as they were of the city of Ephron, and so far they were the people thereof. By interceding is here signified to be prepared to receive.

2934. Verse 9. And let him give me the cave of Machpelah, which is his, which is in the end of his field, in full money let him give it me, in the midst of you, for the possession of a sepulchre. Let him give me the cave of Machpelah, which is his, signifies the obscure principle of faith which appertained to them; which is in the end of the field, signifies where there is little of the Church; in full money (silver), signifies redemption by truth; let him give it to me in the midst of you for a possession of a sepulchre, signifies possession thus by regeneration.

2935. "Let him give me the cave of Machpelah"—that hereby is signified the obscure principle of faith, appears from the signification of cave, as denoting what is obscure, see n. 2463; and from the signification of Machpelah, as denoting faith which is in an obscure principle. The reason why cave signifies what is obscure, is, because it is a dark place; when it is said the cave of a mountain, it then denotes an obscure principle of good, but when it is said the cave of a field, it then denotes an obscure principle of truth; inasmuch as it is here said the cave of Machpelah, and Machpelah was where there was a field, in the end of which was a cave, it denotes the obscure principle of truth, or, what is the same thing, the obscure principle of faith, and hence also it is evident, that Machpelah denotes faith which is in obscurity. They who are regenerated, and become spiritual, are for the most part in an obscure principle as to truth; good indeed flows-in with them from the Lord, but truth not so, wherefore between the Lord and good in man there is given a parallelism and correspondence, but not between the Lord and truth, see n. 1832: the chief reason whereof is, because they do not know what good is, and although they know, yet they do not believe from the heart, and so long as good is in an obscure principle with them, so long also is truth, for all truth is from good; but that the Lord is essential good, and that every thing appertaining to love to Him, and to charity towards our neighbour, is good, and that every thing which asserts and confirms this is truth, they know but very obscurely; yea, they even entertain doubts herein, and admit reasonings against it; and so long as they are in such a state, it is impossible for the light of truth from the Lord to flow-in; yea, they think of the Lord as of another man, and not as of God, and they think of love to Him, from a principle of some kind of worldly love; they scarce know what the genuine affection of charity towards their neighbour is, yea, or what is meant by charity, and what by neighbour, when yet these things are essentials; hence it is evident in what an obscure principle the spiritual dwell; and still more so before regeneration, which is the state here treated of.

the signification of field, as denoting the Church, and also doctrine appertaining to the Church, see n. 368; that end or extremity denotes what is little, may appear from the description of land, of ground, and of fields in the Word; their middle signifies much, but their extreme signifies little; this extreme is also called circuit; the reason is, because about the extreme the representative expires; thus in the present case, the end of the field signifies little of the Church.

2937. "In full money (silver)"—that hereby is signified redemption by truth, appears from the signification of money (silver), as denoting truth, see n. 1551; and from the signification of the expression let him give me in money, or for money (silver), as denoting to buy, and in a spiritual sense, to redeem: that the spiritual are said to be bought with money (silver), may be seen, n. 2048, that is, redeemed by truth; the reason is, because by the truth of faith they are regenerated, viz. are introduced to good; for the spiritual man has no perception of good, like the celestial man, but it is truth, by which he knows, and from which he afterwards acknowledges, that it is good, and when he acknowledges and believes, then it becomes good to him, and he is affected with it as good, and it is of a quality agreeable to the quality of the truth appertaining to him; hence it is that the spiritual are said to be redeemed by truth: still however the quality of good is not born and produced from truth, but from the influx of good into truth of such a particular quality.

2938. "Let him give it me in the midst of you for the possession of a sepulchre"—that hereby is signified possession thus by regeneration, may appear without explication, for that sepulchre denotes regeneration, was shewn above, n. 2916.

2940. "Ephron was sitting in the midst of the sons of Heth"—that hereby are signified those with whom the good and truth of faith could primarily be received, appears from the representation of Ephron, and also from the signification of the sons of Heth, as denoting those with whom the good and truth of faith could be received, and with whom a new Church was established, see n. 2913, 2933; and from the signification of midst or in the midst, as denoting what is primary, or principal, and also inmost, see n. 1074. That midst in an internal sense signifies what is primary or principal, and also inmost, arises from representatives in another life. When any thing good is represented by spiritual ideas, then the best is presented in the midst, and the decreases of good are presented by degrees from the midst, and lastly at the circumference those things which are not good; and hence it is, that in the midst there is both what is primary or principal, and also what is inmost; the ideas of thought are thus also represented, and so likewise are affections, and all changes of state, in such a sort, that things good or evil vary according to their situation towards the midst. This originates in the form of things spiritual and celestial, which is of such a nature.

2942. "In the ears of the sons of Heth"—that hereby is signified obedience, appears from the signification of ear, as denoting obedience, see n. 2542.

pears from the historical parts of the Word, and also from Zechariah, "These are the words which he shall do; speak ye truth every man to his companion, judge in your gates truth and the judgment of peace," viii. 16. And in Amos, "Hate evil and love good, and establish judgment in the gate," v. 15. That gate also signifies the passage to the rational mind, and that the rational mind is compared to a city, may be seen, n. 2851.

2944. Verse 11. Nay, my Lord, hear me, the field give I thee, and the cave which is therein give I thee, to the eyes of the sons of my people give I it thee, bury thy dead. Nay, my Lord, hear me, signifies that first state spoken of above: the field give I thee, and the cave which is therein give I thee, signifies preparation of (or from) themselves as to the things appertaining to the Church and to faith; to the eyes of the sons of my people give I it thee, signifies according to the understanding of all: bury thy dead, signifies that they might emerge from night and be raised up again.

2945. "Nay, my Lord, hear me"—that hereby is signified that first state spoken of above, n. 2935, 2936, viz. that they were in an obscure principle of faith, appears from the denial, in that they were not willing to give ear to Abraham, that he should give full money (silver), verse 9, that is, in an internal sense, that they should be redeemed of the Lord, but that they were willing to prepare themselves as to the things appertaining to the Church and to faith, that is, to reform themselves: these words, "nay, my Lord, hear me," involve a state, viz. a state of their thought concerning redemption and reformation, for there immediately follows a proposal.

2946. "The field give I thee, and the cave which is therein give I thee"—that hereby is signified preparation of (or from) themselves as to the things appertaining to the Church and to faith, appears from the signification of field, as denoting the Church, see n. 368, 2936; and from the signification of the cave which was therein, viz. in the field, as denoting the obscure principle of faith, see above, n. 2935; and from the signification of giving the field and giving the cave, or, what is the same thing, of not receiving money (silver) from Abraham, as denoting not to be willing to be redeemed of the Lord, but of themselves, consequently to prepare themselves as to those things. Such is the first state of all who are reformed and become spiritual, viz. that they do not believe they are reformed of the Lord, but of themselves, that is, that every thing appertaining to the will of good and the thought of truth is from themselves; in this state also they are suffered of the Lord to remain for a time, because otherwise they could not be reformed; for if it should be told them, before they are made regenerate, that they could not do any thing good of themselves, nor of themselves think any thing true, they would, in such case, either fall into this error, that they ought to wait for an influx into the will, and into the thought, and attempt nothing whilst such influx was wanting; or into this error, that in case goodness and truth were derived from any other source but from themselves, nothing could be imputed to them for righteousness; or into this error, that thus they would be like mere machines, without any power of self-determination; or into other errors of a like nature; therefore it is granted them at such time to think that good and truth are from themselves; but after that they are regenerated, then by degrees it is insinuated into them to know, that the case is altogether otherwise, and that all good and truth is solely from the Lord; and further, when they are more perfected, it is insinuated to know that whatever does not come from the Lord is evil and false; to the regenerate it is given, if not in the life of the body, yet in another life, not only to know, but also to perceive this, for all the angels are in a perception that it is so: see what was said above on this subject, viz. that all good and truth is from the Lord, n. 1614, 2016; that all intelligence and wisdom is from the Lord, n. 109, 112, 121, 124; that man of himself can do nothing good, and think nothing true, n. 874, 875, 876; that still every one ought to do good as from himself, or his own proper power, and not to hang down his hands in remissness, n. 1712; that in case man compels himself to resist evil and to do good, as from himself, he receives from the Lord a celestial proprium, n. 1937, 1947.

2947. "To the eyes of the sons of my people give I it thee"—that hereby is signified as to the understanding of all, appears from the signification of eyes, as denoting understanding, see n. 2701; and from the signification of the sons of my people, as denoting all; the sons of the people are those who are first initiated into truths, for people are those who are in truths, see n. 1259, 1260; therefore it is not said to the eyes of my people, but to the eyes of the sons of my people.

2949. Verses 12, 13. And Abraham bowed himself before the people of the land. And he spake to Ephron in the ears of the people of the land, saying nevertheless, if thou, it please thee, hear me, I will give money (silver) for the field, receive from me, and I will bury my dead there. Abraham bowed himself before the people of the land, signifies the Lord's joy on account of the goodwill of those who were of the new spiritual Church: and spake to Ephron, signifies influx with those who were capable of receiving it: in the ears of the people of the land, signifies even to obedience as to the truths of the Church: nevertheless if thou, it please thee, hear me, signifies interior influx: I will give money (silver) for the land, receive from me, signifies redemption as to the truths of the Church which are from the Lord: and I will bury my dead, signifies that thus they should emerge from night and be made alive.

2950. "Abraham bowed himself before the people of the land"—that hereby is signified the Lord's joy on account of the goodwill of those who were of the new spiritual Church, appears from the signification of bowing as denoting to rejoice, see n. 2927; and from the representation of Abraham as denoting the Lord, according to what has been frequently shewn above; and from the signification of the people of the land, as denoting those who are of the spiritual Church, see above, n. 2928, where the same words occur; but it is there said, "he bowed himself to the people of the land the sons of Heth," verse 7; the reason why they are there called also the sons of Heth is, because in that verse are signified those of the Church who are first initiated, as is also signified by sons of the people, n. 2947; but in the present verse are signified those who are in progression, wherefore they are called simply the people of the land, without the addition of the sons of Heth; and in the verse above is signified joy by reason of a kind reception, but in the present verse, by reason of goodwill; reception is first, as relating to the understanding, goodwill follows next, as relating to the will, see n. 2954.

2951. "And he spake to Ephron"—that hereby is signified an influx with those who were capable of receiving it, appears from the signification of speaking, as denoting to think, see n. 2271, 2287; and also denoting to will, see n. 2626; consequently to flow in, because influx is thereby effected; and from the signification of Ephron, as denoting those who were capable of receiving the truth and good of faith, see n. 2933.

2952. "In the ears of the people of the land"—that hereby is signified even to obedience as to the truths of the Church, appears from the signification of ear, as denoting obedience, see n. 2542, 2942; and from the signification of the people of the land, as denoting those who are of the spiritual Church, and also denoting the truths of that Church, see n. 1259, 1260, 2928.

2953. "Nevertheless if thou, it please thee, hear me"—that hereby is signified interior influx, may appear from the series of the discourse; that by Abraham's speaking to Ephron was signified influx, was said above, n. 2951; here the discourse is continued, and the attention is excited by its being said, "Nevertheless if thou, it please thee, hear me," wherefore interior influx is signified. The internal sense is such, that the expressions and words are almost as nothing, whilst the sense thereof flowing from the series of things treated of presents an idea, and this is a spiritual idea before the angels, to which idea the external or literal sense serves as the object from which it is derived; for there are ideas of man's thought which are objects of spiritual thoughts with the angels, and principally those ideas of thought which are derived from the Word, by reason that in the Word all things are representative, and all and singular the expressions are significative, and it is observed instantly that they are from the Word, because things spiritual and celestial have in the Word a most orderly arrangement and connection, and both in the one and the other there is an holy principle derived from the inmost sense which treats solely of the Lord and of His kingdom.

2955. "I will bury my dead"—that hereby is signified they should emerge from night and be made alive, appears from the signification of burying, and of dead, spoken of above, n. 2917, 2923, 2925, 2931, 2948; they are here said to be made alive, because they are in a progress of receiving faith; for by virtue of faith, that is, by virtue of the good thereof, they receive life, which cannot be received from any other source. A further reason why by the expression, "I will bury my dead," is signified emersion from spiritual night, and being made alive, is, because when a former Church is dead, a new one is raised up by the Lord in the place thereof, thus in the place of death is given life, and in the place of night arises morning; a further reason is, because with every particular person who is reformed and becomes spiritual, his dead principle is as it were buried, and a new principle, which is alive, rises up, consequently in the place of night, or in the place of darkness and cold, there arises up with him morning with it's light and it's heat; hence it is that with the angels, who are in the life of the Lord, instead of the idea which man has concerning burial of the dead, there is an idea of resurrection and of new life. This also is the real case, for there always exists some Church on the earth, and when an old one expires and it becomes night, then a new one rises up elsewhere, and it becomes morning.

2956. Verses 14, 15. And Ephron answered Abraham, saying unto him, my Lord hear me, the land of four hundred shekels of silver between me and thee, what is this? and bury thy dead. Ephron answered Abraham, saying unto him, signifies a state of reception; My Lord, hear me, signifies the first state of reception; the land of four hundred shekels of silver, signifies the price of redemption by truth; between me and thee, what is this, signifies that he assented, but still willed from self; and bury thy dead, signifies here, as above, emersion from night, and consequent resurrection. *

2957. "Ephron answered Abraham, saying unto him"—that hereby is signified a state of reception, appears from the signification of answering when assent is given, as denoting to receive, see above n. 2941; that it is a state of reception which is here signified by answering and saying, is evident from what follows.

2958. "My Lord, hear me"—that hereby is signified the first state of reception, appears also from what follows, and likewise from what was said above, n. 2945, where the same words occur, but there containing negation, whereas here they imply affirmation as yet in doubt, for it is presently said, "between me and thee, what is this?" by which words is signified that he assented, but still willed from self; moreover this expression, "My Lord, hear me," is only a form used to excite the reflection of another, but still it implies a state of proposal.

why four hundred shekels signify the price of redemption, is, because four hundred signify vastation, and shekel signifies price; what is meant by vastation, may be seen n. 2455, 2682, 2694, 2699, 2701, 2704, viz. that it is twofold, one kind of vastation being when the Church altogether perishes, that is, when there is no longer any charity or faith; and the other being, when they who are of the Church are reduced to a state of ignorance, and also of temptation, to the intent that the evils and false principles, which appertain to them, may be separated, and as it were dispersed; they who emerge from this latter kind of vastation, are especially called the redeemed, for then they are instructed in the goodnesses and truths of faith, and are reformed and regenerated of the Lord; concerning these see the above-cited passages: inasmuch now as four hundred, when predicated of time, as four hundred years, signify the duration and state of vastation, so, when predicated of shekels, they signify the price of redemption, and when mention is made of silver at the same time, they signify the price of redemption by truth. That four hundred years signify a duration and state of vastation, may also appear from what was said to Abraham: "Jehovah said to Abraham, knowing know, that thy seed shall be strange in a land not their's, and shall serve them, and they shall afflict them four hundred years, Gen. xv. 13; where it may seem that by four hundred years is meant the continuance of the sons of Israel in Egypt; but that it is not their continuance in Egypt which is signified, but somewhat which can be discovered only from the internal sense, may appear evident from this consideration, that the continuance of the sons of Israel in Egypt was but half of that time, as is clear from the nativities of Jacob as recorded by Moses; for from Jacob descended Levi, from Levi Kehath, from Kehath Amram, and from Amram Aaron and Moses, Exod. vi. 16 to 20; Levi and his son Kehath came with Jacob into Egypt, Gen. xli. 11; from the next generation thence derived Moses was born, and Moses was eighty years old when he spake to Pharaoh, Exod. vii. 7; hence it may appear that from the coming of Jacob into Egypt, to the departure of his sons out of Egypt, were about 215 years: it may still further appear, that by four hundred, when mentioned in the Word, somewhat else is meant besides what is expressed by the number in an historical sense, from it's being said, "That the abode of the sons of Israel, whilst they dwelt in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years; and it came to pass at the end of the four hundred and thirty years, it came to pass on this same day all the armies of Jehovah went forth from the land of Egypt, Exod. xii. 40, 41; when yet the continuance of the sons of Israel in Egypt was only half these years, but there were 430 years from Abraham's entrance into Egypt, wherefore it was thus expressed by reason of the internal sense which lies concealed in those words; in the internal sense by the sojourning of the sons of Jacob in Egypt is represented and signified the vastation of the Church, the state and duration whereof is described by the number thirty and four hundred years, by thirty the state of vastation of the sons of Jacob, in that there was no vastation, because they were of such a nature that they could not be reformed by any state of vastation; concerning the signification of the number thirty, see n. 2276; and by four hundred years the common state of vastation of those who were of the Church: they therefore, who go forth from that vastation, are those who are said to be redeemed, as appears also from the words spoken to Moses, "Therefore say unto the sons of Israel, I am Jehovah, and I will bring you forth from under the burdens of Egypt, and will deliver you from their slavery and will redeem you with a stretched-out arm, and with great judgments," Exod. vi. 6; and in another place, "Jehovah brought you forth by a strong hand, and redeemed thee from the house of servants, out of the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt," Deut. vii. 8: and in another place, "Remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, but Jehovah thy God redeemed thee," Deut. xv. 15; chap. xxiv. 18: so in Samuel, "Thy people whom thou hast redeemed to thee out of Egypt," 2 Sam. vii. 23: inasmuch as they who emerge out of a state of vastation are said to be redeemed, therefore by four hundred shekels is signified the price of redemption. That a shekel signifies price or estimation, appears from the following passages in the Word, "All thy estimation shall be in the shekel of holiness," Levit. xxvii. 25; and in another place, "When a soul hath committed trespass, and hath sinned in error concerning the holy things of Jehovah, he shall bring his guilt to Jehovah, an entire ram from the flock, in thy estimation, silver of shekels, in the shekels of holiness," Levit. v. 15; hence it is evident that by shekel is signified price or estimation; it is called the shekel of holiness because price or estimation has respect to truth and good from the Lord, truth and good from the Lord being the essential holy principle in the Church; hence it is called the shekel of holiness, in other parts in the Word also, as in Exod. xxx. 24; Levit. xxvii. 3; Numb. iii. 47, 50; chap. vii. 13, 19, 25, 31, 37, 43, 49, 55, 61, 67, 73; chap. xviii. 16. That shekel is the price of what is holy, is very evident from Ezechiel, in speaking of the holy land and of the holy city, where it is said of the shekel, "The shekel shall be twenty gerahs; twenty shekels, five and twenty shekels, fifteen shekels, shall be your maneh (pound)," xlv. 12; that by shekel, and by pound, and by numbers, are here signified holy things, that is, goodness and truth, may be evident to any one, for the holy land, and the holy city therein or the New Jerusalem, here treated of, is nothing else but the kingdom of the Lord, wherein there is neither shekel nor gerah, nor pound nor numbering thereby, but where the number itself, from it's signification in an internal sense, determines the estimation or price of good and truth. The same is plain from Moses, where it is said, "That a man should give the expiation of his soul, that there might be no plague, half a shekel in the shekel of holiness, twenty gerahs a shekel, and that half a shekel should be a therumah (offering up) to Jehovah," Exod. xxx. 12, 13; where ten gerahs which are half a shekel, are remains which are from the Lord; remains are goodnesses and truths stored up in man, and that these are signified by ten, may be seen, n. 576, 1738, 1906, 2284; that remains are goodnesses and truths stored up in man, may be seen n. 1906, 2284; wherefore they are also called therumah, or an offering up to Jehovah, and it is said, that by them shall be the expiation of the soul; the reason why it is sometimes said, that the shekel was twenty gerahs, as in the passage above cited, and also in Levit. xxvii. 25; Numb. iii. 47; chap. xvii. 16; and in other places, is, because the shekel twenty gerahs signifies the estimation of the good of remains; that twenty is the good of remains, may be seen, n. 2280; therefore also the shekel was a weight, according to which the price both of gold and silver was estimated, Gen. xxiv. 22; Exod. xxxviii. 24; Ezech. iv. 10; chap. xlv. 12; the price of gold, because gold signifies good, see n. 113, 1551, 1552; and of silver, because silver signifies truth, see n. 1551, 2048; hence then it is evident, that by the land of four hundred shekels of silver is signified the price of redemption by truth; it is called land (or earth) for this reason, because the subject treated of is concerning the spiritual Church, which is reformed and regenerated by truth from the Lord, see n. 2954; that by land (earth) is signified the Church, may be seen, n. 662, 1066, 1067, 1262, 1733, 1850, 2117, 2118.

2960. "Between me and thee, what is this?"—that hereby is signified that he assented, but still willed from self, viz. to be prepared or reformed, may appear from the sense of the letter applied to the internal sense, which treats of reformation; it was said above by Ephron, "I give the field unto thee, and the cave which is therein, I give it unto thee," verse 11, by which words was signified that they were willing to prepare themselves as to the things appertaining to the Church and to faith, that is to reform themselves; that the first state of those who are reformed is such, may be seen, n. 2946; but when they are further advanced in the knowledges of truth, or of faith, then is their second state, which is this, that they assent indeed, but still will from self, and this is the state treated of in this verse; a third state is described presently, that they believe they are reformed by the Lord; the reason why they are such in the beginning of reformation, was shewn above, n. 2946; but the reason why, when they advance in the knowledges of truth or of faith, they acknowledge indeed that they are reformed by the Lord, but still will from self, is, because the clouds of ignorance are successively dissipated, and because the confirmations of truth are in time corroborated, and because, by the tincturings of the knowledges of truth, good is perfected; the essential good, wherein truth is implanted, causes them not only to acknowledge, but also to believe, that reformation is from the Lord: this is the third state, which is followed by a fourth state, viz. that they perceive it to be from the Lord; but there are few who arrive at this state in the life of the body, it being an angelic state, nevertheless they who are regenerate come into this state in another life. Hence it is evident, that, in the internal sense, the man of the spiritual Church is here described, as to the quality of his state when it is yet immature, and as to its quality when it begins to be mature, and lastly when it is become mature.

2964. "And Abraham weighed out to Ephron the silver,"—that hereby is signified redemption, appears from the signification of weighing out silver, as denoting to buy, and in a spiritual sense to redeem; silver here is the same with four hundred shekels, and that four hundred shekels signify the price of redemption, was shewn above, n. 2959.

2965. "Which he spake in the ears of the sons of Heth"—that hereby is signified according to the faculty of those who were of the new Church, appears from the signification of speaking in the ears, and from the representation of the sons of Heth; to speak in an internal sense signifies both to perceive and to will; that it signifies to perceive, may be seen, n. 2619; that it signifies to will, may be seen, n. 2626; but ears signify obedience, see n. 2542; hence it is, that to speak in the ears denotes according to the faculty, for the faculty is of reception, thus of obedience to which any one perceives and wills; also from the signification of the sons of Heth, as denoting those who were of the new spiritual Church, see n. 2913. That the man of the Church is reformed, that is, that truth which is of faith is implanted in him, and conjoined with good which is of charity, will be shewn below in this verse, n. 2967.

2966. "Four hundred shekels of silver"—that hereby is signified the price of redemption, was shewn above, n. 2959; but what the price of redemption is shall now be shewn; redemption is of the Lord alone, consequently also the price of redemption; and this latter is predicated also of reception with man, with whom the price of redemption is of value in proportion to the degree of reception: the price of redemption is the Lord's merit and righteousness by most grievous temptations, whereby He united the Human essence to the Divine, and the Divine to the Human, and this of His own proper power, and by that union saved mankind, and especially those who are of the spiritual Church: that the Lord was made righteousness by most grievous temptations, may be seen, n. 1725, 1729, 1733, 1737, 1813, 2083; and this of His own power, see n. 1616, 1921, 2025, 2026, 2083, 2500, 2523, 2632: and that by this union He saved mankind, and especially those who are of the spiritual Church, see n. 2661, 2716; these are the things which are signified by the price of redemption: that the price of redemption is predicated of reception with man, with whom it is of value in proportion to the degree of reception, may appear from this consideration, that it is the Lord's Divine [principle] which with man constitutes the Church, for nothing is properly called the Church, but what is properly the Lord's; it is the good of love and charity, and the truth of faith, which constitute what is called the Church, and that all good is from the Lord, and that all truth is from the Lord, is generally known, the good and truth which is from man not being good and truth; hence it is evident, that the price of redemption with man is of value in proportion to the degree of reception: inasmuch as the Lord's redemption was so little estimated amongst the Jews, as to be scarce of any amount, therefore it is said in Zechariah, "I said unto them, if it be good in your eyes, give my hire, and if not, let it alone, and they weighed out my hire, thirty pieces of silver, and Jehovah said unto me, cast it to the potter, the greatness of the price at which I was estimated by them," xi. 12, 13; and in Matthew, "They took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, whom they had bought of the sons of Israel, and gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord commanded me," xxvii. 10; that thirty denotes so little as scarce to be of any amount, may be seen, n. 2276; thus it denotes that the Jews set no value on the Lord's merit and redemption: but with such as believe all good and all truth to be from the Lord, the price of redemption is signified by forty, and in a superior degree by four hundred.

2967. "Passing to the merchant"—that hereby is signified in application to their state, may appear from the signification of merchant, and thence of what passes to the merchant: merchant in the Word signifies those who have the knowledges of good and of truth, and merchandise signifies those knowledges themselves; hence silver passing to the merchant signifies truth as much as can be received, or, what is the same thing, in application to every one's state and faculty; that the addition of this expression, "passing to the merchant," involves some arcanum, may appear obvious to any one: concerning the signification of merchant and merchandise we shall speak presently. With respect to the real thing here implied, the case is this; all who are reformed and regenerated, are gifted with charity and faith from the Lord, but every one according to his faculty and his state; for the evils and false principles, with which man has tainted himself from infancy, are the hindrances which prevent one person from receiving the like gift as another; those evils and false principles must needs be vastated, before the man can be regenerated; in proportion to the residue of celestial and spiritual life after vastation, in the same proportion this residue is capable of being illustrated with truth and enriched with good; the remains, which are goodnesses and truths from the Lord stored up with man, are what in this case receive life; goodnesses and truths are acquired from infancy even to the time of reformation, with one person more, with another fewer, and are reserved in his internal man; nor can they be produced, or brought forth, until the external man is reduced to correspondence, which is effected chiefly by temptations, and by several kinds of vastation; for until corporeal things, which are contrary thereto, as are the things of self-love and the love of the world, are brought into a quiescent state, celestial and spiritual things appertaining to the affection of goodness and truth cannot flow-in; this is the reason why every one is reformed in the way of application to his state and faculty, as the Lord also teaches in the parable concerning the man who "went into a far country, and called his own servants; and delivered to them his goods, and to one he gave five talents, to another two, and to a third one, to each according to his proper faculty: then he who received five talents, traded with them and gained other five talents; in like manner also he who received two, he also gained other two," Matt. xxv. 14, 15, 16, 17: and also in the parable concerning the ten servants, to whom were given ten pounds, that they might trade with them, Luke xix. 12, 13; that merchant signifies those who have the knowledges of good and of truth, and that merchandise signifies those knowledges themselves, appears from the above passages in Matthew and Luke, and also from the following in Ezechiel, "Say unto Tyre, O thou that inhabitest on the entrances of the sea, that tradedst with the people at many isles! Tarshish was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of all wealth; in silver, in iron, in tin, and in lead, they gave thy markets, Javan, Tubal, and Meshech, these were thy traders, in the soul of man, and vessels of brass they gave thy commerce. The sons of Dedan were thy traders; many isles were the merchandise of thy hand. Syria was thy merchant in the multitude of thy works. Judah and the land of Israel, these were thy traders in wheat, minith, and pannag, and honey, and oil, and balm, they gave thy commerce. Damascus was thy merchant in the multitude of thy works, by reason of the multitude of all wealth, in the wine of Heshbon, and wool of Zahar. Dan also and Javan gave spinning yarn in thy markets. Dedan was thy trader in garments of liberty for the chariot. The Arabian and all the princes of Kedar, these were the merchants of thy hand in lambs, in rams, and he-goats, in these were thy merchants. The traders of Scheba and Ramah; these were thy traders in the chief of every spice. Haran and Canneh, and Eden, the traders of Scheba; Ashur and Kilmad thy traders. These were thy traders in perfections," xxvii. 3, 12, 13, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23; these words were spoken of Tyre; that by Tyre are signified the knowledges of good and of truth, may be seen n. 1201, and is evident from all the particular expressions here used; the tradings and merchandises, and also the kinds of wares here spoken of, have a like signification, and therefore Tyre is here described as inhabiting on the entrances of the sea; that waters denote knowledges, and that sea denotes the gathering together thereof, see n. 28; she is also described as trading with the people of many isles, that is, even with those who are more remotely principled in worship; that isles denote more remote kinds of worship, see n. 1158; what is signified by Tarshish, may be seen, n. 1156; the silver, iron, tin, and lead, which are thence, denote truths in their order even to the last which are sensual; what is signified by silver, may be seen, n. 1551, 2048; what by iron, n. 425, 426; what by Javan, Tubal, and Méshech, n. 1151, 1152, 1153, 1155; the soul of man and the vessels of brass, which come thence, are those things which belong to the natural life; that soul denotes all life which is from the Lord, see n. 1000, 1040, 1436, 1742; that vessels of brass are natural goodnesses which receive that life, see n. 425, 1551; what is signified by Dedan, may be seen, n. 1172; what by Syria, n. 1232, 1234; by Judah and the land of Israel being traders in wheat, minith, pannag, honey, oil, balm, are signified celestial and spiritual things from the Word; the rest of the nations and their merchandises, which are mentioned, denote genera and species of truth and good, consequently knowledges appertaining to those who are signified by Tyre: that knowledges are denoted, from which come wisdom and intelligence, appears manifest from the same prophet in these words, “Son of Man, say to the prince of Tyre, in thy wisdom, and in thine intelligence, thou hast made to thyself wealth, and hast made gold and silver in thy treasures: in the multitude of thy wisdom, in thy trading, thou hast multiplied thy wealth, and thy heart was elated in thy wealth, therefore behold I bring upon thee strangers, the violent of the nations,” xxviii. 2, 4, 5, 6, 7; where it is very evident, that the merchandise with which they traded, were the knowledges of good and of truth, for from this and from no other source come wisdom and intelligence, wherefore it is said, in thy wisdom and in thine intelligence hast thou made to thyself wealth, and hast made gold and silver in thy treasures; but when knowledges are sought and possessed for the sake of self, with a view to eminence, and to the gain of either reputation or wealth, they have then no life, and they who possess them are altogether deprived of them, in the life of the body by embracing false principles instead of truths, and evils instead of goodnesses, and in another life by a total deprivation of all true principles; hence it is that it is said, because thy heart is elated in thy wealth, therefore behold I bring upon thee strangers, that is, false principles, and the violent of the nations, that is, evils: so also in another place in the same prophet, “Tyre is as it were cut out of the midst of the sea, in the going forth of thy markets from the seas, thou hast satiated many people, in the multitude of thy wealth and of thy commerce, thou hast enriched the kings of the earth, now thou art broken from the seas, in the depths of waters, thy commerce and all thy congregation have fallen in the midst thereof; the merchants in the people hiss over thee,” xxvii. 32, 33, 34, 36; and in Isaiah, “The prophetic (denunciation) concerning Tyre; the inhabitants of the isle are silent, the merchants of Zidon passing the sea have filled thee; and in the waters of Schihor, the harvest of the river, is the revenue thereof, and thou wast the merchandise of the nations: who hath consulted this upon Tyre that crowneth herself, whose merchants are princes," xxiii. 2, 3, 8; speaking of the vastation of Tyre. Merchandise and wares are in like manner predicated of Babylon, which are the knowledges of good adulterated, and the knowledges of truth falsified, as in the Apocalypse, "Babylon hath made all nations drink of the wine of the fury of her whoredom, and the kings of the earth have committed whoredom with her; and the merchants of the earth were enriched by reason of the qualities of her delights; the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her, that no one buyeth any more their wares; the wares of gold, and of silver, and of precious stones, and of pearl, and of fine linen, and of purple, and of silk, and of scarlet, &c. The merchants of these things, who are enriched by her, shall stand afar off by reason of the fear of her torment, weeping and mourning," Apoc. xviii. 3, 11, 15; that Babylon denotes worship, the externals of which appear holy, whilst the internals are profane, may be seen, n. 1182, 1283, 1295, 1304, 1306, 1326; hence it is evident what is signified by merchandise and it's wares. That a merchant is one, who procures for himself the knowledges of truth and of good, and thence derives intelligence and wisdom, is evident from the Lord's words in Matthew, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant-man, seeking beautiful pearls, who, when he had found one precious pearl, went and sold all that he had, and bought it," xiii. 45, 46; the beautiful pearl is charity or the good of faith. That all knowledges of good and of truth are from the Lord, appears from these words in Isaiah, "Thus saith Jehovah, the labour of Egypt, and the merchandise of Cush and the Sabæans, men of measure, shall pass over thee, and shall be thine, they shall go after thee, they shall pass in bonds, and shall bow themselves down to thee, they shall pray to thee; surely God is in thee, and there is no God besides," xlv. 14; speaking of the Lord's Divine Human [principle]. Hence then it may appear what is meant by trading, or buying and selling, viz. that it is to procure knowledges of good and of truth, and thereby to procure essential good itself; that this essential good is from the Lord alone, appears from the following passage in the same prophet, "Ho every one that thirsteth, go to the waters, and he that hath no silver, go, buy, and eat; and go, buy without silver, and without price, wine and milk," lv. 1, 2; where to buy is to procure; wine denotes spiritual truth, see n. 1071, 1798; milk denotes spiritual good, see n. 2184; any one may see, that by going to the waters is not here meant going to the waters; nor by buying, buying; nor by silver, silver; nor by wine and milk, wine and milk; but that each expression denotes somewhat corresponding therewith in the internal sense; for the Word is Divine, and to all and singular expressions therein, which are taken from the natural world, and from the things of sense, there correspond spiritual and celestial Divine Things, this and no other being the true ground of the Divine inspiration of the Word.

2968. Verses 17, 18: And the field of Ephron, which is in Machpelah, which is before Mamre, the field and the cave which was in it, and every tree which was in the field, which was in all the border thereof round about, was made sure to Abraham for an acquisition to the eyes of the sons of Heth, in (the eyes) of all that entered the gate of his city. The field of Ephron, signifies what appertained to the Church: which is in Machpelah, which is before Mamre, signifies the quality and quantity (quale et quantum) of regeneration: the field and the cave which was in it, signifies as to the good and truth of faith: and every tree which was in the field, signifies the interior knowledges of the Church: which was in all the border thereof round about, signifies the exterior knowledges: was made sure to Abraham for an acquisition, signifies that they were acknowledged to be of the Lord alone: to the eyes of the sons of Heth, signifies according to their understanding: in (the eyes) of all that entered the gate of his city, signifies as to all doctrinals.

2969. "The field of Ephron"—that hereby is signified what appertained to the Church, appears from the signification of field, as denoting the Church, and also doctrine, see n. 368, 2936; and from the signification of Ephron, as denoting those with whom the good and truth of faith, which are the constituents of the Church, might be received, see n. 2933; hence the field of Ephron signifies what appertained to the Church.

2970. "Which is in Machpelah which is before Mamre"—that hereby is signified the quality and quantity (quale et quantum) of regeneration, appears from the signification of Machpelah, as denoting regeneration by truth which is of faith; and from the signification of Mamre as denoting it's quality and quantity, (quale et quantum): by Machpelah, when cave is adjoined to it, or it is said the cave of Machpelah, is signified faith which is in an obscure principle, see n. 2935; but by Machpelah when it is mentioned without cave, and when it follows that a field and a cave were there, is meant regeneration, for by field and cave is signified the good and truth of faith, whereby regeneration is effected: moreover Machpelah was a parcel of ground in which also was a sepulchre, by which is signified regeneration, see n. 2916. But Mamre, as being Hebron, as it is said, verse 19, and in Hebron, as it is said, Gen. xiii. 18, signifies nothing else but quality and quantity (quale et quantum), in the present case (the quality and quantity) of regeneration when it is adjoined to Machpelah, and of the Church when it is adjoined to Hebron, and also of perception, when it is adjoined to oak-groves, as n. 1616; thus Mamre is only the determination of the state of a thing, for it was a place where Abraham dwelt, Gen. xiii: 18, and where Isaac dwelt, and whither Jacob came, Gen. xxxv. 27.

2971. "The field and the cave which was in it"—that hereby is signified as to the good and truth of faith, appears from the signification of field, as denoting the Church, and also essential good itself which is of the Church; the celestial principle, or good, which is of love to the Lord, and of charity towards our neighbour, is compared to ground, and also to a field; it is also called ground and field, because the celestial principle, or good, is what receives the truths of faith, which truths are compared to seeds, and are also called seeds; and from the signification of cave, as denoting the truth of faith which is in an obscure principle, see n. 2935; it is said to be in an obscure principle, because with the spiritual, see n. 1043, 2708, 2715.

2972. "And every tree which was in the field"—that hereby are signified the interior knowledges of the Church, appears from the signification of tree, as denoting perceptions when the subject treated of is concerning the celestial Church, see n. 105, 2163; but denoting knowledges when treating of the spiritual Church, see n. 2722; in the present case interior knowledges, because it is said, "every tree which was in the field," and it follows, "Which was in all the border thereof round about," by which are signified exterior knowledges; and from the signification of field, as denoting the Church, concerning which see above. Mention is made of every tree which was in the field, and in it's borders round about, by reason of the internal sense, otherwise it would not have been worthy to be spoken of in the Word which is Divine.

2973. "Which was in all the border thereof round about"—that hereby are signified exterior knowledges, appears from the signification of borders and round about, as denoting those things which are exterior, see n. 2936; consequently tree here, which was in the border round about, signifies exterior knowledges; exterior knowledges have relation to rituals and doctrinals which are the external things of the Church, but interior knowledges have relation to doctrinals which are the internal things of the Church; what the externals of the Church are, and what are its internals, has been shewn above in several places. Moreover in the Word frequent mention is made of midst and circuit (or what is round about), as in speaking of the land of Canaan, that was called midst, where Zion and Jerusalem were, but that was called circuit where the nations dwelt round about; by the land of Canaan was represented the kingdom of the Lord, the celestial principle thereof by Zion, and the spiritual principle by Jerusalem, where is the habitation of Jehovah or the Lord; the things which were round about, even to the furthest boundaries, represented celestial and spiritual things thence flowing forth and derived in order; where the furthest boundaries were, there the representative of things celestial and spiritual closed; these representatives had their origin from those things which are in the Lord's kingdom in the heavens, where the Lord as a sun is in the midst, whence comes all celestial flame and spiritual light; they who are nearest, are in the highest degree of light, but they who are remote, are in a lesser degree, and they who are the most remote, are in the least degree, and there are the boundaries, and hell commences, which is out of heaven. In respect to celestial flame and spiritual light, the case is this, that the celestial things appertaining to innocence and love, and the spiritual things appertaining to charity and faith, are in a similar proportion with the heat and light which the inhabitants enjoy, for thence comes all heat and light in the heavens; hence then it is, that midst signifies inmost, and circuit outermost, and that the things which proceed in an orderly progression from inmost to outermost, are in degrees of innocence, love, and charity, proportioned to their distance. The case is the same in every heavenly society; they who are in the midst in that society, are the best of that genus, and the love and charity of that genus decreases with them in degrees proportioned to their removal from the midst. The case is similar also in respect to man; his inmost is where the Lord has his abode with him, and thence governs the things which are in the circuits thereof; when man suffers the Lord to dispose the circuits to a correspondence with what is inmost, then he is in a state capable of being received into heaven, and then the inmost, the interior, and the external principles act in unity; but when man does not suffer the Lord to dispose the circuits to correspondence, then he recedes from heaven in the same proportion as he refuses to submit to the Lord's disposal. That the soul of man is in the midst, or in his inmost (part or principle), and that the body is in the circuit, or in the extremes, is well known, for it is the body which encompasses and invests the soul or human spirit. With such as are principled in celestial and spiritual love, good from the Lord flows in through the soul into the body, rendering thereby the body lucid; but with such as are principled in bodily and worldly love, good from the Lord cannot flow in through the soul into the body, but their interiors are in darkness, whence also the body becomes dark, according to what the Lord teaches in Matthew; "The lantern of the body is the eye, if the eye be sincere, the whole body is lucid: if the eye be evil, the whole body is darkened; if therefore the luminous principle (lumen) be darkness, how great is the darkness," vi. 22, 23; by eye is signified the intellectual principle which belongs to the soul, see n. 2701: but the case is still worse with those, whose interiors are darkness, and whose exteriors appear as it were lucid; these are such as outwardly have a semblance of angels of light, but inwardly are devils; they are called Babel; with these when the things which are round about are destroyed, they are carried headlong into hell; this was represented by the city Jericho, in that it's walls fell, and it was given up to the curse, after that the priests with the ark, went about it, seven times, and sounded the trumpets, Joshua vi. 1 to 17, and is understood by these words in Jeremiah, "Put yourselves in array against Babylon round about; all ye that bend the bow, sound over her round about; she hath given her hand; her foundations are fallen, her walls are destroyed," l. 14, 15; hence then it appears what is meant by round about. Moreover in the Word mention is sometimes made of circuits (spaces round about), as Jer. xxi. 14; xxxii. 14; xli. 14; xlix. 5; Ezech. xxxvi. 3, 4, 7; Amos iii. 11; and in other places, whereby are signified things exterior, concerning which, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, more will be said elsewhere.

2974. "Was made sure to Abraham for an acquisition"—that hereby is signified that they were acknowledged to be of the Lord alone, viz. all the quality and quantity of regeneration, as to the good and truth of faith, and thus as to all knowledges interior and exterior, appears from the representation of Abraham, as denoting the Lord, concerning which see frequently above; and from the signification of acquisition, as denoting His, consequently acknowledged to be of Him alone. It is a primary principle of faith, that all good and all truth is of the Lord, consequently from the Lord alone; the more inwardly any one acknowledges this, so much the more inwardly he is in heaven, for in heaven it is perceived to be so, and there is a sphere of perception of it's being so, because the heavenly inhabitants are principled in good which is from the Lord alone, and this is what is said to be in the Lord; the degrees of that perception are estimated from the midst to the circuits or circumferences, according to what was just now said above, n. 2973.

2975. "To the eyes of the sons of Heth"—that hereby is signified to their understanding, viz. the understanding of those who were of the new spiritual Church, appears from the signification of eyes, as denoting understanding, see n. 212, 2701; and from the signification of the sons of Heth, as denoting those who were of the new spiritual Church, see n. 2913, 2928. It was said above, verse 16, that Abraham spake in the ears of the sons of Heth, by which was signified that he spake according to their faculty, see n. 2965, 2967; but here it is said "to the eyes of the sons of Heth," and thereby is signified to their understanding; the former expression implies an application to their will, but the latter to their understanding; for man is to be reformed as to each part, inasmuch as unless the will and the understanding agree together, so as to make one, man is not regenerated, that is, unless goodness and truth, or what is the same thing, charity and faith are one, for charity is of the will, but faith is of the understanding; hence it is, that it was said above, "in the ears of the sons of Heth," but here, "to the eyes of the sons of Heth."

2976. "In (the eyes) of all that entered the gate of his city"—that hereby is signified as to all doctrinals, appears from what was said above, n. 2943, where the same words occur.

2977. Verse 19. And after this Abraham buried Sarah his wife, at the cave of the field of Machpelah upon the faces of Mamre, this is Hebron in the land of Canaan. After this signifies that it was so: Abraham buried Sarah his wife, signifies that they received truth conjoined with good from the Lord: at the cave of the field of Machpelah upon the faces of Mamre, signifies that thus they were regenerated as far as they were capable of being regenerated: this is Hebron, signifies that this was a new Church: in the land of Canaan, signifies which is One in the Lord's kingdom.

2978. "After this"—that hereby is signified that it was so, appears from the series of things treated of, for here is the conclusion, viz. that they were regenerated, and that thus a new spiritual Church was established.

2979. "Abraham buried Sarah his wife"—that hereby is signified that they received truth conjoined with good from the Lord, appears from the signification of burying, as denoting to regenerate, see above, n. 2916, 2917; (that man is regenerated, when he receives truth conjoined with good from the Lord, will be shewn presently;) and from the representation of Abraham, as denoting the Lord, concerning which see above in many places; and from the representation of Sarah as a wife, denoting truth conjoined with good, see n. 2507, 2063, 2065. With respect to the regeneration of the spiritual man, the case is this; he is first instructed in the truths which are of faith, and he is at this time kept by the Lord in the affection of truth; the good of faith, which is charity towards his neighbour, is at the same time insinuated into him, but so that he scarce knows it, for it lies concealed in the affection of truth and this to the end that truth, which is of faith, may be conjoined with good which is of charity; in process of time the affection of truth, which is of faith, increases, and truth is regarded for the sake of the end, viz. for the sake of good, or, what is the same thing, for the sake of life, and this more and more; thus truth is insinuated into good, and when this is the case, man imbibes the good of life according to the truth which was insinuated, and thus acts, or seems to himself to act from a principle of good: before this time, truth which is of faith was his ruling principle, but afterwards, he is ruled by good which is of the life ; when this comes to pass, then man is regenerated, but he is regenerated according to the quantity and quality of truth which is insinuated into good ; and when truth and good act in unity, according to the quality and quantity of good : thus it is universally in regard to regeneration. Regeneration is effected to the end that man may be received into heaven, for heaven is nothing else but a marriage of truth and good, and of good and truth, see n. 2508, 2618, 2728, 2729 ; unless the marriage of truth and good be formed with man, he cannot be in the heavenly marriage, that is, in heaven.

2980. "At the cave of the field of Machpelah upon the faces of Mamre"—that hereby is signified that they were thus regenerated according to their capacity of being regenerated, appears from the signification of cave, as denoting the truth of faith, in that it was in an obscure principle, see n. 2935 ; and from the signification of field, as denoting the good of faith, see n. 2971 ; and from the signification of Machpelah upon the faces of Mamre, or before Mamre, as denoting the quality and quantity of regeneration, see n. 2970 ; thus that they were regenerated by the truth and good of faith, so far as they were capable, that is, according to their faculty and understanding, see n. 2913, 2928, 2975.

2981. "This is Hebron"—that hereby is signified that this was a new Church, appears from the signification of Hebron, as denoting a spiritual Church, see above in this chapter, n. 2909 ; it was there said, "Kirjath-arba this is Hebron," by reason that Kirjath-arba signifies the Church as to truth, and Hebron signifies the Church as to good ; but here it is no longer named Kirjath-arba, but Hebron, because the subject treated of is concerning a regenerate person, who no longer acts from a principle of truth but of good, as was said above, n. 2979.

2982. "In the land of Canaan"—that hereby is signified which is one in the Lord's kingdom, appears from the representation of the land of Canaan, as denoting the Lord's kingdom, see n. 1413, 1437, 1585, 1607 : in respect to the Churches of the Lord, the case is this ; in ancient times there were several together, and a difference between them as at this day in regard to doctrinals, but still they made one in this, that they acknowledged love towards the Lord, and charity towards their neighbour, as the principal and very essential constituents of a Church, and thus that doctrinals were not designed so much to direct their thoughts, as to direct their lives ; and when this is the case, that love to the Lord and charity towards their neighbour, that is, the good of life, are made essentials with all and each individual, then Churches, how many soever they be, make one, and each is then one in the kingdom of the Lord : this is also the case in respect to heaven, where there are innummerable societies, all distinct from each other, but still they constitute one heaven, because all are principled in love to the Lord, and charity towards their neighbour. But the case is altogether otherwise with Churches, which make faith the essential of the Church, imagining that if they know and think such and such things they shall be saved, and this without regard to the life; when this is the case, then several Churches do not make one, nor indeed are they Churches; it is the good of faith which constitutes a Church, that is, a real life of love and of charity according to those things which faith teaches; doctrinals are for the sake of life: this every one may know, for what are doctrinals but for some end, and what is the end but life, that a man may become such as doctrinals teach him to be? It may be said, indeed, that the very essential faith, which saves, is confidence, but such confidence can have no place except in good of life, without which there is no reception, and where there is no reception, there is no confidence, unless occasionally a certain apparent confidence in disordered states of mind or body, when the lusts of selfish and worldly love are at rest; but with those who are in evil of life, when that crisis leaves them or is changed, then such deceitful confidence altogether vanishes; for there is a confidence which has place even with the wicked; but whosoever is desirous to know the nature and quality of his confidence, let him examine in himself his ruling affections, ends, and also exercises of life.

2983. Verse 20. And the field and the cave which was in it, was made sure to Abraham for a possession of a sepulchre, from the sons of Heth. The field and the cave which was in it, signifies the Church and the faith thereof: was made sure to Abraham for a possession of a sepulchre, signifies that it was from the Lord alone by regeneration; from the sons of Heth, signifies that it was of the Gentiles.

2984. "The field and the cave which was in it"—that hereby is signified the Church and the faith thereof, appears from the signification of field, as denoting the Church, see n. 2969, 2971; and from the signification of cave, as denoting faith, see n. 2935, 2971: it is said the Church and the faith thereof, because Church is predicated of the good which is of charity, consequently of life, and faith is predicated of truth which is thereto adjoined.

2985. "Was made sure to Abraham for a possession of a sepulchre"—that hereby is signified that it was from the Lord alone by regeneration, appears from the representation of Abraham, as denoting the Lord, according to what was frequently shewn above; and from the signification of a possession, as denoting His, consequently the Lord's alone, see above, n. 2974; and from the signification of sepulchre, as denoting regeneration, see also above, n. 2916.

2986. "From the sons of Heth"—that hereby is signified that it was of the Gentiles, may appear from the signification of the sons of Heth; the sons of Heth were not those amongst whom the Church was established, but they are those by whom that Church is represented; for all things in the Word are representative, nor do they signify the persons who are named, but by them the things appertaining to the Lord's kingdom and to the Church; that by the sons of Heth is signified a new Church, or, what is the same thing, those who were of the new Church, was abundantly shewn above; but that it was a new Church of Gentiles, or formed from amongst the Gentiles, is evident from what was said by Abraham to the sons of Heth, "I am a sojourner and inmate with you," verse 4, whereby was signified, that the Lord was unknown to them, and yet could be with them, n. 2915; hence it is evident, that by the sons of Heth is signified a new Church from the Gentiles; of others it cannot be predicated that the Lord was unknown to them. Moreover it is to be observed, when any Church becomes no Church, that is, when charity perishes, and a new Church is established by the Lord, that seldom, if ever, the establishment has place with those amongst whom the old Church existed, but with those amongst whom there was heretofore no Church, that is, amongst the Gentiles; this was the case when the most ancient Church perished; a new one which was called Noah, or the ancient Church which was after the flood, was then established amongst the Gentiles, that is, with those amongst whom there before existed no Church; in like manner when this latter Church perished, then somewhat resembling a Church was established amongst the posterity of Abraham, descendants from Jacob, thus again amongst the Gentiles; for Abraham, when he was called, was a Gentile, see n. 1356, 1992, 2559; the posterity of Jacob in Egypt became still more Gentile, insomuch that they were altogether ignorant of Jehovah, consequently of all Divine Worship; after that this resemblance of a Church was consummated, then the primitive Church was established from amongst the Gentiles, the Jews being rejected; the case will be the same with this Church which is called Christian. The reason why a new Church is established by the Lord amongst the Gentiles, is, because they are influenced by no false principles against the truths of faith, for they know not what the truths of faith are; false principles inhibited from infancy, and afterwards confirmed, must first be dispersed, before man can be regenerated, and become a man of the Church; yea the Gentiles cannot profane holy things by evils of life, for it is impossible any one should profane a holy thing of which he is ignorant, see n. 593, 1008, 1010, 1059; thus the Gentiles, being in ignorance, and without grounds of offence, are in a better state for the reception of truths than those who are of the Church, and all those amongst them, who are in the good of life, easily receive truths, see n. 932, 1032, 1059, 1327, 1328, 1366, 2049, 2051, 2589 to 2604.

CONCERNING REPRESENTATIONS AND CORRESPONDENCIES.

2988. In order that some idea may be had of representations and correspondencies, it may suffice to reflect only on those things which appertain to the mind, viz. to the thought and will; these things usually so beam forth from the face, that they manifest themselves in the countenance thereof, especially the affections, such as are of an interior nature discovering themselves from and in the eyes; when those things which appertain to the face act in unity with those which appertain to the mind, they are said to correspond, and are correspondencies; and the looks [vultus] of the face represent, and are representations. The case is the same with those things which are effected by gestures in the body, and likewise with all the actions which are produced by the muscles; that these things are effected according to what a man thinks and wills, is well known; the gestures and actions themselves, which appertain to the body, represent those things which appertain to the mind, and are representations; and when they agree together, they are correspondencies.

2989. It may also be known, that such effigies do not exist in the mind, as are exhibited in the countenance, but that they are merely affections, which are thus effigied; also that such acts do not exist in the mind, as are exhibited by actions in the body, but that they are thoughts which are thus figured: The things which appertain to the mind are spiritual, but those which appertain to the body are natural: hence it is evident, that there exists a correspondence between things spiritual and things natural; and that there is a representation of things spiritual in things natural; or, what amounts to the same, that the things appertaining to the internal man are portrayed in the external, in which case the things which appear in the external man are representative of the internal, and the things which agree together are correspondencies.

2990. It is also known, or may be known, that there is a spiritual world, and that there is a natural world; the spiritual world, in it's universal sense, is the world where spirits and angels dwell, and the natural world is that where men dwell: in a particular sense, there is a spiritual world and a natural world appertaining to every individual man, his internal man being to him a spiritual world, but his external being to him a natural world: the things which flow in out of the spiritual world, and are presented in the natural, are in general representations; and so far as they agree together, they are correspondencies.

2991. That natural things represent spiritual, and that they correspond together, may also be known from this consideration, that what is natural cannot possibly have existence, except from a cause prior to itself; this cause is of spiritual origin, and there is nothing natural which doth not thence derive the cause of it's existence: natural forms are effects, nor can they appear as causes, still less as causes of causes, or principles, but they receive their forms according to their use in the place where they are; still however the forms of effects represent the things appertaining to their causes; yea, these latter things represent those which appertain to their principles; thus all natural things represent the things appertaining to the spiritual, to which they correspond; and spiritual things also represent the things appertaining to the celestial, from which they are derived.

2992. It hath been given me to know by much experience, that in the natural World, and in it's three kingdoms, there is not the smallest thing existing, which does not represent somewhat in the spiritual world, or which has not somewhat in that world to which it corresponds: amongst many experimental proofs tending to confirm this assertion, the following is one: on a certain occasion, whilst I was discoursing concerning the viscera of the human body, and was pursuing their connection from those which appertain to the head, to those which appertain to the thorax, and so on to those which appertain to the abdomen, the angels at the same instant, who were above me directed my thoughts through the spiritual things to which those viscera corresponded, and this in such a manner as not to make the least mistake; they indeed did not think at all concerning the viscera of the body, to which I was attentive, but only concerning the spiritual things to which they corresponded. Such is the intelligence of the angels, that by virtue of spiritual things they know all and singular the things which are in the body, even the most secret, which cannot in anywise come to man's knowledge; yea all and singular the things which are in the universe of Creation, without fallacy, and this by reason that from spiritual things are derived causes and the principles of causes.

2993. The case is similar in regard to the things which are in the vegetable kingdom, for in this kingdom there is not the smallest thing existing which does not represent somewhat in the spiritual world, and correspond thereto, as has been frequently given me to know by like commerce with the angels: the reason whereof was also explained to me, and shewn to be this, viz. that the causes of all things natural are grounded in things spiritual, and the principles of those causes in things celestial; or, what is the same thing, that all things which are in the natural world, derive their cause from truth which is spiritual, and their principle from good which is celestial, and that natural things proceed thence according to all the differences of truth and of good which are in the Lord's kingdom, consequently from the Lord Himself, Who is the Source of all good and truth: these things must needs appear strange to many, and especially to those who cannot or will not ascend in thought beyond nature, and who do not know what is meant by what is spiritual, and therefore do not acknowledge it.

2994. Man also during his life in the body, is capable of feeling and perceiving very little of all this, for the celestial and spiritual things appertaining to him fall into the natural things which are in his external man, and there he loses the sensation and perception of them. The representatives and correspondencies, which are in his external man, also are such, that they do not appear like unto the things in the internal man to which they correspond, and which they represent; therefore neither can they come to his knowledge, before he puts off those external things. Blessed at that time is he who is in correspondence, that is whose external man corresponds to the internal.

2995. The men of the most ancient Church, concerning whom see n. 1114 to 1125, inasmuch as in all the particulars of nature they saw somewhat spiritual and celestial, so that natural things served them only as objects of thinking concerning things spiritual and celestial, were enabled hereby to discourse with angels, and to be with them in the kingdom of the Lord, which is in the heavens, at the same time that they were in His kingdom on earth or in the Church: thus natural things with them were conjoined with spiritual things, and corresponded thereto in all respects. But the case was otherwise after those times, when evils and false principles began to prevail, or when the golden age began to change into iron; then heaven was closed in consequence of there being no longer any correspondence, insomuch that men were scarce desirous to know that there was such a thing as a spiritual principle, yea, at length they did not even wish to know that there is a heaven and a hell, and a life after death.

2996. It is a truth most deeply hid from the world, and yet nothing is more manifest in another life, even to every spirit, that all the parts of the human body, and every thing contained therein, have correspondence with such things as are in heaven, insomuch that there is not the smallest particle in the body, which has not somewhat spiritual and celestial corresponding to it, or, what is the same thing, which has not heavenly societies corresponding to it, for these societies exist according to all the genera and species of things spiritual and celestial, and this in such an order, that they represent together one man, as to all and singular the constituent parts thereof, both interior and exterior; hence it is, that the universal heaven is called also the GRAND MAN; and hence it is, that we have so often spoken of one society belonging to one province of the body, another to another, and so forth: the reason is because the Lord is the only Man, and Heaven represents Him; and the Divine Good and Truth, which is from Him, is what constitutes heaven: and whereas the angels are principled therein, they are therefore said to be in the Lord. But they who are in hell, are out of this GRAND MAN, and correspond to whatever is filthy, and also to whatever is corrupt and distempered.

2997. This may further in some degree be known from this consideration, that the spiritual or internal man, which is man's spirit, and is called his soul, in like manner has correspondence with his natural or external man, and that the correspondence is such, that the things appertaining to the internal man are spiritual and celestial, whereas the things appertaining to the external man are natural and corporeal, as may appear from what was said above, n. 2988, 2989, concerning the features of the face, and concerning the actions of the body: man also as to the internal man, is a little heaven, because created for an image of the Lord.

2998. That such correspondencies exist, has been so fully made known to me from several years experience, and is thereby become so familiar to me, that nothing can be more so, notwithstanding the fact itself is such, that man is almost in total ignorance about it, neither does he believe that he has any such connection with the spiritual world, when yet the truth is, that all his connection is thence, and without such connection neither himself, nor any part of him, could possibly subsist a moment; for thence is derived all his subsistence. It has also been given me to know what particular angelic societies appertain to each particular province of the body, also what are their qualities; as for instance, what and of what quality appertain to the province of the heart; what and of what quality to the province of the lungs; and what and of what quality to the province of the liver; also what and of what quality to the different sensories, as to the eye, to the ears, to the tongue, and the rest; concerning which, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, we shall speak more particularly in another place.

2999. Moreover, there is no one thing existing in the created world, which has not correspondence with the things existing in the spiritual world, and which does not thereby, in its manner and measure, represent somewhat in the Lord's kingdom; hence is derived the existence and subsistence of all things. If man knew how the real case is in this respect, he would on no account, as he is wont, attribute all things to nature.

3000. Hence it is, that all and singular the things contained in the universe represent the Lord's kingdom, insomuch that the universe with it's heavenly constellations, with it's atmospheres, and with it's three kingdoms, is nothing else but a kind of theatre representative of the Lord's Glory which is in the heavens: in the animal kingdom not only man, but also each particular animal, even the least and vilest, are thus representative; to instance in the case of worms, which creep on the ground, and feed on the leaves of plants; these, when the time of their nuptials approaches, immediately become chrysallises, and presently are furnished with wings, and thereby are elevated from the ground into the atmosphere, which is their heaven, where they enjoy their delights and their freedom, sporting one with another, and feeding on the choicest parts of flowers, laying their eggs, and thus providing for posterity; and on this occasion, in consequence of being in the state of their heaven, they are also in the fulness of their beauty; that these things are representative of the Lord's kingdom, may be obvious to every one.

3001. That there is only one single life [or living principle], which is that of the Lord, and which flows in and causes man to live, whether he be good or evil, may appear from what was said and shewn in the explication of the Word, n. 1954, 2021, 2536, 2658, 2706, 2886 to 2889; to that life [or living principle] the recipients correspond, which are vivified by that Divine Influx, and this in such a manner, that they appear to themselves to live of themselves; this correspondence is that of the life with the recipients of life: the recipients, according to the state in which they are, so they live; those men who are principled in love and charity, are in correspondence, for they are in agreement with the life which they receive, and it is received by them adequately: but they who are in principles contrary to love and charity, are not in correspondence, because the essential life is not received adequately; hence they have an appearance of life according to their state and quality. This may be illustrated by various things, as by the organs of motion and the bodily sensories, into which life enters by influx through the soul; according to their state and quality, such are their actions and sensations; it may be illustrated also by the objects into which light flows from the sun, which light produces colourings according to the quality of the recipient forms: but in the spiritual world, all modifications existing from the influx of life are spiritual, and hence come the different qualities of intelligence and wisdom.

3002. From what has been said it may further appear, how all natural forms, both animate and inanimate, are representative of spiritual and celestial things in the Lord's kingdom, that is, that all and singular things in nature are representative, according to the measure and quality of their correspondence.

3003. The subject of representations and correspondencies will be continued at the close of the following chapter.

GENESIS.

CHAPTER THE TWENTY-FOURTH.

3004. THAT the deepest mysteries lie concealed in the internal sense of the Word, which have heretofore come to no one's knowledge, may appear from what hath been hitherto said and shewn, and from what, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, will be shewn in the following pages; the same may most manifestly appear from the internal sense of the two names of our Lord, JESUS CHRIST; when these names are pronounced, few have any other idea than that they are proper names, and almost like the names of another man, but more holy; the learned indeed know, that Jesus signifies Saviour and Christ the anointed, and hence they conceive some more interior idea; but still this is not what the angels in heaven perceive from those names, their perceptions extending to things still more divine, for by Jesus, when the name is pronounced by man in reading the Word, they perceive the Divine Good, and by Christ the Divine Truth, and by both, the Divine marriage of good and truth, and of truth and good, consequently all that is Divine in the heavenly marriage, which is heaven; what is meant by the heavenly marriage, may be seen, n. 2173, 2803.

3005. That JESUS in the internal sense denotes Divine Good, and that CHRIST denotes Divine Truth, may be evident from many passages in the Word; the ground and reason why Jesus denotes Divine Good is, because it signifies safety, salvation and Saviour; and in consequence of such signification, it signifies Divine Good, inasmuch as all salvation is from Divine Good, which is of the Lord's love and mercy, and thus by the reception thereof; the ground and reason why Christ denotes Divine Truth is, because it signifies Messiah, anointed, and king; that Messiah, anointed, and king, denote Divine Truth, will appear from what follows.

3006. These are the perceptions which the angels have, when the name Jesus Christ is pronounced, and this is what is signified when it is said, that there is salvation in no other name; this also is signified by what the Lord so often said concerning His name, as in John, "Whatsoever ye shall ask in My name, I will do," xiv. 13, 14: again in the same evangelist, "These things are written that ye may believe that Jesus is Christ the Son of God, and that believing ye may have life in His name," xx. 31; and in other places: that name denotes every thing in one complex, whereby the Lord is worshipped, consequently the quality of all worship and doctrine may be seen, n. 2724; in the present case therefore it denotes the good of love and of charity, conjoined with the truth of faith, which is the complex of all doctrine and of all worship.

3007. That Christ is the same thing as Messiah, anointed, and king; and that Messiah, anointed, and king, is the same thing as Divine Truth, may appear from what follows.

3008. In respect to the first proposition, that Christ is the same thing as Messiah, anointed, and king, it is evident from these passages in the Word, "Andrew findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the Messiah, which is, being interpreted, Christ," John i. 41: again in the same evangelist, "Many of the people hearing this Word, said, Of a truth this is the prophet: others said, This is Christ; but others said, Shall Christ come out of Galilee? doth not the scripture say, that Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of Bethlehem where David was?" vii. 40, 41, 42; where Christ manifestly denotes the Messiah whom they expected: again, in the same evangelist, "Do the rulers know indeed that this is the very Christ! howbeit we know this man whence he is, but when Christ cometh, no one knoweth whence He is," vii. 26, 27; where Christ denotes the Messiah; the reason why no one knew whence He is, was, because He was not acknowledged: again, in the same evangelist, "The Jews came round about Jesus, and said unto him, How long dost Thou keep us in suspense? if thou be the Christ, tell us plainly; Jesus answered them, I have told you, but ye do not believe," x. 24, 25; in this passage also Christ denotes the Messiah whom they expected: again, in the same evangelist, "The people answered, we have heard out of the law, that Christ abideth for ever," xii. 34; where Christ denotes the Messiah: again, in the same evangelist, "Martha said, I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, who should come into the world," xi. 27; denoting that He was the Messiah: so in Luke, "There was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon, and it was revealed to him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death, until he should see the Lord's Christ," ii. 25, 26; denoting the Messiah, or the anointed of Jehovah: again, in the same evangelist, "Jesus said to His disciples, but whom say ye that I am? Peter answering said, the Christ of God," ix. 20; Mark viii. 29; besides other places, as Matt. xxvi. 63, 64; John vi. 68, 69; Mark xiv. 61, 62. Inasmuch then as Christ and Messiah are the same, and Christ in the Greek tongue, and Messiah in the Hebrew, signifies anointed, it is hence evident that Christ is the same as anointed, and also the same as king, for kings were called in general the anointed, as appears from the historical parts of the Word in many passages, and likewise from the prophetic parts, as in David, "The kings of the earth stood up, and consulted together upon Jehovah, and upon His anointed," Psalm ii. 2: again, "Now know I, that Jehovah saveth his anointed, He will answer him from the heavens of His holiness, in the virtues of the salvation of His right-hand," Psalm xx. 6: again, "Jehovah is their strength, and the strength of the salvations of his anointed," Psalm xxviii. 8: so in Samuel, "Jehovah will give strength to His king, and will exalt the horn of His anointed," 1 Sam. ii. 10: in these and several other passages, anointed denotes king; in the original tongue it is read Messiah: the subject treated of in these prophetic passages is concerning the Lord, and that He was a king, is also evident from several passages in the New Testament, as in Matthew, "The governor asked Jesus, Art thou the king of the Jews? Jesus said unto him, Thou sayest," xxvii. 11: so in Luke, "Pilate asked Jesus, saying, Art thou the king of the Jews? He answering, said unto him, Thou sayest," xxiii. 3; Mark xv. 2; so in John, "They cried Hosannah, blessed is He who cometh in the name of the Lord, the king of Israel," xii. 13; "Nathaniel said, Rabbi, Thou art the Son of God, Thou art the king of Israel," i. 49.

3009. In respect to the other proposition, viz. that Messiah, anointed, and king, is the same as Divine Truth, it is evident from several passages in the Word, and has been pointed out at times in the course of the above explication, as n. 1672, 1728, 2015, 2069; the Lord also Himself teaches this in John, "Pilate said to Jesus, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest, because I am a king; for this was I born, and for this I came into the world, that I may bear witness to the truth; every one who is of the truth heareth My voice," xviii. 37; whence it is manifest, that the essential Divine Truth is that principle, by virtue whereof the Lord was called king: The ground and reason why kings were to be anointed, and were hence called the anointed, was, because oil, wherewith they were anointed, signified good, see n. 886, 2832, denoting that truth, which was signified by king, was from good, consequently the truth of good, and thus that the royalty appertaining to kings represented the Lord as to Divine Truth grounded in Divine Good, consequently the Divine marriage of good in truth; whereas the priesthood [or priestly principle] represented the Divine marriage of truth in good; the latter is signified by Jesus, the former by Christ.

3010. Hence it is evident, what is signified by Christs in these Words of the Lord in Matthew, "See that no one seduce you; for many shall come under My name, saying, I am Christ, and shall seduce many. Then if any one shall say to you, Lo here is Christ, or there, believe not, for there shall arise false Christs and false prophets," xxiv. 5, 23, 24; Mark xiii. 21, 22; by false Christs are here signified truths not Divine, or false, and by false prophets they who teach them, see u. 2534 : again in Matthew, " Be ye not called masters, for one is your master, Christ," xxiii. 10 ; where Christ denotes Truth Divine. Hence it is evident what is meant by a Christian, viz. one who is principled in truth grounded in good.

3011. From what hath been said it may appear how many hidden things are contained in the Word, which can in no wise come to any one's knowledge, except from the internal sense.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1. AND Abraham being old came to days, and JEHOVAH blessed Abraham in all things.

2. And Abraham said to his elder servant of his house, who ministered in all that he had, place I pray thy hand under my thigh.

3. And I will adjure thee by JEHOVAH God of heaven and God of earth, that thou take not a woman for my son of the daughters of the Canaanite, in the midst of whom I dwell.

4. But that thou go to my land, and to my nativity, and take a woman for my son Isaac.

5. And the servant said unto him, perhaps a woman is not willing to go after me to this land, shall I by bringing back bring back thy son to the land whence thou camest forth ?

6. And Abraham said unto him, take heed to thyself lest perhaps thou bring back my son thither.

7. JEHOVAH God of heaven, Who received me from the house of my father, and from the land of my nativity, and Who spake to me, and Who sware to me, saying, to thy seed will I give this land, He shall send His angel before thee, and thou shalt take a woman for my son thence.

8. And if the woman is not willing to go after thee, and thou art free from this my adjuration, only thou may not bring back my son thither.

9. And the servant placed his hand under the thigh of Abraham his lord, and sware to him upon this word

10. And the servant took ten camels from the camels of his lord, and went, and every good thing of his lord in his hand, and he arose, and went to Aram Naharaim, to the city of Nahor.

11. And he made the camels fall down on their knees without the city, at a well of waters, near the time of evening, near the time that the drawers of water came forth.

12. And he said, JEHOVAH God of my lord Abraham, cause

I pray to meet before me to day, and do mercy with my lord Abraham.

13. Behold I stand above at the fountain of waters, and the daughters of the men of the city are coming forth to draw waters.

14. And let it come to pass, the damsel to whom I say, let down thy cask I pray thee, that I may drink, and she shall say, drink, and I will give thy camels drink also, her Thou hast appointed for thy servant Isaac, and in this I shall know that Thou hast done mercy with my lord.

15. And it came to pass he had scarce made an end of speaking, and lo! Rebecca came forth, who was born to Bethuel the son of Milcah, the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, and her cask on her shoulder.

16. And the damsel was exceeding good to look upon, a virgin, and no man had known her, and she came down to the fountain, and filled her cask, and went up.

17. And the servant ran to meet her, and said, Cause me I pray to sup a little of the water out of thy cask.

18. And she said, Drink my lord, and she hastened and let down her cask upon her hand, and made him to drink.

19. And she made an end of making him to drink, and said, I will also draw for thy camels until they shall make an end of drinking.

20. And she hastened, and emptied her cask at the trough, and ran again to the well to draw, and she drew for all his camels.

21. And the man was amazed at her, containing himself to know whether JEHOVAH had prospered his way, or not.

22. And it came to pass, when the camels had made an end of drinking, that the man took an ornament of gold, of half a shekel weight, and two bracelets on her hands, ten of gold their weight.

23. And he said, Whose daughter art thou? tell me I pray, is there room in thy father's house for us to spend the night?

24. And she said unto him, I am the daughter of Bethuel, the son of Milcah, whom she bare unto Nahor.

25. And she said unto him, We have both straw, and also much provender, likewise room to spend the night.

26. And the man bended himself, and bowed down himself to JEHOVAH.

27. And he said, blessed JEHOVAH God of my lord Abraham, who hath not forsaken His mercy and His truth from being with my lord; I being in the way, JEHOVAH hath led me to the house of the brethren of my lord.

28. And the damsel ran, and told to the house of her mother, according to these words.

29. And Rebecca had a brother, and his name was Laban, and Laban ran to the man forth to the fountain.

30. And it came to pass, when he saw the ornament and bracelets upon the hands of his sister, and when he heard the words of Rebecca his sister, saying, thus spake the man unto me, that he came to the man, and lo! he was standing at the camels at the fountain.

31. And he said, Come blessed of JEHOVAH, why standest thou without? and I have swept the house, and there is room for the camels.

32. And the man came to the house, and loosed the camels, and gave the camels straw and provender, and water to wash his feet, and the feet of the men who were with him.

33. And there was set before him to eat, and he said, I eat not, until I have spoken my words; and he said, speak.

34. And he said, I am the servant of Abraham.

35. And JEHOVAH hath blessed my lord exceedingly, and hath magnified him, and hath given him flock and herd, and silver and gold, and men-servants and maid-servants, and camels, and asses.

36. And Sarah the wife of my lord hath born a son to my lord after her old age, and he hath given him all that he hath.

37. And my lord adjured me, saying, Thou shalt not take a woman for my son of the daughters of the Canaanite in whose land I dwell.

38. Thou shalt not go but to the house of my father, and to my family, and shalt take a woman for my son.

39. And I said to my lord, perhaps the woman will not go after me.

40. And he said unto me, JEHOVAH, before whom I have walked, will send His angel with thee, and will prosper thy way, and thou shalt take a woman for my son out of my family, and from the house of my father.

41. In this case thou shalt be free from my curse, that thou come to my family; and if they shall not give to thee, thou shalt be free from my curse.

42. And I came to day to the fountain, and said, JEHOVAH God of my lord Abraham, if thou dost, I pray, prosper my way wherein I walk.

43. Behold I stand at the fountain of waters, and let it come to pass, that the damsel who cometh forth to draw; and I say to her, cause me to drink I pray a little water out of thy cask.

44. And she shall say unto me, drink both thou, and I will also draw for thy camels, she shall be the woman whom JEHOVAH hath destined for the son of my lord.

45. I had scarce made an end of speaking to my heart, when lo! Rebecca came forth, and her cask upon her shoulder, and she came down to the fountain, and drew, and I said unto her, Cause me to drink I pray.

46. And she hastened, and let down her cask from above her, and said, Drink thou, and I will also give drink to thy camels: and I drank, and she also gave drink to the camels.

47. And I asked her, and said, Whose daughter art thou? and she said, the daughter of Bethuel the son of Nahor, whom Milcah bare to him: and I set an ornament on her nose, and bracelets on her hands.

48. And I bended and bowed myself to JEHOVAH, and blessed JEHOVAH God of my lord Abraham, who led me into the way of truth to take a daughter of the brother of my lord for his son.

49. And now, if ye are doing mercy and truth with my lord, tell me, and if not, tell me, and I will look to the right, or to the left.

50. And Laban answered, and Bethuel, and said, from JEHOVAH hath come forth the word, we cannot speak to thee evil or good.

51. Behold Rebecca before thee, take and depart, and let the woman be for the son of thy lord, as JEHOVAH spake.

52. And it came to pass, when the servant of Abraham heard their words, that he bowed himself to the earth to JEHOVAH.

53. And the servant brought forth vessels of silver and vessels of gold, and raiment, and gave to Rebecca, and gave precious things to her brother, and to her mother.

54. And they did eat and drink, he and the men who were with him, and they passed the night, and arose in the morning, and he said, Send me to my lord.

55. And her brother said, and her mother, Let the damsel remain with us a day or ten, afterwards thou shalt go.

56. And he said to them, Do not delay me, and JEHOVAH hath prospered my way, send me, and I will go to my lord.*

57. And they said, We will call the damsel, and ask her mouth.

58. And they called Rebecca, and said to her, Wilt thou go with this man? and she said, I will go.*

59. And they sent Rebecca their sister, and her nurse, and the servant of Abraham, and his men.

60. And they blessed Rebecca, and said unto her, Thou our sister be for thousands of myriads, and let thy seed inherit the gate of them that hate thee.

61. And Rebecca arose, and her damsels, and they rode upon camels, and went after the man; and the servant received Rebecca and went.

62. And Isaac came from coming to Beer-lahai-roi, and he dwelt in the land of the south.

63. And Isaac went forth to meditate in the field towards evening, and he lifted up his eyes, and saw, and lo! the camels

64. And Rebecca lifted up her eyes, and saw Isaac, and she fell from off the camel.

65. And said to the servant, Who is that man there walking in the field to meet us? and the servant said, He is my lord; and she took a veil and covered herself.

66. And the servant told to Isaac all the words which he had done.

67. And Isaac introduced her into the tent of Sarah his mother, and took Rebecca, and she was to him for a woman, and he loved her; and Isaac was comforted after his mother.

CONTENTS.

3012. IN the internal sense is described all the process of the conjunction of truth with good in the Lord's Divine rational [principle]: in this chapter, the process of initiation which precedes conjunction; Isaac is the good of the rational principle; Rebecca is here the truth to be initiated in good; Laban is the affection of good in the natural man.

3013. The process of initiation in the internal sense is thus described: when the state was prepared, and all things were reduced by the Lord into a Divine-Celestial order, that Divine Truth might be conjoined with the Divine Good of his rational principle, and this by the common way of derivation from the natural man, that is, from the scientifics, knowledges, and doctrinals contained therein, then by the Lord's Divine influx truths were thence called forth, were initiated into good in the rational principle, and were made Divine: thus the rational principle was by the Lord made Divine, in respect to truth, as well as in respect to good.

3014. From this and the following chapters it may appear what arcana are contained in the internal sense of the Word.

THE INTERNAL SENSE.

3015. Verse 1. AND Abraham being old came to days, and Jehovah blessed Abraham in all things. Abraham being old came to days, signifies when the state was at hand that the Lord's Human [principle] should be made Divine: and Jehovah blessed Abraham in all things, signifies when all things were disposed of the Lord into Divine Order.

3016. "Abraham being old came to days"—that hereby is signified when the state was at hand that the Lord's Human [principle] should be made Divine, appears from the representation of Abraham, as denoting the Lord, concerning which, see n. 1893, 1965, 1989, 2011, 2172, 2198, 2501, 2833, 2836; and in many other places; and from the signification of old or old age, as denoting to put off what is human, and to put on what is celestial, concerning which, see n. 1854, 2198, and when predicated of the Lord, denoting to put on the Divine; and from the signification of day, as denoting state, concerning which, see n. 23, 487, 488, 493, 893, 2788; hence to come to days denotes when the state was at hand. The ground and reason why such things are signified by being old, and coming to days, is, because with the angels there is no idea of old age, nor of advancing age which is to come to days, but only the idea of state as to the life in which they are principled, wherefore when mention is made in the Word of advancement in age, and of old age, the angels attendant on man cannot form any other idea than of the state of life in which they are, and in which men are, when they pass through various ages even to the last, viz. that they successively thus put off the human principle and put on the celestial; for human life is nothing else from infancy to old age, but a progression from the world to heaven, and the last, which is death, is the real transit, of consequence burial is resurrection, because it is a plenary putting off, see n. 2916, 2917; inasmuch as the angels are in such an idea, nothing else can be signified by coming to days, and by old age, in the internal sense, which is principally designed for the angels, and for men who are angelic minds.

3017. "And Jehovah blessed Abraham in all things"—that hereby is signified when all things were disposed of the Lord into Divine Order, or, what is the same thing, when the Lord disposed all things into Divine Order, appears from this consideration, that Jehovah is the Lord as to the essential Divine [principle], see n. 1343, 1736, 1815, 2004, 2005, 2018, 2025, 2921, and that in this case Abraham represents the Lord as to the Divine Human [principle], n. 2833, 2836, wherefore when it is said, that Jehovah blessed Abraham in all things, hereby is meant in the internal sense, that the Lord from the essential Divine [principle] in His Human [principle] disposed all things into Divine Order, for this is signified by blessing when it is predicated of the Lord's Human [principle]; for to be blessed, when it is predicated of man, is to be enriched with spiritual and celestial good, see n. 981, 1096, 1420, 1422, and he is then enriched with such good, when the things appertaining to him are disposed of the Lord into spiritual and celestial order, thus into an image and likeness of Divine Order, see n. 2475; the regeneration of man consists solely herein. But what is meant by all things being disposed of the Lord into Divine Order in His Human [principle], appears from what follows in this chapter, viz. that His Divine rational [principle], represented by Isaac, conceived from the Divine Good represented by Abraham, and born of the Divine Truth represented by Sarah, was now disposed into such Divine Order, that Divine Truths derived from the essential Human [principle] were capable of being conjoined to it: these are the arcana, which are contained in this chapter in the internal sense, concerning which the angels have clear light from the Lord, for in the light of heaven these things are manifest as in clear day; whereas in the light of this world, in which man is, scarce any thing is manifest, except obscurely in a small degree with a regenerate person, he being also in some light of heaven.

3018. Verse 2. And Abraham said to his elder servant of his house, who ministered in all that he had, Place I pray thy hand under my thigh. Abraham said to his elder servant of his house, signifies the ordination and influx of the Lord into his natural [principle], which is the elder servant of the house: who ministered in all that he had, signifies the offices of the natural man: place I pray thy hand under my thigh, signifies the binding thereof as to power to the good of conjugal love.

3019. "Abraham said to his elder servant of his house"—that hereby is signified the ordination and influx of the Lord into His natural [principle,] which is the elder servant of the house, appears from the signification of saying in this passage, as denoting to command, because spoken to a servant; and inasmuch as the subject treated of is concerning the disposition or orderly arrangement of the things in the natural man from the Divine [principle], it denotes to ordain and flow-in, for all that is done in the natural or external man, is ordained from the rational or internal, and is effected by influx; that the elder servant of the house is the natural principle, or the natural man, may appear from the signification of servant, as denoting what is inferior, and what serves it's superior, or, what is the same thing, denoting what is exterior, and what serves that which is interior, see n. 2541, 2567; all things appertaining to the natural man, as scientifics of every kind, are nothing but instruments of service, for they serve the rational principle, as means whereby it may think what is equitable, and will what is just and right; that the elder of the house is the natural man, may appear from what follows.

3020. "Who ministered in all that he had"—that hereby are signified the offices of the natural man, appears from the signification of ministering, and of ministering in all things, as denoting to discharge offices or duties; that the natural man in respect to the rational, or, what is the same thing, the external man in respect to the internal, is like an administrator in a house, may be seen, n. 1795; all things which are in man are circumstanced like one house, that is, like one family, in that there is who fulfils the office of head of the family, and who fulfil the offices of servants; the rational mind is what disposes all things as head of the family, and arranges them in order by influx into the natural mind, but it is the natural mind which ministers and administers; and inasmuch as the natural mind is distinct from the rational mind, and in a degree beneath it, and acts also from a certain principle proper to itself, it is called respectively the elder servant of the house, and is said to administer in all things which are therein; that the natural mind is distinct from the rational, and in an inferior degree, and in a certain principle proper to itself, may appear from the things contained therein and from its offices; the things contained therein are all scientifics, consequently also all knowledges of every kind, in a word, all and singular the things appertaining to the exterior or corporeal memory, concerning which memory, see n. 2471, 2480; to it also belongs all the imaginative principle, which is the interior sensual principle appertaining to man, and which is in greatest vigour in early age and the dawn of youth; it's likewise are all the natural affections, which man has in common with brute animals; hence it is evident what are it's offices; but the rational mind is interior: principles of knowledge contained therein are not manifest before man, but, during his life in the body, are imperceptible, viz. all and singular the things appertaining to the interior memory, concerning which memory, see n. 2470, 2471, 2472, 2473, 2474, 2489, 2490; likewise all the thinking principle, which is perceptive of what is equitable and just, of what is true and good, belongs to this mind; as also all spiritual affections, which are properly human, and by which man is distinguished from brute animals; this mind, by virtue of that thinking principle and those spiritual affections, flows into the natural mind, and stirs up the things which are therein, and views them with a kind of vision, and thereby forms judgments and conclusions. That these two minds are distinct, is very manifest from this consideration, that with many persons the natural mind has rule over the rational mind, or, what is the same thing, the external man has rule over the internal man; and that where it has not such rule, but is subservient, it is only with those who are principled in the good of charity, that is, who suffer themselves to be led of the Lord.

3021. "Place I pray thy hand under my thigh" — that hereby is signified the binding thereof as to power to the good of conjugal love, appears from the signification of hand as denoting power, concerning which see n. 878; and from the signification of thigh, as denoting the good of conjugal love, of which signification we shall speak presently; that a binding to that power is understood, appears from this consideration, that they who were bound to any thing respecting conjugal love, in conformity to ancient custom, placed the hand under the thigh of him to whom they were bound, and were thus adjured by him, and this by reason that thigh signified conjugal love, and hand signified power, or as far as could be effected; for all the parts of the human body correspond to things spiritual and celestial in the Grand Man, which is heaven, as was shewn, n. 2996, 2998, and will be further shewn, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, in the following pages: the thighs with the loins correspond to conjugal love; this was known to the most ancient people, and in consequence thereof they had several rites and ceremonies, of which this was one, that they placed the hands under the thigh, when they were bound to any good of conjugal love; the knowledge of these things, which was in highest esteem amongst the ancients, and constituted the principal part of their science and intelligence, is at this day altogether lost, insomuch that it is not now known that any such correspondence exists, and possibly some may on this account wonder, that such things are signified by the rite or ceremony here mentioned, which was enjoined in the present case, because the subject treated of is concerning the betrothing of Isaac to some one of the family of Abraham, and the performance of that office was entrusted to the elder servant. That thigh signifies by correspondence conjugal love, as was said, may also appear from other passages in the Word, as from the process which was enjoined when a woman was accused of adultery by her husband, which is thus described in Moses, "The priest shall adjure the woman with an oath of cursing, and the priest shall say unto the woman, Jehovah shall give thee for a curse and for an adjuration in the midst of the people, in Jehovah giving thy thigh to fall, and thy belly to swell. When he hath given her the water to drink, it shall come to pass, if she be defiled and hath trespassed trespass against her husband, the cursed waters shall come to bitterness in her, and her belly shall swell, and her thigh shall fall, and the woman shall be for a curse in the midst of her people," Numb. v. 21, 27; by the thigh falling was signified the evil of conjugal love, that is, adultery; the other particulars mentioned in the same process have each of them some special signification, so that there is not the least expression which does not involve some hidden meaning, howsoever surprising it may seem to man, who reads the Word without any idea of it's sanctity. It is in consequence of this signification of thigh as denoting the good of conjugal love, that frequent mention is made of coming forth from the thigh, as it is said of Jacob, "Be fruitful and multiply, a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come from thy thighs," Gen. xxxv. 11; and in another place, "Every soul that came with Jacob to Egypt, that came forth from his thigh," Gen. xlv. 26; Exod. i. 5;

and concerning Gideon, "Gideon had seventy sons, that came forth from his thigh," Judges viii. 30. And whereas the thighs and the loins signify those things which relate to conjugal love, they also signify those things which relate to love and charity, by reason that conjugal love is fundamental of all love, see n. 686, 2733, 2737, 2738, 2739, for they are from the same origin, viz. from the celestial marriage, which is that of good and truth, concerning which, see n. 2727 to 2759: that thigh signifies the good of celestial love, and the good of spiritual love, may appear from the following passage in the Apocalypse, "He that sat on the white horse, had on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, King of kings, and Lord of lords," xix. 16; that He Who sat on the white horse is the Word, consequently the Lord, Who is the Word, may be seen, n. 2760, 2761, 2762; that vesture denotes Divine Truth, see n. 2576; therefore He is called King of kings, see n. 3009; hence it is evident what is meant by thigh, viz. the Divine Good which is of His love, by virtue whereof He is also called Lord of lords, see n. 3004 to 3011; and as this denotes the Lord's quality, it is said that He had thereon a Name written, for name signifies quality, see n. 1896, 2009, 2724, 3006; so in David, "Gird thy sword upon thy thigh, powerful in thy glory and honour," Psalm xlv. 3; speaking of the Lord, where sword denotes truth combating, see n. 2799, and thigh the good of love; to gird the sword upon the thigh therefore denotes, that truth whereby combat was to be waged, should be grounded in the good of love; so in Isaiah, "Justice shall be the girdle of his loins, and truth the girdle of his thighs," xi. 5: speaking also of the Lord, where justice, as predicated of the good of love, see n. 2235, is called the girdle of the loins; and truth, as grounded in good, is called the girdle of the thighs; thus loins are predicated of the love of good, and thighs of the love of truth: again, in the same prophet, "None shall be weary nor stumble in Him, he shall not slumber nor sleep, neither is the girdle of his thighs loosed, nor the latchet of his shoes plucked off," v. 27; speaking also of the Lord, where the girdle of his thighs denotes the love of truth, as above: so in Jeremiah, "Jehovah said unto him, that he should buy a girdle of linen, and should place it on his loins, but should not draw it through the water; and he should go to Euphrates, and should hide it in a hole of the rock; and having done this, when he went, and took it from the place, it was marred," xiii. 1 to 6; where the girdle of linen denotes truth, and the placing it on the loins was a representative that truth was grounded in good; every one may see that the things here described were representative, the signification whereof cannot be known but from correspondencies, of which, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, we shall speak more particularly at the end of some of the following chapters: in like manner it cannot be known, except from correspondencies, what was signified by the things manifested in vision to Ezechiél, to Daniel, and to Nebuchadnezzar; to Ezechiél as thus described, "Over the expanse, which was above the head of the cherubs, was as the appearance of a sapphire stone, the likeness of a throne; and above the likeness of the throne, a likeness as the appearance of a man over it above; and I saw as the appearance of a lighted coal, as the appearance of fire within it round about: from the appearance of his loins and upwards and from the appearance of his loins and downwards, I saw as it were the appearance of fire, and a splendour round about it as the appearance of a rainbow, which is in a cloud in a day of rain; so was the appearance of a splendour round about; so was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of Jehovah," i. 26, 27, 28: that what is here said is representative of the Lord, and of His kingdom, may evidently appear, and that the appearance of loins above and the appearance of loins beneath, has respect to His love, is manifest from the signification of fire, as denoting love, see n. 934, and from the signification of splendour and rainbow, as denoting wisdom and intelligence derived from love, see n. 1042, 1043, 1053: to Daniel as thus described, "A man appeared to him clothed in linen, and his loins girded with gold of Uphaz, and his body was like a beryl, and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes like lamps of fire, and his arms and his feet like the brightness of polished brass," x. 5, 6; what is signified by all these particular expressions, as what by loins, what by body, what by face, by eyes, by arms, and by feet, cannot appear to any one except from representations and their correspondencies: from these it is evident, that the Lord's celestial kingdom is thus represented, in which the Divine Love is denoted by loins, and the good of wisdom which is grounded in love by gold of Uphaz with which he was girded, see n. 113, 1551, 1552: to Nebuchadnezzar as thus described, "The head of the statue was good gold; the breast and arms thereof were silver; the belly and thighs thereof were brass; the feet were part iron and part clay," Dan. ii. 32, 33; by this statue were represented the successive states of the Church: by the head, which was gold, the first state which was celestial, as being a state of love to the Lord; by the breast and arms which were silver, the second state which was spiritual, as being a state of neighbourly love or charity; by the belly and thighs which were brass, a third state, which was a state of natural good, denoted by brass, see n. 425, 1551; natural good is the good of neighbourly love or charity in a degree below spiritual good; by the feet which were iron and clay, a fourth state, which was a state of natural truth, denoted by iron, see n. 425, 426, and also of no coherence with good which is denoted by clay: from what has been said, it may appear what is signified by thighs and loins, viz. conjugal love principally, and thence all genuine love, as is evident from the passages adduced, and likewise from Gen. xxxii. 25, 32; Isaiah xx. 2, 3, 4; Nahum. ii. 1; Exod. xii. 11; Luke xii. 35, 36; in an opposite sense also are signified the loves of a contrary sort, viz. self-love and the love of the world, see 1 Kings ii. 5; Isaiah xxxii. 10, 11; Jer. xxx. 6; chap. xlviii. 37; Ezech. xxix. 7; Amos viii. 10.

3022. Verses 3, 4. And I will adjure thee by Jehovah God of heaven and God of earth, that thou take not a woman for my son of the daughters of the Canaanite, in the midst of whom I dwell: but that thou go to my land and to my nativity, and take a woman for my son Isaac. And I will adjure thee by Jehovah God of heaven and God of earth, signifies a binding most holy to the Divine [principle] which was in things supreme and in things thence derived: that thou take not a woman for my son of the daughters of the Canaanite, signifies that the rational Divine [principle] should not be conjoined to any affection which disagrees with truth: in the midst of whom I dwell, signifies things discordant in the human maternal principle which encompass [the Divine principle]: but that thou go to my land and to my nativity, signifies the celestial and spiritual Divine things which the Lord acquired to Himself: and take a woman for my son Isaac, signifies that thence was the affection of truth which should be conjoined to the affection of good of the rational principle.

3023. "I will adjure thee by Jehovah God of heaven and God of earth"—that hereby is signified a binding most holy to the Divine [principle] which was in things supreme and in things thence derived, appears from the signification of adjuring, as denoting to bind by an oath, for adjuration is nothing else but a binding, and this most holy when directed to Jehovah God of heaven and God of earth, that is, to the Divine [principle] which is above and which is beneath, or, what is the same thing, to the Divine [principle] which is in things supreme and in things which are thence derived: Jehovah God of heaven, as spoken of the Lord, is Jehovah Himself who is called the Father, from whom He was conceived, consequently who was His Divine Essence, for conception itself gave the very essence itself from whence it was: Jehovah God of earth is in this case Jehovah who is called Son, consequently His Human essence, this existing from the former, when the Lord made it also Divine; thus by Jehovah God of heaven is signified the Divine [principle] which is in things supreme; and by Jehovah God of earth the Divine [principle] which is in things thence derived. But the Lord is called Jehovah God of heaven by virtue of His Divine [principle] which is in the heavens, and God of earth by virtue of His Divine [principle] which is in the earths; the Divine [principle] in the heavens is also what is with man in his internals, but the Divine [principle] in the earths is what is with man in his externals; for the internals of man are his heaven, because by them he is conjoined with the angels, but his externals are earth, for by them he is conjoined with man, see n. 82, 913, 1411, 1733; when man is regenerated, then the former flow into the latter, and the latter are derived from the former: hence also it may be known what the internals of the Church are, and what are its externals.

3024. "That thou take not a woman for my son of the daughters of the Canaanite"—that hereby is signified that the rational Divine [principle] should not be conjoined to any affection which disagrees with truth, appears from the signification of taking a woman, as denoting to be joined together by a covenant of marriage; and from the signification of my son, viz. Isaac, as denoting the Lord's rational Divine [principle], concerning which see n. 1893, 2066, 2083, 2630; and from the signification of daughters, as denoting affections, see n. 489, 490, 491, 568, 2362; and from the signification of Canaanite, as denoting evil, see n. 1444, 1573, 1574; hence it is that the daughters of the Canaanite denote affections which disagree with truth. The subject here treated of is concerning Truth Divine which was to be adjoined to Good Divine of the Lord's rational principle, as may be seen from the contents, n. 3013; by a woman who was to be associated by a covenant marriage, is meant that very truth, which was to be called forth from the natural man by a common way; by my son is meant the Lord's rational principle as to good, to which it was to be adjoined or associated; hence it may be known, that by not taking a woman for my son from the daughters of the Canaanite, is signified, that the Lord's rational Divine principle should not be conjoined to any affection which disagrees with truth; all conjunction of truth with good is effected by affection, for no truth ever enters into man's rational principle, and is there conjoined with good, except by affection, inasmuch as in affection is the good of love which alone conjoins, see n. 1895, as may be known to every one who reflects. That the daughters of the Canaanite signify affections which disagree with truth, that is, signify affections of what is false, may appear from the signification of daughters; for mention is made of daughters in many passages of the Word, and every one may see that in those passages are not meant daughters, as where mention is made of the daughter of Zion, of the daughter of Jerusalem, of the daughter of Tarshish, of the daughter of my people, denoting affections of good and of truth, as has been shewn in the passages above adduced: and whereas they denote the affections of good and of truth they denote also Churches, for Churches are Churches by reason of those affections; hence it is that by the daughter of Zion is signified the Church celestial, and this from the affection of good, whereas by the daughter of Jerusalem is signified the Church spiritual, and this from the affection of truth, n. 2362; the same is also signified by the daughter of my people, Isaiah xxii. 4; Jer. vi. 14, 26; chap. viii. 19, 21, 22; chap. ix. 1; chap. xiv. 17; Lam. ii. 11; chap. iv. 6; Ezech. xiii. 17. Hence it is evident what is signified by the daughters of the nations, as by the daughters of the Philistines, the daughters of Egypt, the daughters of Tyre and Sidon, the daughters of Edom, the daughters of Moab, the daughters of the Chaldeans and of Babel, and the daughters of Sodom, viz.; the affections of what is evil and false, wherein their religious principles were grounded, consequently their religious principles themselves: that this is the signification of daughters, may appear from the following passages, "The daughters of the nations shall lament Egypt, wail for the multitude of Egypt, and cause her to descend, her and the daughters of magnificent nations to the earth beneath with them that go down into the pit," xxxii. 16, 18; where the daughters of magnificent nations denote the affections of evil; so in Samuel, "Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon, lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph, 2 Sam. i. 20: so in Ezechiel, "Thou hast committed whoredom with the sons of Egypt: I gave thee into the hand of them that hate thee, the daughters of the Philistines, before thy wickedness was discovered, as the time of reproach of the daughters of Syria, and of all round about her, of the daughters of the Philistines that despise thee round about," xvi. 26, 27, 57; that daughters are not here meant, every one may see, but that by daughters are understood the religious principles of such as are signified by Philistines, whose quality is to talk much about faith without leading the life of faith, see n. 1197, 1198; whence also they are called uncircumcised, that is, void of charity. So in Jeremiah, "Go up to Gilead, and take Balm, O virgin daughter of Egypt. Make to thyself vessels of migration, thou inhabitant daughter of Egypt. The daughter of Egypt was ashamed, she was given into the hand of the people of the north," xli. 11, 19, 24; where the daughter of Egypt denotes the affections of reasoning from scientifics concerning the truths of faith whether they be truths or not; thus it denotes the religious principle thence arising, which is such, that nothing is believed but what is apprehended by the senses, consequently nothing of the truth of faith, see n. 215, 232, 233, 1164, 1165, 1186, 1385, 2196, 2203, 2209, 2568, 2588. So in Isaiah, "Thou shalt no more exult, O oppressed daughter of Sidon," xxiii. 12: and in David, "The daughter of Tyre, in a gift, the rich of the people shall intreat thy faces," Psalm xlv. 12; what is meant by the daughter of Sidon and the daughter of Tyre, is manifest from the signification of Sidon and of Tyre, concerning which, see n. 1201. So in Jeremiah, "Rejoice and be glad, O daughter of Edom; thine iniquity is consummated, O daughter of Zion, he will no more cause thee to remove, thine iniquity will be visited, O daughter of Edom," Lam. iv. 21, 22. Again in Isaiah, "As a wandering bird, a nest cast forth, shall be the daughter of Moab," xvi. 2: again, "Come down and sit on the dust, O virgin daughter of Babel; sit on the ground, there is no throne, O daughter of the Chaldeans. Sit silent, and enter into darkness, O daughter of the Chaldeans, because thou shalt no longer be called the lady of kingdoms," xlvii. 1, 5: and in Jeremiah, "A people shall come from the north, put in array like a man to the battle, upon thee, O daughter of Babel," l. 41, 42: again, "The daughter of Babel is like a threshing floor, it is time to thresh her," li. 33: So in Zechariah, "Deliver thyself O Zion, that dwellest with the daughter of Babel," ii. 7: and in David, "The daughter of Babel is vastated," Psalm cxxxvii. 8: and in Ezekiel, "Thy sisters, Sodom and her daughters shall return to their ancient [state]; and Samaria and her daughters shall return to their ancient [state]," xvi. 55; that in these passages by daughters are not meant daughters, but affections which disagree with the truth, consequently religious principles which are thence derived, every one may plainly see; but what those religious principles are, appears from the signification of those people, as from the signification of Edom, of Moab, of the Chaldeans, of Babel, of Sodom, and of Samaria, which have been abundantly treated of in the foregoing explication of Genesis: hence then it appears what is signified in this passage by the daughters of the Canaanite. That they should not contract marriages with the daughters of the Canaanites, had respect also to this spiritual law, that what is good and what is false, and what is evil and what is true, should not be joined together, for thence comes profanation; the prohibition was also representative of that thing, concerning which see Deut. vii. 3; and in Malachi, "Judah hath profaned the holiness of Jehovah, because he hath loved and married the daughter of a strange God," ii. 11.

3025. In the midst of whom I dwell—that hereby are signified things discordant in the human maternal principle which encompass, appears from the signification of dwelling in the midst, viz. of the Canaanite as denoting those things which are round about, or which encompass; and that these are discordant with truth, appears from what was said above concerning the signification of the daughters of the Canaanite: that these things are what the Lord received hereditarily from the maternal principle, and which He afterwards expelled when He made His Human [principle] Divine, may appear from what has been said and shewn above on the same subject, n. 1414, 1444, 1573, 2159, 2574, 2649.

3026. "But that thou go to my land and to my nativity"—that hereby is signified to the celestial and spiritual Divine things, which the Lord acquired to Himself, appears from the signification of land (or earth) as denoting the celestial principle of love, concerning which see n. 1413, 1607; and from the signification of nativity, as denoting the spiritual principle of love, concerning which see n. 1145, 1255; in the present case denoting celestial and spiritual Divine things, because treating of the Lord; which things, that He acquired them to Himself by His own proper power, may be seen, n. 1815, 1921, 2025, 2026, 2083, 2500.

3027. "And take a woman for my son Isaac"—that hereby is signified that thence was the affection of truth which should be conjoined to the affection of good of the rational principle, appears from what was said above, n. 3024.

3028. Verses 5, 6. And the servant said unto him, perhaps a woman is not willing to go after me to this land; shall I by bringing back bring back thy son to the land whence thou camest forth? and Abraham said unto him, take heed to thyself lest perhaps thou bring back my son thither. The servant said unto him, signifies the Lord's perception concerning the natural man: perhaps a woman is not willing to go after me to this land, signifies the doubt of the natural man concerning that affection, whether it was separable: shall I by bringing back bring back thy son to the land whence thou camest forth, signifies whether it could nevertheless be conjoined to Good Divine of the rational principle: Abraham said unto him, signifies the Lord's perception from the Divine [principle]: take heed to thyself lest perhaps thou bring back my son thither, signifies that it could not in any wise be conjoined.

3029. "The servant said unto him"—that hereby is signified the Lord's perception concerning the natural man, appears from the signification of saying, as denoting to perceive, concerning which see 1791, 1815, 1819, 1822, 1898, 1919, 2080, 2506, 2515, 2552; and from the signification of servant in this passage, as denoting the natural man, concerning which see n. 3019, 3020; whatsoever is done in the natural man, and what is the quality of the natural man, this is perceived in the rational principle, for that which is beneath in man is perceived by that which is above, see n. 2654; hence it is that by the servant saying to him, is signified the Lord's perception concerning the natural man.

sent case truth from the natural principle, which was to be conjoined to Good Divine of the rational principle; and whereas all conjunction is effected by affection, as was said above, n. 3024; therefore by woman is signified the affection of that truth; and from the signification of going after me or following to this land, as denoting to be separated from the natural and conjoined to the rational principle, for land here, as above, n. 3026, is the good of love which is of the rational principle: that doubt is denoted, is manifest from its being said, "Perhaps she is not willing." From what has been said above it is evident what is implied in those words, and in what follows to verse 8, &c., for the better understanding whereof, it may be expedient to make a few observations: the genuine rational principle is by virtue of good, and exists by virtue of truth; good flows in by an internal way, but truth by an external way; good conjoins itself thus with truth in the rational principle, and causes the rational principle to be; unless good therein be conjoined with truth, there is no rational principle, although it appears otherwise by reason that man 'can reason, see n. 1944; this is the common way by which the rational principle is formed with man: The Lord, inasmuch as He was born like another man, and was willing to be instructed like another man, was willing also in like manner to make His rational principle Divine, viz. as to good by an influx from His Divine [principle] by an internal way, and as to truth by an influx by an external way; when therefore the rational principle as to good was formed, so as to be in a state of receiving truth, which is meant by what is said in the beginning of this chapter, "Abraham being old came to days, and Jehovah blessed Abraham in all things," by which words it was shewn is signified, when the state was at hand that the Lord's Human [principle] should be made Divine, and all things were disposed into Divine Order, see n. 3016, 3017; it now follows, that to the good of the rational principle truth should be conjoined, and this, as was said, by a common way, that is, by scientifics and knowledges from the natural man: the essential good of the rational principle, which is formed by an internal way, is the essential ground, but truth is the seed which is to be sown in that ground; there is no other possible method whereby the genuine rational principle can be born: In order that this principle might in like manner exist with the Lord, and might be made Divine by His own proper power, the Lord came into the world, and was willing to be born as another man? otherwise He might have assumed a human [principle] without being born, as was frequently the case in ancient times when He appeared to men: these are the things contained in this chapter, viz. how truth called forth from the natural man was conjoined to the good of the rational principle, and as the good therein was

Divine, the truth also therein was made Divine; these things are most obscure, so as not to be intelligible to man, especially to him who doth not know that the rational principle is somewhat distinct from the natural; and who therefore doth not know that the rational principle is successively formed, and this by knowledges; nevertheless they are things of easy apprehension to those, who have any knowledge concerning the rational and natural man, and who are in any degree enlightened: the angels see them all as in clear day. In order for the obtaining an idea of these things, see what was said and shewn above on the subject, viz. that the rational principle as to truth is formed by influx into sciences and knowledges, n. 1495, 1563, 1900, 1964; that it is not born from sciences and knowledges, but from the affection thereof, n. 1895, 1900; that sciences and knowledges are only vessels of good, n. 1469, 1496; that vain and unprofitable scientifics must be destroyed, n. 1489, 1492, 1499, 1500; that in the rational principle the affection of good is as the soul in the affection of truth, n. 2072; what is the affection of rational truth and of scientific truth, n. 2503; that by knowledges the external man is joined to the internal, or the rational to the natural, when knowledges are implanted in things celestial which are of love and charity, n. 1450, 1451, 1453, 1616.

3031. "Shall I by bringing back bring back thy son to the land whence thou camest forth"—that hereby is signified whether it could nevertheless be conjoined to Good Divine of the rational principle, may appear from what was said above concerning Abraham, and concerning the land whence he came forth, see n. 1353, 1356, 1992, 2559, whereby it is manifest that the land whence Abraham came, was Syria, where was another ancient Church, which was called Hebrew from Eber it's founder, see n. 1238, 1241, 1327, 1343; but this Church about the time of Abraham also declined from the truth, and this to such a degree amongst certain houses therein, that they were altogether ignorant of Jehovah, and worshipped other gods; this is the land which is here meant, concerning which the servant asked Abraham whether he should bring back his son to the land whence he came forth; hence it is, that by land is here signified the affection which does not agree with truth; and this being signified by land, by bringing back the son, or what is the same thing, by there taking for him a woman, and there abiding with her, is signified to conjoin an affection not agreeing with truth with Good Divine of the rational principle; but that this could not be done, is declared in Abraham's answer which follows.

3032. "Abraham said unto him"—that hereby is signified the Lord's perception from the Divine [principle], appears from the signification of saying, as denoting to perceive, concerning which see above, n. 3029; and from the representation of Abraham, as denoting the Lord as to the Divine Human [principle], from which that perception was.

3033. "Take heed to thyself lest perhaps thou bring back my son thither"—that hereby is signified that it could not in any wise be conjoined, appears from what was said above, n. 3031; where it was explained what is signified in the internal sense, by bringing back the son to the land from which Abraham came forth. That an affection not agreeing with truth cannot be conjoined to good which is of the rational principle, may appear from what was said above concerning the conjunction of good and truth, or, what is the same thing, concerning the celestial marriage, n. 2173, 2507, 2727 to 2759; that therefore the ancients instituted marriage between the affection of good and of truth, may be seen, n. 1904: also that what is false can in no wise be conjoined with good, nor what is true with evil, because they are of contrary qualities and characters, n. 2388, 2429, 2531; and that good is insinuated into the knowledges of truth, as it's recipient vessels, and thereby conjunction is effected, n. 1469, 1496, 1832, 1903, 1950, 2063, 2189, 2261, 2269, 2428, 2434, 2697. That there can be no conjunction of what is false with good, nor of what is true with evil, but only of what is false with evil, and of what is true with good, has been given me to perceive to the life; and it was perceived that the case is thus; when man has the affection of good, that is, when he wills good from the heart, in case any thing is to be thought of which is to be willed and to be done, then his good-will flows into his thought, and there applies and joins itself to the knowledges which are therein as to it's recipient vessels, and by that conjunction impels him so to think, will, and act; it is, as it were, an ingrafting of good in truths, or in the knowledges of truth; but when man has not the affection of good but the affection of evil, that is, when he wills evil, as when he believes all to be good which favours himself, that he may become great and rich, and thus enjoy honour and wealth, and this is his end, in this case when any thing is to be thought of which should be willed and be done, his will in like manner flows into his thought, and there excites the knowledges which appear like truth, and thus impels him to think, to will, and to act; and this by a wrong application of knowledges, and by considering certain general principles, which he has drawn from the literal sense of the Word, or from some other science, as applicable in every sense; thus it is evil which is copulated with what is false, for in this case the truth which was therein is deprived of all the essence of truth: such in another life, howsoever in the life of the body they may appear better instructed than others, are in reality more stupid, and in proportion as they are in the persuasion of being in the truth, so far they induce darkness in others ; such have at times been present with me, but they were not susceptible of any affection of good from any principle of truth, howsoever truths were recalled to their mind, with which they were acquainted in the life of the body, for evil appertained to them, wherewith truths could not be conjoined ; neither can these come into consort with the good, but if any thing of natural good appertains to them, they are vastated to such a degree, until they know nothing of truth, and then there is insinuated into the remaining good somewhat of truth, so much as the scantiness of the remaining good can contain. But they who have been in the affection of good from the heart, these are receptive of all truth, according to the quantity and quality of good appertaining to them.

3034. Verse 7. Jehovah God of heaven, Who received me from the house of my father, and from the land of my nativity, and Who spake to me, and Who sware to me, saying, to thy seed will I give this land, He shall send his angel before thee, and thou shalt receive a woman for my son thence. Jehovah God of heaven, signifies the Lord's essential Divine [principle] ; Who received me from the house of my father, and from the land of my nativity, signifies by virtue of Whom the Lord delivered Himself from the maternal principles as to evils and as to falses : and Who spake to me, and Who sware to me, saying, signifies from Whom He had His Divine will and understanding : to thy seed will I give this land, signifies Divine Truth appertaining to the Lord's Human [principle] : He shall send his angel before thee, signifies Divine Providence : and thou shalt receive a woman for my son thence, signifies that the affection of truth indeed was thence, but from a new source.

3035. "Jehovah God of heaven"—that hereby is signified the Lord's essential Divine [principle], appears from what was said above, n. 3023, viz. that Jehovah God of heaven is the Lord's essential Divine [principle] ; for by Jehovah Who is so often named in the Word of the Old Testament, the Lord alone is understood, inasmuch as all and singular the things contained therein, in an internal sense, treat concerning Him, and all and singular the rites of the Church represented Him, see n. 1736, 2921 ; and moreover the most ancient people who were of the Church celestial, understood by Jehovah no other than the Lord, see n. 1343. In the literal sense, it appears in this and in other passages, as if another who is superior is meant by Jehovah, but such is the sense of the letter, that it distinguishes what the internal sense unites, and this by reason that man, who is to be instructed from the sense of the letter, cannot have an idea of one unless he has first an idea of several, for one with man is formed of several, or, what is the same thing, that which exists together is formed of things successive ; there are several [things or principles] in the Lord, and all are Jehovah :

hence it is that the sense of the letter distinguishes [or makes distinction], whereas heaven in no sort distinguishes, but acknowledges one God with a simple idea, nor any other than the Lord.

3036. "Who received me from the house of my father and from the land of my nativity"—that hereby is signified by virtue of Whom the Lord delivered Himself from the maternal principles as to evils and as to falses, appears from the signification of the house of my father in this passage, and of the land of nativity, as denoting the maternal principle, or what was hereditary from the mother, from which came the evil and false principle against which the Lord fought, and which He expelled, and thus made His Human [principle] Divine by His own proper power, see what was said above, n. 3031, concerning the house and land whence Abram came, and what was said above, n. 1414, 1444, concerning the Lord's hereditary principle, as being Divine from Jehovah, and from the mother evil; and that He fought against the evil hereditary from the mother, but that He had no actual evil, n. 1444, 1573; and that He put off all that was hereditary from the mother, so as at length not to be her son, n. 2159, 2574, 2649; this hereditary principle, viz. what was from the mother, is what is signified in an internal sense by the house of my father and the land of nativity; by the house of my father is signified the hereditary maternal principle as to evil, and by the land of nativity the hereditary maternal principle as to falses, for where evil is there are falses, they being conjoined to each other; that the Lord expelled them by His own proper power, see n. 1616, 1813, 1921, 2025, 2026, 2083, 2523.

3037. "And who spake to me, and who sware to me, saying,"—that hereby is signified from whom He had His Divine Will and Understanding, appears from the signification of speaking, as denoting to perceive, concerning which see n. 3029, and also to will, see n. 2626; and from the signification of swearing, as denoting confirmation from the Divine [principle], and as being predicated of truths which are of the understanding, see n. 2842. When it is said of Jehovah that He speaks, in an internal sense is meant that He wills; and when it is said of Jehovah that He swears, in an internal sense is meant that He understands it to be true; thus by swearing is signified to understand when it is predicated of Jehovah, as may also appear from the passages adduced from the Word, n. 2842.

3038. "To thy seed will I give this land"—that hereby is signified Divine Truth which appertained to the Lord's Human [principle], appears from the signification of seed, as denoting faith grounded in charity, and also those who are principled in such faith, concerning which, see n. 1025, 1447, 1610, 2848; and whereas all the good and truth of faith is from the Lord, it is Divine Truth Itself which is meant by seed in a supreme sense; and from the signification of this land, viz. Canaan, as denoting heaven or the Lord's kingdom, see n. 1413, 1437, 1607; and whereas it denotes heaven or the Lord's kingdom, it is the Lord's Divine Human [principle] Itself which is meant by the land of Canaan in a supreme sense; for the essential Divine [principle] cannot flow into heaven except through the Lord's Divine Human [principle]; which also the Lord has plainly declared in Matthew, where He says, "All things are delivered unto Me of My Father, and no one knoweth the Son but the Father, neither knoweth any one the Father but the Son, and he to whom the Son hath willed to reveal him," xi. 27: and in John, "No one hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son Who is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared Him," i. 18; the Son is the Lord's Divine Human [principle]: He who believes that any other Father but the Lord is adored in heaven, is much deceived.

3039. "He shall send His angel before thee"—that hereby is signified the Divine Providence, appears from the signification of angel in the Word, as denoting the Lord, but what [principle] of the Lord is denoted by the angel, appears from the series of things treated of, concerning which, see n. 1925; that the Divine Providence is here signified, is manifest. The reason why by angels in the Word the Lord is meant, is, because all that is spoken in the Word by the prophets and others under the dictate of the angels, is from the Lord, that is, is of the Lord Himself; the angels in heaven also acknowledge and perceive that nothing of good and truth is from themselves, but from the Lord, insomuch that they hold all things in aversion which induce another idea; hence it is, that by angels, viz. the good, the Lord is meant, but what [principle] of the Lord, appears from the series of things treated of.

3040. "And thou shalt receive a woman for my son thence"—that hereby is signified that the affection of truth was indeed thence, but from a new source, appears from the signification of woman, as denoting the affection of truth, concerning which see above; for by Rebecca, who is treated of in this chapter, is represented Divine Truth which was to be conjoined to Divine Good of the Lord's rational principle, which is Isaac; that the affection of truth is thence, viz. from those things which are signified by the house of my father, and the land of my nativity, but from a new source, cannot as yet be fully explained; in what follows however the subject is much treated of; we shall here only give a brief explication of it; every affection of truth in the natural man exists by influx from the affection of good out of the rational principle or through the rational principle from the Divine; the affection of truth, which exists by that influx in the natural man, in the beginning is not the affection of genuine truth, for genuine truth comes successively, and is successively substituted in the place of former truths, which were not truths in themselves, but only means leading to genuine truths; from this brief explication it may appear what is meant when it is said that the affection of truth is indeed thence, but from a new source.

3041. Verses 8, 9. And if the woman is not willing to go after thee, and thou art free from this my adjuration, only thou may not bring back my son thither. And the servant placed his hand under the thigh of Abraham his lord; and he adjured him upon this word. If the woman is not willing to go after thee, signifies here, as above, if the affection of truth should not be separated: and thou art free from my adjuration, signifies the freedom [or free principle] which the natural man has; only thou may not bring back my son thither, signifies here, as above, that thence was no conjunction: and the servant placed his hand under the thigh of Abraham his lord, signifies here, as above, a binding of the natural man as to power to the good of conjugal love: and he adjured him upon this word, signifies a sacrament.

3043. "And thou art free from my adjuration"—that hereby is signified the freedom [or free principle] which the natural man has, appears from the signification of servant, of whom these words are spoken, as denoting the natural man, see n. 3019; and from the signification of being free if the woman was not willing to follow, as denoting in a proximate sense, that he would be in no binding, if the affection of truth should not be separated; that these things imply the freedom [free principle] which the natural man has, is evident, for the affection of truth which is here treated of, and also the separation, is predicated, in the internal sense, of the natural man; in the historical sense indeed the coherence is otherwise, but in the internal sense, it is as here described. Concerning man's freedom [or free principle] see what was said and shewn above, see n. 892, 905, 1937, 1947, 2744, 2870, to 2893, whence it is evident how the case is in respect to freedom: freedom [or a free principle] is predicated of the natural man, but not so of the rational, for through the rational into the natural man flows-in good from the Lord in celestial freedom; the natural man is what receives that good, and in order that he may receive, and thereby be conjoined to the celestial freedom [or free principle] which flows-in through the rational, the natural man is left in freedom [or a free principle] : for freedom is of love or affection, and if the natural man does not receive the affection of truth from the affection of good which flows-in, he is in no case conjoined to the rational ; thus it is in respect to man, who is reformed of the Lord by freedom [or a free principle], see n. 1937, 1947, 2876, 2877, 2878, 2881. In respect to the Lord, He also left the natural principle in freedom, when He made His rational principle Divine as to truth, that is, when He adjoined Divine Truth to Divine Good of the rational principle, for He was willing to make His Human [part or principle] Divine by the common way ; the common way is such as has place with man who is reformed and regenerated ; the real reformation and regeneration of man is therefore a kind of image ; man also by reformation and regeneration is made new, hence he is said to be begotten anew, and created anew, and in proportion as he is reformed, so far he has in himself as it were the Divine [principle] ; but there is this difference, that the Lord made Himself Divine by and from His own proper power, whereas man cannot do any thing of or from his own proper power, but from the Lord ; it is said as it were the Divine [principle], because man is only a recipient of life, whereas the Lord as to each Essence is Life Itself, see n. 1954, 2021, 2658, 2706, 3001.

3044. "Only thou mayest not bring back my son thither"—that hereby is signified that thence was no conjunction, appears from what was said above, n. 3031, 3033, where the same words occur.

3045. "And the servant placed his hand under the thigh of Abraham his lord"—that hereby is signified a binding of the natural man as to power to the good of conjugal love, appears from what was said above, n. 3021, where also the same words occur.

3046. "And he adjured him upon this word"—that hereby is signified a sacrament, appears from the signification of adjuring as denoting a binding, and indeed the most holy, because by Jehovah God of heaven and God of earth, concerning which, see n. 3023, thus denoting a sacrament, for a sacrament is nothing else but a binding.

3047. Verse 10. And the servant took ten camels from the camels of his lord, and went, and every good thing of his lord in his hand, and he arose, and went to Aram Naharaim, to the city of Nahor. The servant took ten camels from the camels of his lord, and went, signifies common Divine scientifics in the natural man and every good thing of his lord in his hand, signifies the goodnesses and truths of those scientifics with him : and arose, signifies elevation ; and went to Aram Naharaim, signifies the knowledges of truth thence ; to the city of Nahor, signifies doctrinals related thereto.

3048. "And the servant took ten camels from the camels of his lord, and went"—that hereby are signified common Divine scientifics in the natural man, appears from the signification of servant here, as denoting the natural man, concerning which, see above, n. 3019, 3020; and from the signification of ten, as denoting remains, which; that they are goodnesses and truths with man, stored up from the Lord, may be seen, n. 468, 530, 560, 561, 660, 661, 1050, 1906, 2284; and when ten, or remains, are predicated of the Lord, they are the Divine things which the Lord acquired to Himself, as may be seen, 1738, 1906; and from the signification of camels, as denoting common scientifics, which are said to be ten, as being Divine or acquired by the Lord; also from the camels being camels of his lord; by his going is signified initiation thereby, which is the subject treated of in this chapter: the process of the conjunction of truth with good in the Lord's Divine rational principle is here treated of, and first the process of initiation is described, n. 3012, 3013, in a series according to it's quality; in the present verse is shewn, that the Lord in the natural man separated those things which were from Himself, that is, which were Divine, from those things which were from the maternal principle; those things which were from Himself, or which were Divine, are the things whereby initiation was effected, and are here called ten camels from the camels of his lord; hence it is, that in the following verses much mention is made of camels, as where it is said, that he made the camels fall down on their knees, without the city, verse 11; that Rebecca also gave drink to the camels, verses 14, 19, 20; that they were brought into the house, and that straw and provender were given them, verses 31, 32; and further, that Rebecca and her damsels rode upon the camels, verse 61; and that Isaac saw the camels coming; and when Rebecca saw Isaac, that she fell from the camel, verses 63, 64; the reason why they are so often mentioned is on account of the internal sense, in which they signify the common scientifics, which are in the natural man, from which comes the affection of truth, which is to be initiated in the affection of good in the rational principle, and this according to a common way, as was shewn above; for the rational principle as to truth can in no wise be born and perfected without scientifics and knowledges. That camels signify common scientifics, appears from other passages in the Word where they are mentioned, as in Isaiah, "The prophetic [word or declaration] of the beasts of the south: in the land of straitness and of anguish, from whence the young lion and the old lion, the viper and fiery flying serpent, they carry their wealth on the shoulders of young asses, and their treasures on the back of camels, to the people they do not profit; and the Egyptian shall help in vain and to no purpose," xxx. 6, 7; where the beasts of the south denote those who are in the light of knowledges, or in knowledges, but in a life of evil; to carry their wealth on the shoulders of young asses denotes the knowledges appertaining to their rational principle. That a young ass is rational truth, may be seen, n. 2781; their treasures on the back of camels denote the knowledges appertaining to their natural principle, the back of camels is the natural principle, the camels themselves are the common scientifics which are therein, treasures are the knowledges which they hold as precious; by the Egyptian helping in vain and to no purpose, is signified that sciences are of no use to them; that Egypt is science, may be seen, n. 1164, 1165, 1186, 1462, 2588; that camels here are not camels, is evident, for it is said that the young lion and the old lion carry their treasures on the back of camels, by which expression every one may see that some arcana of the Church is signified. Again, in the same prophet, "The prophetic [word or declaration] of the desert of the sea; thus saith the Lord, go, set a watchman, he shall declare what he shall see; and he saw a chariot, a pair of horsemen, a chariot of an ass, a chariot of a camel, and he hearkened a hearkening; he answered and said, Babel is fallen, is fallen," xxi. 1, 6, 7, 9; the desert of the sea denotes the vanity of the sciences which are not for use; the chariot of an ass denotes a heap of particular scientifics; the chariot of a camel denotes a heap of common scientifics, which are in the natural man: the vain reasonings which appertain to those who are signified by Babel, are what are thus described. Again, in the same prophet, "Thy heart shall dilate itself, because the multitude of the sea shall be converted to thee, the wealth of the Gentiles shall come to thee; abundance of camels shall cover thee, the dromedaries of Midian and Ephraim, all these shall come from Sheba, they shall carry gold and incense, and shall shew forth the praises of Jehovah," lx. 5, 6; speaking of the Lord, and of the Divine celestial and spiritual things in His natural principle; the multitude of the sea denotes the immense plenty of natural truth, the wealth of the Gentiles the immense plenty of natural good; abundance of camels denotes the abundance of common scientifics; gold and incense denote goodnesses and truths, which are the praises of Jehovah; from Sheba denotes from the celestial things of love and of faith, see n. 113, 117, 1171: the queen of Sheba coming to Solomon to Jerusalem with exceeding great riches, with camels carrying spices, and very much gold, and precious stone, 1 Kings x. 1, 2., represented the wisdom and intelligence which was added to the Lord, Who in the internal sense is Solomon in this passage; the camels carrying spices, gold, and precious stone, are those things which are of wisdom and intelligence in the natural man. So in Jeremiah, "To Arabia and to the kingdoms of Habor, which Nebuchadnezzar king of Babel hath smitten; arise ye, and go up to Arabia and lay waste the sons of the east; they shall take their tents, their curtains, and all their vessels, and they shall take away from them their camels; and their camels shall be for a prey, and I will disperse them to every wind," xlix. 28, 29, 32; in this passage, Arabia and the kingdoms of Habor, in an opposite sense, denote those who are principled in the knowledges of things celestial and spiritual, for no other end or use than that they may be reputed wise and intelligent by themselves and the world; the camels which should be taken away from them, should be for a prey, and should be dispersed to every wind, are in general the scientifics and knowledges of goodness and truth, which are also taken away from them, in the life of the body by their believing things contrary thereto, and in another life entirely. So in Zechariah, "The plague with which Jehovah shall smite all people, who shall fight against Jerusalem; thus shall be the plague of the horse, of the mule, of the camel, of the ass, and of every beast," xiv. 12, 15; where the plague of the horse, of the mule, of the camel, and of the ass, denotes the privation of things intellectual, which thus succeed in order from things rational to things natural; what is signified by horse, may be seen, n. 2761, 2762, what by mule, n. 2781, what by ass, n. 2781; camels denote common scientifics in the natural man. The same was signified by the plague in Egypt, which was upon "the cattle in the field, upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the camels, upon herd and upon flock," Exod. ix. 2, 3. From these passages it may appear that by camels, in the internal sense of the Word, are signified common scientifics which are of the natural man. Common scientifics are those which comprehend in them several particulars, and these particulars comprehend singulars, and form in common the natural man as to his intellectual part.

• 3049. "And every good thing of his lord in his hand"—that hereby are signified the goodnesses and truths of those scientifics with him, appears from the signification of every good thing of his lord, as denoting both good and truth, for truth in itself is good, because derived from good; truth is the form of good, that is, when good is formed that it may be intellectually perceived, then it is called truth; and from the signification of hand, as denoting power, concerning which see n. 878, consequently which were with him: common scientifics are not good in themselves, nor alive, but the affection thereof causes them to be good and to live, for in this case they have respect to use; no one is affected with any scientific, or truth, except on account of use, use making it good; but such as the use is, such is the good.

3050. "And he arose"—that hereby is signified elevation, appears from the signification of arising, as implying somewhat of elevation wherever it is spoken of, see n. 2041, 2785, 2912, 2927, in the present case, that Divine Truth derived from scientifics should be initiated in Divine Good of the rational principle.

3051. "And went to Aram Naharaim"—that hereby are signified the knowledges of truth thence, appears from the signification of Aram or Syria, as denoting the knowledges of good, concerning which see n. 1232, 1234; but Aram Naharaim, or Syria of rivers, signifies the knowledges of truth from Naharaim or rivers, because rivers signify intelligence, which is of the knowledges of truth, as may appear from the passages adduced from the Word, n. 108, 109, 2702, and from several others, of which, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, we shall speak elsewhere.

3052. "To the city of Nahor"—that hereby are signified doctrinals related thereto, appears from the signification of a city, as denoting doctrinals, see n. 402, 2451; and from the representation of Nahor, as denoting what is related; for Nahor was the brother of Abram, and from him came Bethuel, of whom was Rebecca: scientifics and doctrinals are distinct from each other in this, that doctrinals are grounded in [or derived from] scientifics, the former having respect to uses, and being procured by reflection from scientifics: they are here said to be related, by reason of their derivation from things Divine.

3053. Verse 11. And he made the camels fall down on their knees, without the city, at a well of waters, near the time of evening, near the time that the drawers [of water] came forth. He made the camels fall down on their knees, signifies the holy disposing of common scientifics: without the city, signifies removal from doctrinals: at a well of waters, signifies to receive the truths of faith: near the time of evening, signifies a more obscure state on the occasion: near the time that the drawers came forth, signifies a state of instruction.

3055. "Without the city"—that hereby is signified removal from doctrinals, appears from the signification of city, as denoting doctrinals, see n. 402, 2451; without [or out of] which, it is evident, denotes without [or out of] doctrinals, thus removal from them.

3055½. "At a well of waters"—that hereby is signified to receive the truths of faith, appears from the signification of a well of waters, as denoting the Word, also doctrine from the Word, consequently also essential truth, see n. 2702, in the present case as denoting the truths of faith.

3056. "Near the time of evening"—that hereby is signified a more obscure state on the occasion, appears from the signification of time, as denoting state, see n. 2625, 2788, 2837; and from the signification of evening, as denoting what is obscure; for evening in the Word signifies the state which precedes the last state of the Church when it comes to it's close, which last state is called night, and also it signifies the first state of a newly rising Church, which is called morning, see n. 2323; in each sense it denotes what is obscure; but in the present case it denotes the obscurity which precedes morning.

3057. "Near the time that the drawers came forth"—that hereby is signified a state of instruction, appears from the signification of time, as denoting state, see above, n. 3056; and from the signification of a drawer, or one that draws, viz. water, as denoting to be instructed, of which we shall speak presently. What has been said hitherto from n. 3054, is what is signified in the internal sense by the things which are related historically in this verse; but what each particular expression involves in one series, does not easily appear to any one who is not instructed concerning the natural man, and concerning the scientifics and doctrinals therein, and also how truths are elevated thence into the rational principle, and become rational; and still less does it appear, unless he knows what is the quality of the rational principle in respect to the natural, or what is the quality of the things which are in the rational principle in respect to those which are in the natural; the things which are in the rational principle do not appear before a man whilst he lives in the body; for the things which are in the natural principle are what come to be perceivable, and seldom the things which are in the rational principle, except by a certain species of light illuminating the things which are in the natural principle, or as an influent faculty, whereby the things appertaining to the thinking principle are disposed to order, and as somewhat perceptive of the object which the mind looks upon; unless these and several things besides be known, the contents of this verse can hardly be explained so as to be apprehended; as for instance, that there is a holy disposing of common scientifics, and at the same time a removal from doctrinals, to receive the truths of faith, and on this occasion that there is an obscure state, and that such is a state of instruction: nevertheless it is allowable briefly to declare, so far as may be apprehended, how the case is in this respect with man when he is reformed of the Lord, because the reformation of man is a kind of image of what passed with the Lord when He was in the world, as was said above, n. 3043; during man's reformation, the common [things or principles] which are in his natural man, are disposed of the Lord to a correspondence with those [things or principles] which are in heaven; what correspondence is, and that it exists between things spiritual and things natural, may be seen, n. 2987, 2989, 2990, 2991, 3002; the common [things or principles] are first disposed, in order that particulars may be successively insinuated into them of the Lord, and into particulars singulars: for unless order has place with the common [things or principles], it cannot exist with particulars, because the latter enter into the former and confirm them, still less can it exist with singulars, because these enter into particulars as into their common [things or principles] and illustrate them; this is what is meant by an holy disposing of common scientifics, and in the internal sense is signified by making the camels to fall down on their knees; for thus they submit themselves to receive influx: whilst these things are thus disposing, doctrinals are removed, these being conclusions from scientifics, for there is an influx through the rational principle as it were dictating that this is true, this is not true, but in such a sort, that it is true because agreeing with the disposing of the common [things or principles], not true because disagreeing; there is no other influx given as to truths; doctrinals indeed are previously therein, but they are not doctrinals before they are believed, they are merely scientifics, wherefore when they become the objects of thought, no conclusion is made from them, but from other things concerning them; this is what is meant by removal from doctrinals, and what is here signified in the internal sense by without the city; but this state is what is called an obscure state, and is signified by the time of evening, whereas when doctrinals are confirmed so as to be believed, then comes morning, or a bright and lucid state. The other things which are contained in this verse appear evident from what has been just now said.

3058. The true ground and reason why by drawing water is signified instruction, and also illustration thereby, as in what follows in this chapter, is, because waters in the internal sense signify the truths of faith, see n. 2702; thus to draw waters is nothing else than to be instructed in the truths of faith, and thereby to be enlightened, as also in other passages in the Word, as in Isaiah, "Ye shall draw waters in joy from the fountains of salvation; in that day ye shall confess to Jehovah," xii. 3, 4; to draw waters denotes to be instructed, to understand, and to be wise: again, in the same prophet, "Bring ye waters to meet him that thirsteth, O ye inhabitants of the land of Thema," xxi. 14; to bring waters to meet him that thirsteth, denotes to instruct: again in the same prophet, "The miserable and the needy seeking waters, and there are none, their tongue fainteth for thirst," xli. 17; seeking waters denotes being desirous to be instructed in truths, by there being none is signified that no one was in possession of them. Moreover by drawers of water in the Jewish Church were represented those, who are continually desirous of knowing truths, but for no other end than to know, without any regard to the use thence to be derived; such were reckoned amongst the most vile; they were represented by the Gibeonites, concerning whom, see Joshua ix. 21, 23, 27.

3059. Verses 12, 13, 14. And he said, Jehovah God of my lord Abraham, cause I pray to meet before me to-day, and do mercy with my lord Abraham. Behold I stand above at the fountain of waters, and the daughters of the men of the city come forth to draw waters. And let it come to pass, the damsel to whom I say, Let down I pray thy cask, and I will drink, and she shall say, Drink, and I will make thy camels drink also, her Thou hast appointed for Thy servant Isaac; and in this I shall know that Thou hast done mercy with my lord. He said, signifies communication: Jehovah God of my lord Abraham, signifies of the Divine [principle] Itself which is the Father with the Divine Human [principle] which is the Son: cause I pray to meet before me to-day, signifies Providence from eternity; and do mercy, signifies an influx of love: with my lord Abraham, signifies the Divine Human [principle]: behold I stand above at the fountain of waters, signifies a state of conjunction of Truth Divine with the Human [principle]: and the daughters of the men of the city are coming forth to draw waters, signifies the affections of truth and instruction by them: and let it come to pass the damsel to whom I say, signifies affection in which is innocence: let down I pray thy cask, signifies the submission of scientifics; and I will drink, signifies the instruction of truth thence: and she shall say drink, signifies a reciprocal principle in respect thereto: and I will also make thy camels drink, signifies the illustration of all scientifics in the natural man thence: her Thou hast appointed for Thy servant Isaac, signifies the conjunction of Truth Divine with Divine Good in the rational principle: and in this shall I know that Thou hast done mercy with my lord, signifies that marriage is from Love Divine.

3060. "And he said"—that hereby is signified communication, may appear from the signification of saying in the historical parts of the Word, as denoting to perceive and to will, of which much has been said above; and by reason of this signification it also signifies to communicate, for communication is from perceiving and willing.

3061. "Jehovah God of my lord Abraham"—that hereby is signified of the Divine [principle] Itself which is the Father with the Divine Human [principle] which is the Son, viz. communication, appears from what has been frequently said and shewn above, viz. that Jehovah God is the Lord's Divine [principle] Itself which is called the Father, and that by Abraham is represented His Divine Human [principle], see n. 2833, 2836; that Jehovah in the Word of the Old Testament is the Lord

Himself, may be seen, n. 1736, 1815, 2921: that the most ancient Church which was before the flood, and the ancient Church which was after the flood, by Jehovah understood no other than the Lord, may be seen, n. 1343, 1976, 1992, 2016, 3035; that in the Lord there is a trine [threefold principle], viz. the Divine Itself, the Divine Human, and the Divine Holy Proceeding, and that these are one, may be seen, n. 1999, 2149, 2156, 2288, 2329, 2447. That the whole trine [threefold principle] in the Lord is Jehovah, may be seen, n. 2156, 2329; and that all and singular things in the Lord are Jehovah, n. 1902, 1921: that the Lord is one with the Father, and that no other is meant by Father in heaven, may be seen, n. 14, 15, 1725, 1729, 1733, 1815, 2005, 2018, 2025, 2803, 3038; that the Lord is the universal heaven, as being the All therein; that from Him is the all of innocence, of peace, of love, of charity, of mercy, of conjugal love, all good, and all truth; that Moses and the prophets, consequently the Word in all it's particulars, has relation to Him, and that all the rites of the Church represented Him, may be seen, n. 2751. That the Lord as to the Divine Human [principle] is called Son, may be seen, n. 2628. That the Lord's Divine Human [principle] was not only conceived, but was also born, of His Divine Essence which is Jehovah, see n. 2798; and that thus the Lord as to His Human [principle] was made Jehovah and Life from Himself, see n. 1603, 1737. That the Lord was from eternity, manifestly appears from the Word, see n. 2803; although He was afterwards born in time; for He Himself spake by Moses and the prophets, He Himself also had appeared to many, and it is on those occasions said that He was Jehovah; but this greatest of all mysteries (arcanissimum) cannot be revealed to any one, except to those who are in perception Divine, consequently scarce to any other than to a man of the most ancient Church, who was celestial, and in that perception; I have heard from the men of that Church, that Jehovah Himself was the Lord as to the Divine Human [principle] when He descended into heaven, and flowed in through heaven, for heaven represents one man as to all his members, wherefore also it is called the Grand Man, see n. 614, 1276, 2996, 2998, 3021; the Divine [principle] Itself in heaven, or in the Grand Man, was the Divine Human [principle], and was Jehovah Himself thus clothed with the Human [principle]. But when mankind became such, that the Divine [principle] Itself clothed as the Divine Human, could no longer affect them, that is, when Jehovah could no longer come to man, because he had so far removed himself, then Jehovah, who is the Lord as to the Divine Essence, descended and took upon Him the Human [principle], by conception Divine, and by birth from a virgin like another man; but this He expelled, and by Divine Means, made Divine the Human [principle] that was born, from which proceeds all that is holy ; thus the Divine Human [principle] existed an Essence by Itself, which fills the universal heaven, and effects salvation with those who before could not be saved ; this now is the Lord, who as to the Divine Human [principle] alone is Man, and from whom man has what constitutes him man, see n. 49, 288, 477, 565, 1894.

3062. "Cause I pray to meet before me to-day"—that hereby is signified Providence from Eternity, appears from the signification of causing to meet, as denoting to provide ; and from the signification of to-day, as denoting from Eternity, concerning which see n. 2838 ; moreover it is evident that it is somewhat of Providence which is here supplicated, and to which the supplication refers.

3063. "And do mercy"—that hereby is signified an influx of love, appears from the essence of mercy as being love ; love itself is turned into mercy, and becomes mercy, when any one who is in need of help, is regarded from love or charity, hence mercy is an effect of love toward the needy and miserable ; but here by mercy in the internal sense is meant love, and by doing mercy an influx of love, because proceeding from the Lord's Divine [principle] Itself into His Divine Human [principle] ; for it is Love Divine, appertaining to the Lord, by which He made His Human [principle] Divine, for love is the very esse of life, but no one has Love Divine except the Lord ; see what was said above concerning the Lord's Love, viz. that the Lord's Life was Love towards the universal human race, n. 2253 ; and that He fought from that Love, n. 1690, 1789, 1812, 1813, 1820 ; that it transcends all understanding, n. 1799, 2077 ; that the Lord is Love Divine Itself, n. 2500, 2077, 2572 ; that Jehovah is Love, n. 1735 ; that nothing lives but love, 1519 ; that whosoever has mutual love, has the Lord's Life, n. 1799, 1802, 1803 ; that love and charity is the very essential celestial principle itself, n. 1419, 1824.

3064. "With my lord Abraham"—that hereby is signified the Divine Human [principle] appears from the signification of Abraham here, as denoting the Lord's Divine Human [principle], concerning which, see n. 2833, 2836.

3065. "Behold I stand above at the fountain of waters"—that hereby is signified a state of conjunction of Truth Divine with the Human [principle], appears from the signification of fountain, as denoting truth, see n. 2702 ; in the present case Truth Divine, because spoken of the Lord ; the state itself of conjunction is signified by standing above at the fountain : that this conjunction was with the Human [principle], appears from the series of things treated of.

3066. "And the daughters of the men of the city are coming forth to draw waters"—that hereby are signified the affections of truth and instruction by them, appears from the signification of daughters, as denoting affections, concerning which see n. 489, 490, 491, 2362; and from the signification of the men of the city, as denoting truths; they that dwell in a city are called in the Word sometimes the men of the city, sometimes the inhabitants of the city; when they are called the men of the city, truths are signified, when inhabitants, goodnesses are signified; what is meant by men, may be seen, n. 265, 749, 915, 1007, 2517; what by inhabitants, n. 2268, 2451, 2712; what by city, n. 402, 2451, 2493; and from the signification of drawing waters, as denoting to be instructed, see n. 3058; hence it is evident, that by the daughters of the men of the city going forth to draw waters, are signified the affections of truth; and instruction by them; by truths no one is in any sort instructed, but by the affections of truth; for truths without affection flow indeed to the ear like sound, but they do not enter into the memory; what causes them to enter into the memory, and to remain therein, is affection; for the good of affection is like ground, wherein truths as seeds are inseminated, but such as the ground is, that is, such as the affection is, such is the produce of what is inseminated; the end or use dictates what is the quality of the ground, or what the quality of the affection, consequently what is the quality of the produce of what is inseminated; or if you would rather express it thus, love itself dictates, for love is to all both end and use, inasmuch as nothing is accounted as end and use but what is loved.

3067. "And let it come to pass, the damsel to whom I say"—that hereby is signified affection in which is innocence, appears from the signification of damsel; in the Word the affections of good and of truth are called infants, damsels, young women, and daughters, but in all cases with a difference as to state; by daughter, when that name occurs, is signified affection in common; by young women, affection in which is charity; by damsel, affection in which is innocence, by reason that the damsel age is nearest to the age of infancy, which in the internal sense is innocence; the case is similar in respect to boy, or young child, by whom is signified a state in which is innocence, as may be seen, n. 430.

3068. "Let down I pray thy cask"—that hereby is signified the submission of scientifics, may appear from the signification of letting down, as denoting to submit; and from the signification of cask, as denoting scientifics; the ground or reason why a water-pot or cask signifies scientifics, is because water signifies truth, see n. 680, 739, 2703, and a cask is a vessel wherein is water, as the scientific principle is a vessel wherein is truth; for every scientific is a vessel of truth, and every truth is a vessel of good; a scientific without truth is an empty vessel, in like manner truth without good; whereas a scientific wherein is truth, and truth wherein is good, is a full vessel; affection which is of love is what conjoins, so that each principle may have it's orderly arrangement in the other, for love is spiritual conjunction.

3069. "And I will drink"—that hereby is signified instruction of truth thence, appears from the signification of drinking, as denoting to be instructed: frequent mention is made in the Word of drinking, and where the subject treated of is concerning the goods and truths of faith, it there signifies to be instructed therein, and to receive them, as in Isaiah, "The new wine shall mourn, the vine languisheth, all the merry-hearted shall sigh, in the song they shall not drink wine, strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it," xxiv. 7, 9, not to drink wine in the song, denotes not to be instructed from the affection of truth, and not to be delighted thereby; strong drink bitter to them that drink it, denotes aversion: again in the same prophet, "It shall be as one that is thirsty dreameth, and behold he drinketh, and awaketh, and behold he is weary, and his soul hath appetite, xxix. 8, one that is thirsty, denotes one that desires to be instructed: drinking denotes to be instructed, but in things that are vain: so in Jeremiah, "We have drunken our waters for silver, our wood cometh for a price," Lam. v. 4; to drink water for silver, denotes to be instructed not gratis (or for nothing), also to attribute truth to oneself; that truth is given gratis, so as not to be from self, but from the Lord, is thus taught in Isaiah, "Every one that thirsteth go ye to the waters, and he who hath no money, go ye, buy," lv. 1: and in John, "Jesus said, if any one thirsteth, let him come to Me, and let him drink; whosoever believeth on Me, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water," vii. 37, 38; where by drinking is signified to be instructed, and to receive: so in Luke, "They shall say, we have eaten before thee, and have drunken, and thou hast taught in our streets; but the Lord shall say, I know you not whence ye are, depart from Me all ye workers of iniquity," xiii. 26, 27; where to eat and to drink before the Lord, denotes to instruct and to preach the good and truth of faith, from knowledges derived out of the Word, which is signified by the words—thou hast taught in our streets; but whereas they did this from themselves, for the sake of self-honour and gain, consequently from no affection of good and of truth, and were thus in the knowledges of truth, but in the life of evil, therefore it is said, "I know you not whence ye are, depart from Me all ye workers of iniquity;" again, in the same evangelist, "Jesus speaking to His disciples saith, that ye may eat and drink on My table, in My kingdom," xxii. 30; that in the Lord's kingdom they do not eat and drink, neither is there a table therein, every one may see, consequently that by eating and drinking on the Lord's table in His kingdom somewhat else is signified, viz. the enjoying the perception of good and of truth: so also in what the Lord saith in Matthew, "I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I shall drink it new with you in the kingdom of My Father," xxvi. 29; where to drink denotes to instruct livingly concerning truths, and to give perception of good and of truth: what the Lord said, "Be not anxious for your soul, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, neither for your body what ye shall put on," Matt. vi. 25, 31; Luke xii. 29, is significative of things spiritual, denoting that the all of faith as to good and truth is given of the Lord: so in John, "Jesus said to the woman of Samaria, whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again; but whosoever shall drink of the water which I shall give him, shall never thirst, but the water which I shall give him shall be in him a fountain of water springing up unto eternal life," vi. 7 to 14; where to drink, manifestly denotes to be instructed in goodnesses and truths, and to receive them.

3070. "And she shall say drink"—that hereby is signified a reciprocal principle in respect thereto, appears from this consideration, that it is an answer, and confirmation, consequently a reciprocal principle.

3071. "And I will also make thy camels drink"—that hereby is signified the illustration of all the scientifics in the natural man thence, appears from the signification of camels, as denoting common scientifics, thus scientifics in common, or all, concerning which see above, n. 3048; and from the signification of making to drink, as denoting to illustrate; that to draw water is to instruct, was shewn above, n. 3058, thus to make to drink is to illustrate, for illustration comes from instruction.

3072. "Her thou hast appointed for thy servant Isaac"—that hereby is signified the conjunction of Truth Divine with Divine Good in the rational principle, appears from the signification of appointing, viz. for a woman, as denoting to join together by a covenant of marriage; and from the representation of Isaac, concerning which see above, n. 3024; that her, or Rebecca, represents Truth Divine which was to be conjoined to Divine Good of the rational principle, has been abundantly shewn above, and is evident from all the particulars contained in this chapter in the internal sense.

3073. "In this shall I know that thou hast done mercy with my lord"—that hereby is signified that marriage is from Love Divine, appears from the signification of mercy, as denoting here in the internal sense Love Divine, see n. 3063; and because the subject treated of is concerning the betrothing of Rebecca with Isaac, that is, concerning the conjunction of Divine Truth with Divine Good of the rational principle, therefore by doing mercy with my lord nothing else is signified but marriage, consequently marriage grounded in Love Divine; this also is the conclusion of his supplication, and the end for which it was made.

3074. What is contained in these three verses in the internal sense, may in some measure be seen from the explication; but whereas the contents are scattered, it cannot appear what they involve in a series, unless they be viewed collected under one idea, and at the same time the sense of the letter be removed from the view, which sense, so long as it is attended to, not only occasions confusion in the idea, but also excites doubting, and in proportion as the mind is kept in doubt, in the same proportion it is in obscurity; a summary description is here given of the process, how by scientific truth appears, and is elevated from them, out of the natural man into the rational, and becomes truth rational, in the Lord, Divine; this is shewn to be effected by an influx of Divine Love into the Human [principle], giving birth to the affection of truth in which is innocence; by virtue of such influx, the scientifics which were in the natural man were illustrated, and truths were made manifest, which were to be elevated into the rational principle, and there to be conjoined to the good of Divine Love. These same things are described more particularly in what follows; but he who does not know that by an influx of love, and of affection thence derived, in which is innocence, all and singular things are disposed to order, even in the natural man, can form but a very obscure idea, if any, of what has been said above, and of what is here said.

3075. Verses 15, 16. And it came to pass, he had scarce made an end of speaking, and lo! Rebecca came forth, who was born to Bethuel the son of Milcah, the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, and her cask on her shoulder. And the damsel was exceeding good to look upon, a virgin, and a man had not known her, and she came down to the fountain, and filled her cask, and went up. And it came to pass, he had scarce made an end of speaking, signifies effect of will; and lo! Rebecca came forth, signifies the affection of truth derived from doctrinals; who was born to Bethuel the son of Milcah the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, signifies all the origin of that affection; and her cask on her shoulder, signifies receptions of truth and struggling thereby occasioned; and the damsel was exceeding good to look upon, signifies the beauty of the affection of truth; a virgin, and a man had not known her, signifies pure from every thing false; and she came down to the fountain, signifies Truth Divine: and she filled her cask, signifies vessels of reception; and went up, signifies elevation.

3076. "And it came to pass, he had scarce made an end of speaking,"—that hereby is signified effect of will, appears from what immediately follows, viz. that all and singular things were done as he prayed, or were effected as he willed : that to speak signifies to will, may be seen, n. 2626, 3037.

3077. "And lo! Rebecca came forth"—that hereby is signified the affection of truth derived from doctrinals, appears from the representation of Rebecca, as denoting Truth Divine about to be conjoined to Divine Good of the rational principle, but here before she was betrothed, she puts on the representation of the affection of truth derived from doctrinals, for thence is truth, truth not being truth unless it has life, and it's life is affection which is of love. That Rebecca represents Truth Divine about to be conjoined to Good Divine of the rational principle, appears from singular the things contained in this chapter in the internal sense, and also from this consideration, that Isaac represents the Lord's Divine rational principle, see n. 1893, 2066, 2083, 2630; thus Rebecca, who was made a wife to Isaac, represents that in the rational principle which was conjoined, as a wife to a husband : that this is Divine Truth, may appear evident; for in like manner Abraham represented the essential Divine Good, and Sarah his wife the essential Divine Truth conjoined to Divine Good, see n. 1468, 1901, 2063, 2065, 2904; in like manner Isaac and Rebecca, but in the Lord's Divine Human, viz. his rational principle : in general by husband in the Word is signified good, and by wife the truth thereof, see n. 1468, 2517; the essence also of all marriage, that is, conjugal love, is from the Divine marriage of good and truth, and of truth and good in the Lord, see n. 2508, 2618, 2728, 2729, 2803. The reason why the affection of truth is derived from doctrinals, is, because it is said that she came forth, viz. from the city, and that by city are signified doctrinals, may be seen, n. 402, 2451; truths also are derived from doctrinals.

3078. "Who was born to Bethuel the son of Milcah the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother"—that hereby is signified all the origin of that affection, appears from the representation of Bethuel, also of Milcah and Nahor, and likewise of Abraham; what each represents specially, cannot be explained and made manifest to the apprehension, by reason that the first affection of truth derived indeed it's origin from Divine things acquired by the Lord in the natural man, see n. 3019; but still maternal principles were therein which could not be separated in an instant, from which also the affection was; the quality of that affection in its origin in the internal sense is described by these words, "Born to Bethuel the son of Milcah the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother." Every affection, although it appears simple and as one thing, nevertheless contains in itself things so innumerable, that it can never be apprehended by any idea, still less be described; for in every affection is the whole life of the man, which has been acquired from his infancy even to the time of the age attained when he is in the affection, and still several things besides, viz. such as he has derived hereditarily by birth from father and mother, and from grandfathers and great grandfathers; for affection is the whole man such as he is; in another life, by manifestation of the affection, is sometimes visibly presented to view how much any one is influenced by self-love, and how much by the love of the world, and how much by the love of principles, such as end and use; also how much by the love of goodness and truth, and what is the quality of that goodness and truth, and likewise how they are disposed, viz. conjoined, approximating, and separate, thus how much they disagree with celestial order, or how much they agree therewith; all these things are seen by the manifestation of the affection, as was said, because the affection is the whole man; that this is the case, appears incredible to man, but still it is true.

3079. "And her cask upon her shoulder"—that hereby are signified receptions of truth and struggling thereby occasioned, appear from the signification of cask, as denoting the scientific principle, consequently the receptacle of truth, concerning which, see n. 3068; and from the signification of shoulder, as denoting all power, consequently a struggling, concerning which, see n. 1085: that casks or water-pots, and also vessels in general, in the internal sense signify those things which are in the place of a receptacle, as scientifics and knowledges are in respect to truths, and as truths themselves are in respect to good, may appear from several passages in the Word; the vessels of the temple and of the altar had no other signification, and it was by reason of this signification that they were holy, nor had their holiness any other source; hence it was, when Belshazzar with his grandees and wives drank wine out of the vessels of gold and silver, which Nebuchadnezzar his father had brought from the temple of Jerusalem, and they praised the gods of gold, of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone, that then the writing on the wall of his palace appeared, Dan v. 2, and following verses; the vessels of gold and silver denote the knowledges of good and of truth, which were profaned, for they are Chaldeans who are principled in knowledges, but which are profaned by false principles that are therein, see n. 1368, so that knowledges serve them for worshipping gods of gold and of silver, for Belshazzar is called king of the Chaldeans, verse 30, of the same chapter; that vessels signify the externals of things spiritual, is also evident from the following passages in the Word, "as the sons of Israel bring an offering in a clean vessel to the house of Jehovah," Isaiah lxvi. 20; speaking of the Lord's kingdom; an offering in a clean vessel is representative of the external man in respect to the internal, he who brings the offering is the internal, the clean vessel is the external agreeing therewith, consequently the things which are in the external, such as scientifics, knowledges, and doctrinals: so in Jeremiah, "The cry of Jerusalem is gone up, and the great ones have sent the little ones to the waters, they have come to the pits, they have not found waters, they have returned with their vessels empty, they were ashamed," xiv. 2, 3; vessels empty denote knowledges wherein truth is not, and also truths wherein good is not: again, in the same prophet, "Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon hath devoured me, he hath disturbed me, he hath made me an empty vessel," li. 34; where empty vessel has a like signification; that Babylon (or Babel) is what causes vastation, may be seen, n. 1327: so in Moses, "As valleys are planted, as gardens near a river, water shall flow down from the buckets, and his seed to many waters," Numb. xxiv. 6, 7; the enunciation of Balaam concerning Jacob and Israel: waters flowing down from the buckets denote truths flowing from knowledges. In the parable concerning the ten virgins, of which five took oil in their vessels with lamps; but the foolish not so, Matt. xxv. 4, by virgins are signified affections; by the prudent taking oil in their vessels is denoted that they took good in truths, consequently charity in faith; that oil is good, may be seen, n. 886; lamps denote love.

3080. "And the damsel was exceeding good to look upon"—that hereby is signified the beauty of the affection of truth, appears from the signification of damsel, as denoting affection in which is innocence, see n. 3067; the ground and reason why by exceedingly good to look upon is signified beauty, in the present case the beauty of the affection of truth is, because all beauty is from good in which is innocence; essential good, when it flows in from the internal man into the external, constitutes what is beautiful, and hence is all human beautifulness: this may further appear from this consideration, that no one is affected merely by the face of another, but by the affection which beams forth from the face; and that they, who are principled in good, are affected from the affection of good which is therein, and in a degree proportioned to the degree of innocence which is in the good; thus it is the spiritual principle in the natural which affects, and not the natural without the spiritual; in like manner they, who are principled in good, are affected by infants, who appear to them beautiful in proportion to the innocence of charity influencing the countenance, gesture, and speech: that goodness and charity is what forms and constitutes what is beautiful, may be seen, n. 553; hence then it is, that by the damsel being exceedingly good to look upon, is signified the beauty of the affection of truth, in which is good.

3081. "A virgin, and a man had not known her"—that

hereby is signified pure from every thing false, appears from the signification of virgin: there is continual mention made of virgin in the Word, and by virgin is signified the Lord's kingdom, and also the Church, and hence every one who is a kingdom of the Lord, or who is a Church, and this by virtue of conjugal love which is in chaste virgins; conjugal love in a spiritual sense is the affection of good in truth, and the affection of truth from good, from which affections joined together as it were in marriage comes conjugal love, see n. 2508, 2618, 2727, 2728, 2729; and as this is respected in a virgin, as was said, therefore the Lord's kingdom, which is also compared to a marriage, and is called a marriage, is called a virgin: the reason why by a man not having known her, is signified pure from every thing false, is, because by man (vir) is not only signified rational truth, but also in an opposite sense what is false, see n. 265, 749, 1007; thus to be known by a man is to be contaminated by what is false, and not to be known by a man is to be pure from what is false; by man here is not meant a man of marriage (vir conjugii). That by virgin in the Word are signified those who are in the Lord's kingdom, or, what is the same thing, those in whom the Lord's kingdom is, appears from the Apocalypse, "These are they who were not polluted with women, for they are virgins; these are they who follow the Lamb whither he goeth, for they are unspotted before the throne of God," xiv. 4, 5; where they are manifestly called virgins, who follow the Lamb, that is, who are in the Lord's kingdom, and they are said to be unspotted; in a proper sense they are virgins, who are principled in love to the Lord, that is, who are celestial, consequently who are in the affection of good; they are also called virgins, who are principled in charity towards their neighbour, that is, who are spiritual, consequently who are in the affection of truth, as may appear from the following passages in the Word, "The virgin the daughter of Zion hath despised thee, hath laughed thee to scorn, the daughter of Jerusalem hath moved the head after thee," Isaiah xxxvii. 22; spoken to the king of Assyria, where the virgin the daughter of Zion denotes the Church celestial, and the daughter of Jerusalem the Church spiritual: so in Jeremiah, "As yet I will build thee, and thou shalt be built, O virgin of Israel, as yet thou shalt adorn thy tabrets, and shalt go forth to the dances of them that sport: their soul shall become as a watered garden, and they shall not sorrow any more at all; then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together," xxxi. 4, 12, 13; the virgin of Israel denotes the Church spiritual; the affection of truth grounded in good appertaining to her is described here, as in other places, by tabrets and dances: again, in the same prophet, "The ways of Zion do mourn, her priests do groan, her virgins are sad. The Lord hath trodden the wine-press for the virgin the daughter of Judah. Behold my grief, my virgins and my young men have gone into captivity," Lam. i. 4, 15, 18; where virgins denote the affections of good and of truth: so again, "The women in Zion were pressed, the virgins in the cities of Judah," Lam. v. 11; where virgins denote the affections of good: so in Amos, "They shall run to and fro to seek the Word of Jehovah, and shall not find it, in that day shall the beautiful virgins and the young men faint for thirst," viii. 12, 13; where beautiful virgins denote the affections of truth, and young men denote truths, or, what is the same thing, those who are principled therein, of whom it is said that they shall run to and fro to seek the Word of Jehovah, and shall not find it, thus that they shall faint for thirst: so in Zechariah, "Jehovah their God shall preserve them in that day, as a flock His people, for how great is His goodness, and how great is His beauty, corn shall make the young men to bud forth, and new wine the virgins," ix. 16, 17; where young men denote truths, and virgins affections: so in David, "The king's daughter is all glorious within, her clothing is of wrought gold; she shall be brought unto the king in raiment of needle-work, the virgins after her, her friends shall be brought unto Thee," Psalm xlv. 13, 14; the king's daughter denotes the Lord's spiritual kingdom; the virgins after her, her friends, denote the affections of truth: again, "They have seen thy goings O God, the goings of my God in the sanctuary, the singers went before, the players on the harp after, in the midst of the young women playing the timbrels," lxviii. 24, 25; the young women playing the timbrels denote also the affections of truth: young women are distinguished from virgins by innocence; they are called virgins by reason of conjugal love, consequently who are in innocence, for conjugal love is essential innocence, see n. 2736; therefore in the passage above cited from the Apocalypse, they are said to follow the Lamb whither he goeth, for by the Lamb is meant the Lord as to innocence; and all who are in heaven are called virgins from the innocence which is in their good; according to the quantity and quality of innocence in good, they follow the Lamb.

3082. "And she came down to the fountain"—that hereby is signified Truth Divine, appears from the signification of fountain, as denoting Truth Divine, see n. 2702, 3065.

3083. "And filled her cask"—that hereby are signified vessels of reception, appears from the signification of cask, as denoting in an internal sense (because it is a vessel recipient of water) a recipient of the knowledges of truth, and also of truth itself, which are signified by water; that water in an internal sense is knowledges, and also truth, may be seen, n. 28, 680, 2702, 3058.

appears from the signification of going up, as denoting to be elevated; to be elevated implies exaltation from what is inferior to what is superior, and consequently from what is exterior to what is interior, for it is the same thing, inasmuch as what is inferior and superior in a human idea, is exterior and interior in an angelic idea, as in the case of heaven, this appears to man as being superior, but to the angels it is interior; so also in the case of man's natural principle, this is exterior in respect to his spiritual principle, and the spiritual principle again is exterior in respect to the celestial, or, what is the same thing, the scientific principle which is of the natural man is exterior in respect to truth, and truth is exterior in respect to good, wherefore also the scientific principle in respect to truth is called a covering, and also a garment, and in like manner truth in respect to good; hence it is, that ascent is predicated to Jerusalem, but descent from Jerusalem; also from Jerusalem to Zion implies ascent, and from Zion to Jerusalem descent; for by those things which are round about Jerusalem, are signified the exteriors of the Church, but by Jerusalem the interiors, and by Zion the intimates [or inmost principle]. Inasmuch as in the internal sense is here described the first stage of the elevation of truth from the natural man to the rational, therefore it is here first said, that the affection of truth, which is represented by Rebecca, went down to the fountain, and presently that it went up; for, as was said above, n. 3074, that Divine Love flows into the affection of good, and thence into the affection of truth, and vivifies and illustrates the things which are in the natural man, and in this case disposes them to order, this is signified by going down; hereby truths are elevated out of the natural man into the rational, and are conjoined with good therein, and this is signified by going up.

3085. In these two verses is described the affection of truth as to origin, as to quality, and as to the first (step or stage) of initiation. As to origin, it is described by these words, that Rebecca "went forth, who was born to Bethuel the son of Milcah the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother," by which words is pointed out all the origin of that affection in the internal sense, as may be seen, n. 3077, 3078; as to quality, it is described by these words, that "her cask was upon her shoulder, and that the damsel was exceedingly good to look upon," which words that they are descriptive of quality, may be seen, n. 3079, 3080, 3081: as to the first (step or stage) of initiation, it is described by these words, that "she went down to the fountain, and filled her cask, and went up," see n. 3082, 3083, 3084. But as to all these particulars the case is, as was said above, that they not only exceed vulgar apprehension, but also such as is more cultivated amongst men; such is the nature of the things contained in this chapter, and in some which follow; the reason is, because it scarce enters into any one's mind to conceive, that there is a continual Divine Influx through the internal man into the external, that is, an influx of things celestial and spiritual through the rational man into the natural, or, what is the same thing, into the natural things which are of the external man, and that by this influx truths from the natural man are continually called forth, elevated, and implanted in good which is in the rational; it is not even known that such an effect has place; how then should the whole process be known, and the manner of it's accomplishment, the process being of so great wisdom, by reason of it's proceeding from the Divine [power or operation], that it can in no wise be explored as to a ten thousandth part of it, and what can be seen of it is of a most general nature; since this therefore is the case, let not any one wonder that the things which are here contained in the internal sense, cannot be fully explained to the apprehension, and that what are described transcend the apprehension, for they treat of this process and describe it; and further, the internal sense is designed principally for the angels, to the intent that by the Word there may be communication between heaven and man, and the things contained in the internal sense are amongst the delights of the angels, because celestial food is nothing else but all that which appertains to intelligence and wisdom, and the blessedness of wisdom and intelligence to the angels is whatever treats of the Lord.

3086. In order that some idea, although a most general one, may be had of what is here contained in the internal sense, it is to be observed, that the subject treated of throughout this whole chapter is concerning Truth Divine which was to be conjoined to Divine Good, which Divine Good flowed into the natural man, that is, into the scientifics, knowledges, and doctrinals therein, for these appertain to the natural man so far as they are in it's memory, and by this influx illustrated, vivified, and disposed all things therein to order, for all life, light, and order in the natural man is by virtue of an influx from the Divine [principle], as may be known to every one who attends to it; by that influx exists affection, first the common affection of truth, treated of in these two verses, as to its origin, n. 3077, 3078, as to its quality, n. 3079, 3080, 3081, and as to the first [step or stage] of initiation, n. 3082, 3083, 3084. But in the verses which now immediately follow, this process is further described in the internal sense, viz. the exploration of that truth, also the separation of maternal principles which at first were adjoined to it, &c. But I am aware that these things are of a deeper and more secret nature than to be easily apprehended, and this by reason, as was said, of their being unknown; nevertheless since the internal sense describes them, and this as to all circumstances, they must needs be expounded, however they may appear to be above the apprehension; at least it may hence be seen what deep arcana are contained in the internal sense of the Word, also the arcana are such as scarcely to appear in the light of the world, in which man is during his life in the body, but that they always appear more manifestly and clearly in proportion as man comes from the light of the world into the light of heaven, into which he is admitted after death, or in which blessed and happy souls are, that is, the angels.

3087. Verses 17, 18, 19, 20. And the servant ran to meet her, and said, cause me I pray to sup a little of the water out of thy cask. And she said, drink my lord, and she hastened, and let down her cask upon her hand, and made him to drink. And she made an end of making him to drink, and said I will also draw for thy camels, until they shall make an end of drinking. And she hastened and emptied her cask at the trough, and ran again to the well to draw, and she drew for all his camels. The servant ran to meet her, and said, signifies exploration from Divine Good: cause me I pray to sup a little of the water out of thy cask, signifies whether thence somewhat of truth could be conjoined: and she said, drink my lord, signifies reciprocity: and she hastened and let down the cask upon her hand, signifies the submission of the recipients by virtue of power: and she made him to drink, signifies initiation: and she made an end of making him to drink, signifies a successive [step or stage]: and she said, I will also draw for thy camels until they shall make an end of drinking, signifies reciprocity as to the illustration of all scientifics in the natural man: and she hastened and emptied her cask at the trough, signifies the separation of the affection of truth which was initiated in Good Divine: and ran again to the well to draw, signifies an inferior affection of truth; and drew for all his camels, signifies whereby common scientifics were illustrated.

3088. "The servant ran to meet her and said"—that hereby is signified exploration from Divine Good, appears from the signification of running to meet her, as denoting to explore whether the case was so as he spake in his heart, the internal sense dictates this; also from the signification of saying, as denoting to perceive, according to what has been often shewn above, consequently also to explore; the reason why this was from the Divine Good, is, because the servant here acts in the place of his lord, viz. of Abraham, and also of Isaac; for he that is sent puts on the character of him that sends, as is frequently the case in the Word; thus we read of the angels, that at first they are named angels, and afterwards are called Jehovah, as in the case of the angel who appeared to Moses in the bush, Exod. iii, 2, 4; and who appeared to Gideon, Judges vi. 11, 12, 14: Hence also it is that Rebecca saith to him, my lord, in the following verse.

3089. "Cause me I pray to sup a little of the water out of thy cask"—that hereby is signified whether thence any thing of truth could be conjoined, appears from the signification of supping, as denoting somewhat similar to drinking, but in a diminutive sense, because it was to be explored; that to drink is to perceive, see n. 3069; to drink also in the internal sense denotes to be communicated and conjoined, and is predicated of what is spiritual, as eating is predicated of what is celestial, see n. 2187, 2343; and from the signification of water, as denoting truth, see n. 680, 739, 2702; here therefore by these words, "Cause me I pray to sup a little of the water out of thy cask," is signified exploration whether any thing of truth thence could be conjoined; cask is the recipient in which and out of which is truth, see n. 3068, 3079. The ground and reason of this exploration is, because the first affection of truth has along with it somewhat from the maternal principle, which is to be separated, see n. 3040, 3078. Thus it is also with man about to be regenerated; his first affection of truth is very impure, for there is in it an affection of use and of end for the sake of himself, for the sake of the world, for the sake of glory in heaven, and such like things, which respect himself, but not the community, the Lord's kingdom, and still less the Lord. Such an affection must needs precede; nevertheless it is successively purified of the Lord, till at length false and evil principles are removed and cast out as it were to the circumference; still they were subservient as means.

3090. "And she said, my lord"—that hereby is signified reciprocity, appears from assent or consent. What the reciprocity [reciprocum] of truth is when it is to be conjoined to good, is manifest from marriages: for the ground of marriage is, that there is consent from each party; this derives its origin from the marriage of good and of truth, on the part of good there is will, and on the part of truth consent, hence follows conjunction; this, although it does not appear with man during regeneration, that is, when he enters into the heavenly marriage, still however it exists; as is manifest from this consideration, that during regeneration a kind of marriage is effected between the will and the understanding, good being of the will, and truth of the understanding; therefore the ancients instituted a marriage between the will and the understanding, and between every particular appertaining to each, see n. 54, 55.

3091. "And she hastened and let down her cask upon her hand"—that hereby is signified the submission of the recipients by virtue of power [or ability], appears from the signification of letting down, as denoting an act of submission; and from the signification of cask, as denoting a recipient, see n. 3068, 3079; and from the signification of hand, as denoting power, see n. 878. The submission of recipients by virtue of power [or ability] implies that doctrinals, knowledges, and scientifics, which are recipients, n. 3068, 3079, apply themselves to receive; there is a chain of subordination, and thus of application, consequently of submission, from the first [principle] of life, or the Lord; in this chain the things which are in a lower place, inasmuch as they ought to be subservient to the higher, must be in submission, otherwise there can be no conjunction. The power [or ability] here spoken of is from truth, inasmuch as truth submits the things which are beneath; power [or ability] is especially attributed to truth in the Word, and therefore hands, arms, and also shoulders are predicated of truth, by which are signified powers [or abilities] in the internal sense, see n. 878, 1085. Essential power [or ability] is from good by truth, which appears to be from truth.

3092. "And she made him to drink"—that hereby is signified initiation, appears from the signification of drinking [potare], as denoting somewhat nearly like drinking [bibere], but to drink [potare] here involves somewhat more active on the part of him who drinks: That to drink [bibere] is to receive, and also to be conjoined, may be seen, n. 3069, 3089, thus to make to drink [potare] is to give opportunity, [or leave] of receiving, which is the first [step or stage] of initiation.

3094. "And she said, I will draw also for thy camels until they shall make an end of drinking"—that hereby is signified reciprocity as to the illustration of all scientifics in the natural man, appears from the signification of camels, as denoting common scientifics in the natural man, see n. 3048, 3071; and from the signification of drawing, viz. water, as denoting to instruct, and also to illustrate, see n. 3058, 3071; that there is reciprocity [or a reciprocal principle], is evident, because she said that she would do it, and also did it, viz. draw water for the camels. Illustration, which is the subject here treated of, is on the part of truth, although it is from good by truth: With respect to the illustration of scientifics in the natural man, the case is this, that all illustration is by virtue of good, for the good which is of love is comparatively as the sun's flame, from which come heat and light, whereas truth is as an object, through which flame is pellucid, hence illustration is from light; but such as the light is, such is the illustration. There is no other thing which receives good but truth, but such as the truth is, such is the reception, and such the consequent illustration: Whensoever therefore there is illustration by truth, it then appears to be from truth, as if it was an effect merely of truth, although it is of good, which is thus translucent through truth: The illustration also of good by truth penetrates further, and affects more thoroughly, and produces an inferior affection of truth, of which we shall speak presently. The light of heaven is from the Divine Good of the Lord by His Divine Truth; and whereas it is by His Divine Truth in His Human [principle], it penetrates not only to the celestial, but also to the spiritual, and illustrates all who are in heaven, with wisdom and intelligence; and whereas wisdom and intelligence are thence derived, therefore the subject treated of in the internal sense of the Word is solely concerning the Divine Good and Divine Truth in the Lord's Human [principle]; the present passage treats of the first illustration of truth from good, and of good by truth.

3095. "And she hastened and emptied her cask at the trough"—that hereby is signified the separation of the affection of truth which was initiated in Good Divine, appears from the signification of emptying the cask, as denoting to separate truth, for by cask as by a containing vessel is not only signified the scientific principle in which is truth, but also truth in which is good, see n. 3068, 3079; and whereas the subject here treated of is concerning initiation, therefore by cask is here signified truth which was initiated in Good Divine; and inasmuch as essential truth is never conjoined with good except by it's affection, see n. 3024, 3066; for in affection is the life by which is conjunction, therefore in the present case it is the affection of truth which is meant. The same appears from the signification of trough, or place to receive water, as denoting the good of truth, for water in the trough signifies truth, see n. 739, 2702, and the trough itself signifies the same as wood, viz. good, see n. 2784, 2812; the good of truth is what is produced from good by truth, and is as an offspring born of truth as of a mother, and of good as of a father; all genuine good which is in the natural man is from this source, or from the marriage of good and truth in the rational principle; this good is what is called the good of truth, and is signified in the Word by trough, or place to receive water.

3096. "And she ran again to the well"—that hereby is signified an inferior affection of truth, appears from the signification of well, as denoting truth, see n. 2702, but truth which is inferior; and whereas the subject here treated of is concerning the initiation of truth, an inferior affection of truth is signified, as was said above, n. 3094. What the difference of signification is in the internal sense between fountain and well, may be seen in the place referred to, viz. that the term fountain is applied when the subject treated of is concerning purer and superior truth, but that the term well is used in treating of truth not so pure and of inferior truth, as also in this chapter, in which sometimes fountain is named, and sometimes well; natural truth is inferior truth, and the affection of natural truth is an inferior affection of truth; hereby common scientifics are proximately illustrated, which illustration that it penetrates further and affects more thoroughly, may be seen n. 3094.

3097. "And drew for all his camels"—that hereby is signified whereby common scientifics were illustrated, appears from the signification of drawing, as denoting to instruct, and also to illustrate, see n. 3058, 3071; and from the signification of camels, as denoting common scientifics, see n. 3048.

3098. The things which are contained in the internal sense from n. 3088 to n. 3098, are also such as cannot be apprehended, except by those who are instructed concerning the internal things of man, and who are principled in truths, for by truths and according to truths, is illustration; the subject treated of is concerning the first initiation of truth into good; for, as was said above, essential good flows into the natural principle through the rational, thus by an internal way, and illustrates the things which are therein, whereas truth flows in through the sensual principle, especially of hearing and seeing, into the natural, thus by an external way; hence is the birth of truth, as may be known to every one who reflects; nevertheless the conjunction of good and of truth is not in the natural principle, but in the rational; wherefore truth is called forth out of the natural principle, thus out of the natural sphere into the spiritual, for truth about to be conjoined to good is spiritual. How the case is with truth first called forth thence is the subject treated of in these verses from n. 3087 to 3097.

3099. Verses 21, 22. And the man was amazed at her, containing himself, to know, whether Jehovah had prospered his way or not. And it came to pass, when the camels had made an end of drinking, that the man took an ornament of gold, of half a shekel weight, and two bracelets on her hands, ten of gold their weight. The man was amazed at her, containing himself, signifies a state of perception as to those things: to know whether Jehovah had prospered his way or not, signifies concerning Divine Truth, of what sort it was; and it came to pass when the camels had made an end of drinking, signifies acknowledgment by virtue of illustration in common scientifics; and the man took an ornament of gold, signifies Divine Good; of half a shekel weight, signifies the quantity for initiation; and two bracelets, signifies Divine Truth; upon her hands, signifies the power of the affection of truth; ten of gold their weight, signifies full for initiation.

3100. "The man was amazed at her, containing himself"—that hereby is signified a state of perception as to those things, appears from the signification of being amazed and containing himself, when he saw that those things, which he spake in his heart, came to pass, as denoting somewhat of acknowledgment, and at the same time of expectation whether it was so; for he was amazed because he acknowledged that it was so come to pass, and he contained himself because he waited in expectation whether it was so or not; this is the state of perception which is signified.

3101. "To know whether Jehovah had prospered his way or not"—that hereby is signified concerning Divine Truth of what sort it was, appears from the signification of way, as denoting truth, see n. 627, 2333; that it was Divine, is signified by it's being said, "whether Jehovah had prospered," which is the same thing as if it had been said, whether it was from Jehovah, that is, from the Divine [principle]; thus what sort of truth it was, for truths, which are called forth out of the natural man into the rational, are not all received, only those which agree with good therein, and thus by insemination and insertion act in unity with it: the rest, although they appeared as truths before they were elevated, still are not received, because they are not acknowledged; good is what acknowledges it's own truth, and truth is what acknowledges it's own good: that it was acknowledged of what sort the truth was, and that thus the truth was received, appears also from what immediately follows.

3102. "And it came to pass when the camels had made an end of drinking"—that hereby is signified acknowledgment by virtue of illustration in common scientifics, appears from this consideration, that these two expressions, "it came to pass," and "they had made an end," signify a successive [state or stage], and imply an end of the act which precedes, and a beginning of the act which follows, concerning which, see above, n. 3093; consequently, in the present case, acknowledgment, as was shewn just above; and from the signification of camels, as denoting common scientifics, see n. 3048, 3071; and from the signification of drinking (bibere), as denoting here the same as drawing waters, as above, n. 3097; and also the same as drinking (potare), as above, n. 3058, 3071; viz. to be illustrated; hence it is evident, that by these words, "And it came to pass when the camels had made an end of drinking," is signified acknowledgment, viz. of Truth Divine by virtue of illustration in common scientifics. The real case is this; every truth which is elevated out of the natural man, that is, out of scientifics, or knowledges and doctrinals, (for these are of the natural man) into the rational, and is there received, must first be acknowledged of what sort it is, whether it agrees with the good therein or not; if it agrees it is received, and if it does not agree, it is rejected; there are several apparent truths in one company, but only those are conjoined, which acknowledge the good therein, and which thus mutually love each other: in order however that they may be acknowledged to be such, there must be illustration in the natural man, whereby all and singular the things therein may be viewed under one view, and thus there may be an election; this illustration in the natural man is from good, but still by truth, see n. 3094; and it is this illustration which is signified by Rebecca drawing for the camels, and giving them to drink.

3103. "And the man took an ornament of gold"—that hereby is signified Divine Good, appears from the signification of an ornament of gold, as denoting good; and whereas the subject here treated of in the internal sense is concerning the Lord, therefore it denotes Divine Good; and as this is from the rational principle, the term man (vir) is used: that man (vir) denotes the rational principle, may be seen, n. 265, 749, 1007. In ancient times, when worship in Churches was representative, and they knew what it signified, on all occasions of contracting marriages it was customary for the bride to give an ornament of gold and bracelets, because the Church was represented by the bride, the good thereof by the ornament of gold, and the truth by bracelets; and because it was known that conjugal love, as existing with the bride and the wife, descended from the marriage of Divine Good and Divine Truth of the Lord, see n. 2508, 2618, 2727, 2728, 2729; the ornament of gold was placed on the nose, as appears also from what follows, where it is said that he set the ornament of gold upon her nose, verse 47, by reason that nose signified the good of life on account of the respiration which hath place there, which in the internal sense is life, and likewise on account of odour, which is the grateful principle of love, whereof good is, see n. 96, 97. That an ornament of gold was a badge of marriage as to good, appears also from other passages in the Word, as in Ezechiel, "I decked thee also with ornaments, and I gave bracelets upon thine hands, and a necklace on thy neck, and I gave an ornament upon thy nose," xvi. 11, 12; speaking of the ancient Church, which is here Jerusalem, and which is described as a bride, to whom were given bracelets, a necklace, and an ornament for the nose; the bracelets on the hands were a representative badge of truth, and the ornament on the nose was a representative badge of good. So in Isaiah, "Because the daughters of Zion extol themselves, the Lord will make bald the crown of their heads, and will take away the rings and the ornaments of the nose, the changeable suits of apparel and the mantles," iii. 16, 17, 21, 22; the daughters of Zion who extol themselves, denote the affections of evil within the Church, see n. 2362, 3024; the rings and the ornaments of the nose which shall be taken away, denote good and it's badges, the changeable suits of apparel and the mantles, denote truth and it's badges. So in Hosea, "I will visit upon her the days of Baalim, wherein she hath burned incense, and hath put on her nose-ornament, and her adorning, and hath gone after her lovers," ii. 13; speaking of the Church perverted, and of a new Church to succeed, where also nose-ornament denotes a badge of the good of the Church. When those ornaments were fitted to the ears, they signified also good, but good in act, and in the opposite sense evil in act, as Gen. xxxv. 4; Exod. xxxii. 2, 3.

3104. "Of half a shekel weight"—that hereby is signified the quantity for initiation, appears from the signification of shekel, of half a shekel, and of weight; that shekel is the price or estimation of good and of truth, and that half a shekel is the determination of the quantity thereof, may be seen, n. 2959; that weight signifies the state of a thing as to good, will be seen presently; hence it is evident, that half a shekel weight signifies and implies quantity as to good understood by the ornament of gold; that it was for initiation, follows from what goes before and from what comes after. That weight is the state of a thing as to good, appears from the following passages in the Word, "Thy meat which thou shalt eat by weight twenty shekels a day; and thou shalt drink also water by measure the sixth part of an hin; because lo! I break the staff of bread in Jerusalem, that they may eat bread in weight and in anxiety, and may drink water in measure and with amazement, that they may want bread and water," Ezek. iv. 10, 11, 16, 17; speaking of the vastation of good and of truth, a representation whereof was by the prophet: the state of vastated good is signified by their eating meat and bread in weight, and the state of vastated truth by their drinking water according to measure; that bread is the celestial principle, and thus good, may be seen, n. 276, 680, 1165, 2177, and that water is the spiritual principle, and thus truth, n. 739, 2702, 3058; hence it is evident, that weight is predicated of good, and measure of truth: again, in the same prophet, "There shall be balances of justice, an ephah of justice, and a bath of justice," xlv. 10, and the following verses; speaking of the holy land, by which is signified the Lord's kingdom in the heavens, as may be known from all the particulars there mentioned by the prophet, where there will be no balances, ephah, and bath, but goodnesses and truths, which are signified by those weights and measures: So in Isaiah, "Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of His hand, and prepared the heavens with the palm, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a tierce (trientali) and weighed the mountains in a balance, and the hills in scales," xl. 12; to weigh the mountains in a balance, and the hills in scales, denotes that from the Lord are the celestial things of love and charity, and that He alone disposes their states; that mountains and hills, of which those weights are predicated, are the celestial things of love, may be seen, n. 795, 796, 1430, 2722. So in Daniel, "The writing upon the wall of the palace of Belshazzar, Mene, mene, tekel, upharsin; this is the interpretation: mene, God has numbered thy kingdom and has finished it; tekel, thou art weighed in the scales, and art found wanting; peres, thy kingdom is divided and given to the Mede and to the Persian," v. 25, 26, 27, 28; here mene, or he has numbered, is predicated of truth, whereas tekel, or weighed in the scales, is predicated of good; the subject treated of in the internal sense of this passage is concerning consummation.

3105. "And two bracelets"—that hereby is signified Divine Truth, appears from the signification of bracelets, as denoting truth, in the present case Divine Truth, because in the internal sense the Lord is treated of; they are said to be two, to denote fullness: these were placed on the hands of the bride, because by the bride was signified the Church, and by her hands, powers from truth; that hands are predicated of truth, may be seen, n. 3091: that bracelets have such a signification, may appear from Ezech. chap. xvi. 11, 12, concerning which see above, n. 3103; and also from chap. xxiii. 42, of the same prophet: also that bracelets were not only for a bride, but likewise for a king, but for a king on the arm, as appears 2 Sam. i. 10, by reason that royalty (regium) was representative and significative of Divine Truth appertaining to the Lord, see n. 1672, 1728, 2015, 2069, 3009; and arm was significative of power, see n. 878.

3107. "Ten of gold their weight"—that hereby is signified full for initiation, appears from the signification of ten, as denoting a full state, like a hundred, concerning which, see n. 1988, 2636; and from the signification of gold, as denoting here a kind of money by the weight whereof estimation was made; and from the signification of weight, as denoting the state of a thing as to good, see above, n. 3104; hence it is evident, that by ten of gold their weight is signified a full state of what is estimated as to good: that it is for initiation, is manifest from all the particulars in this chapter, in which the subject treated of is concerning initiation or betrothing.

3108. The subject treated of in these two verses is concerning the initiation of truth into good, but what the nature and quality of this initiation is, does not easily fall into the idea of

thought with any one, who is only illustrated by such things as are of the light of the world, and not at the same time by such things as are of the light of heaven, whereby the things which are of the light of the world may be illustrated; they who are not principled in good, and thence in faith, have no other ideas of thought but such as are formed from the objects of the light of the world; these do not know what a spiritual principle is, nor indeed what a rational principle is in a genuine sense, but only the natural principle, to which they attribute all things; and this is the reason, why what is here said in the internal sense concerning the initiation of truth into good, appears to them too remote to have any reality, when nevertheless the things herein contained are accounted most precious by those who are in the light of heaven. The case with respect to the initiation of truth into good is this, that before truth is so initiated and rightly conjoined, it is indeed with man, but is not made as his, or as his proper belonging; but as soon as it is initiated in his good, then it is appropriated to him: in this case it vanishes out of his external memory, and passes into the internal, or, what is the same thing, it vanishes in his natural or external man, and passes into the rational or internal man, and puts on the man himself, and constitutes his human principle, that is, his quality as to the human principle; this is the case with all truth which is conjoined to it's good; in like manner also it is with what is false which is conjoined to evil, which it calls good; but the difference is, that the former opens the rational principle, and thereby makes man rational, whereas the latter closes the rational principle, and makes man irrational, although he seems to himself, in the darkness in which he is in this case, to excel others in rationality.

3109. Verses 23, 24, 25. And he said, whose daughter art thou? tell me I pray, is there room in thy father's house for us to spend the night? and she said unto him, I am the daughter of Bethuel, the son of Milcah, whom she bare to Nahor. And she said unto him, we have both straw, and also much provender, likewise room to spend the night. He said, whose daughter art thou? signifies further exploration concerning innocence: tell me I pray, is there room in thy father's house for us to spend the night? signifies exploration concerning the good of charity: and she said unto him, I am the daughter of Bethuel, the son of Milcah, whom she bare to Nahor, signifies here, as above, all her origin: and she said unto him, signifies perception: we have both straw, signifies scientific truths: and also much provender, signifies their goods: likewise room to spend the night, signifies state.

tion; and that in the present case it was a further exploration, is evident from what was said above, n. 3088, 3101; and that it was concerning innocence, appears from the signification of damsel, as denoting affection in which is innocence, see n. 3067; here indeed damsel is not named, but inasmuch as above, verses 14 and 16, Rebecca is called damsel, and the question here is put to her, therefore thou in the present passage can signify nothing else but damsel. In respect to what is here treated of viz. that truth was explored, as to what innocence it had, and presently also as to what charity, before it was initiated in good, and conjoined thereto, it must needs appear wonderful to those who have no knowledge of this matter; let such however know, that in regard to the initiation and conjunction of truth with good in every man, there is the most exquisite exploration, and such as surpasses all belief; to the most real essential good there is in no case any thing admitted but the most real essential truth; when any thing not so true approaches, it does not conjoin itself with real essential good, but with some good which in itself is not good, yet which appears as good; if any thing false approaches, the good betakes itself inwards, and what is false conjoins itself outwardly with some evil, which it believes to be good; this Divine disposing is effected of the Lord, by means of spirits and angels, and is most hidden and mysterious in this world, but perfectly well known in another; every one also, whose reason is sound, may know this to be the case, at least may comprehend it; for what is evil and what is false is hell, and flows in from hell; whereas what is good and true is heaven, and also flows in through heaven from the Lord; this being the case, what is evil and what is true can no more be conjoined, than heaven can be conjoined to hell; wherefore herein a more exquisite balance of examinations is applied than any one could ever suppose; this then is what is meant by exploration.

3111. "Tell me I pray, is there room in thy father's house for us to spend the night"—that hereby is signified exploration concerning the good of charity, appears from the signification of the words, "Tell me I pray whether," as denoting exploration; and from the signification of house, as denoting good, see n. 2048, 2233, 2331; and from the signification of father here, viz. Bethuel, as denoting the good of charity, such as exists amongst the better disposed Gentiles, see n. 2865; the very origin of the affection of truth, which Rebecca represents, was from such good; and from the signification of room to spend the night, as denoting a state of abiding, see beneath, n. 3115. The reason why the exploration concerning the origin of the affection of truth as to innocence, and as to the good of charity, is described in the internal sense, is, because truth, which is to be initiated and conjoined to good, derives it's first origin from no other source, as may appear from all those with whom truth is received and wedded into good; within the Church, they who have not some measure of innocence and of charity towards their neighbour, howsoever they are acquainted with truth, and profess it with their lips, in no case acknowledge it in heart; and out of the Church, amongst the Gentiles who are called to the truths of faith, or are instructed concerning it in another life, no others receive it, but such as are in innocence, and live in mutual charity with each other; for innocence and charity make the ground, in which the seeds of faith may take root and bud forth.

3112. "And she said unto him, I am the daughter of Bethuel, the son of Milcah, whom she bare to Nahor"—that hereby is signified all her origin, viz. of the affection of truth, appears from the representation of Bethuel, and also of Milcah and Nahor, as denoting the origin of the affection of truth, which is represented by Rebecca, see n. 3078.

3113. "And she said unto him"—that hereby is signified perception, appears from the signification of saying in the historical parts of the Word, as denoting to perceive in the internal sense, concerning which much has been said above.

3114. "We have both straw"—that hereby are signified scientific truths; "likewise much provender"—that hereby are signified their goods, appears from the signification of straw and provender; the ground and reason why straw signifies scientific truths is, because it is predicated of camels, such being their food; for when by camels is signified the natural man as to common scientifics, then by his food, viz. by straw, nothing else can be signified, for he has no other food which is the food of his life; his nourishment is thence derived, and if such food should fail him, viz. science, he would not subsist; that this is the case, is evident from the life after death, for then such things are to spirits instead of food, see n. 56, 57, 58, 680, 681, 1480, 1695, 1973, 1974. In the natural man, as in the rational, there are two sorts of things in general which constitute his essence, viz. things intellectual and things voluntary (or appertaining to the will); to things intellectual appertain truths, to things voluntary appertain goods; the truths of the natural man are scientific truths, viz. whatsoever things are in his external memory; these are the things which are signified by straw when the subject treated of is concerning camels, also concerning horses, mules, and asses; but the goods of the natural man are delights, especially such as originate in the affection of those truths.

3115. "Also room to spend the night"—that hereby is signified state, appears from the signification of room (or place), as denoting state, see n. 2625, 2837; and from the signification of spending the night, as denoting to abide or to have an abode, see n. 2330; in the present case, therefore denoting a state of the affection of truth, from what origin it was; it's origin is described by those things which are represented by Bethuel, Milcah, and Nahor, and it's affinities (or relationships) by Laban in what follows; which origin, as being obscure, is signified as to it's state by room (or place) to spend the night, as also above.

3116. The subject treated of in these three verses is concerning the exploration of truth, which was about to be initiated and thereby conjoined to good, and this especially in regard to it's origin, for on the origin all and singular things depend; the derivations take their form thence as from their root, or as from their seed, just as a plant or tree do from their's: these things the Lord saw and explored in Himself from His Divine [principle], and by His own proper Wisdom and Intelligence initiated, viz. truths into good of the rational principle; the exploration itself is here described in the internal sense, but the things contained therein admit only of a very brief explication: exploration also has place with every man who is reformed, and also with every one who receives remains, but of this exploration man knows little or nothing; it is in such obscurity with him that he does not even believe that it exists, when yet it has place and is effected every moment, but from the Lord, Who alone sees man's state, not only what it is at present, but what it will be to all eternity. Exploration is a most exquisite balance of examination, lest the least of what is false should be conjoined to good, or the least of what is true should be conjoined to evil; in either case man would perish eternally, for he would then hang in another life between hell and heaven, and by reason of good he would be spewed out of hell, and by reason of evil out of heaven.

3117. Verses 26, 27. And the man bended himself, and bowed down himself to Jehovah. And he said, blessed Jehovah God of my lord Abraham, Who hath not forsaken His Mercy and Truth from being with my lord; I being in the way, Jehovah hath led me to the house of the brethren of my lord. The man bended himself, and bowed down himself to Jehovah, signifies gladness and joy; and said, blessed Jehovah God of my lord Abraham, signifies here, as above, from the essential Divine [principle] Itself and the Divine Human: who hath not forsaken His Mercy, signifies a perception of an influx of love: and His Truth from being with my lord, signifies an influx of charity thence: I being in the way, signifies being in a state of the conjunction of truth with good in the rational principle; Jehovah hath led me to the house of the brethren of my lord, signifies to the good of truth.

3118. "The man bended himself, and bowed down himself to Jehovah"—that hereby is signified gladness and joy, appears from the signification of bending himself and of bowing down himself, as denoting to be glad and to rejoice; bending and bowing are gestures of humiliation, or humiliation in act, as well in a state of grief as in a state of joy: in a state of grief, when what is wished for does not come to pass, and in a state of joy, when it does come to pass, as in the present case, in that Rebecca, according to the wish of his heart, gave him to drink out of her cask, and made his camels drink also; that bowing down is a gesture of joy, may be seen also, n. 2927, 2950: gladness and joy are both mentioned, by reason that gladness in the Word is predicated of truth, whereas joy is predicated of good; gladness has also relation to the countenance, but joy to the heart, or, what is the same thing, gladness has relation to spiritual affection or truth, whereas joy has relation to celestial affection or good, thus gladness is in a less degree than joy, as bending is also in a less degree than bowing; which is also evident from this consideration, that the man of the spiritual Church only bends himself before the Lord and invokes grace, whereas the man of the celestial Church bows himself before the Lord and implores mercy, see n. 598, 981, 2423; each is here mentioned, by reason of the marriage of good and truth in every part of the Word, see n. 683, 793, 801, 2516, 2712.

3119. "And he said, blessed Jehovah God of my lord Abraham"—that hereby is signified from the essential Divine [principle] Itself and the Divine Human, appears from what was said above, n. 3061, where the same words occur, except that it is here said blessed; blessed Jehovah was a form of thanksgiving, thus also of joy and gladness, when any wished-for event came to pass; moreover what the ancients meant by blessing Jehovah, may be seen, n. 1096, 1422.

3120. "Who hath not forsaken His Mercy"—that hereby is signified perception of an influx of love, appears from the signification of mercy, as denoting love, see n. 1735, 3063, 3073; the ground and reason why by these words, "He hath not forsaken His Mercy," is signified perception of an influx of love, is, because they are words of acknowledgment and of confession, and all acknowledgment and confession is from a perception of influx.

3121. "And His Truth from being with my lord"—that hereby is signified an influx of charity thence, appears from the signification of truth, as denoting charity; truth in a proper sense signifies the same as faith, and in the Hebrew tongue faith is also expressed by such an expression, so that what is called truth in the Word of the Old Testament, is every where called faith in the Word of the New Testament; wherefore also it has been so often said in the foregoing pages, that truth is of faith, and that good is of love: but that faith in the internal sense is nothing else than charity, may be seen by what has been said and shewn above, as that there is no faith except by love, n. 30, 31 to 38; that faith is never given unless where charity is, n. 654, 724, 1162, 1176, 2261; that faith is faith grounded in charity, n. 1608, 2049, 2116, 2419, 2343, 2349; that charity constitutes the Church, not faith separate from charity, n. 809, 916, 1798, 1799, 1834, 1844, 2190, 2228, 2442; hence it is evident, that truth, or faith, in the internal sense, is the same as charity; for all faith is grounded in charity, and the faith which is not grounded therein is not faith; or, what is the same thing, that all truth in the internal sense is good, for all truth is grounded in good, and that truth which is not grounded therein is not truth, for truth is nothing else but the form of good, see n. 3049, and neither it's birth nor it's life are from any other source.

3122. Moreover, in regard to this truth, by which is signified charity, the case is this; the most ancient people, who were celestial, by mercy and truth which is from the Lord, understood nothing else but the reception of an influx of love to the Lord, and thence of charity towards their neighbour; whereas the ancients, who were spiritual, by mercy and truth, from the Lord with themselves, understood charity and faith; the reason is, because the celestial never thought concerning those things which appertain to faith or truth, but concerning those things which appertain to good or love, as may appear from what has been said above respecting the celestial man, n. 202, 337, 2669, 2715; celestial men also, when they were reformed and regenerated, were introduced to love to the Lord by charity towards their neighbour; hence it is evident, that by mercy from the Lord they understood nothing else but the perception of an influx of love to Him, and by truth an influx of charity towards the neighbour thence derived: but it is otherwise with the spiritual; these think concerning the things which are of faith, and when they are reformed and regenerated, they are introduced by the things which are of faith to charity towards their neighbour; wherefore when these latter are treated of, by mercy from the Lord is meant an influx of charity towards their neighbour, and by truth an influx of faith; but still this faith, when the spiritual man is regenerated, becomes charity, for then he acts from charity, inasmuch as whosoever does not act from charity, is not regenerated, but he who acts from charity is regenerated, and in this case he makes no account of the things which are of faith or truth, inasmuch as he lives by virtue of the good of faith, and no longer by it's truth, for truth has so conjoined itself to good, that it no longer appears, except only as the form of good, that is, faith appears no otherwise than as the form of charity: hence it may appear, what the most ancient people, and what the ancients understood by mercy and truth, which are so often mentioned in the Word, as in David, "The king shall dwell for ever before God, O prepare mercy and truth, let them guard him," lxi. 7: again, "Mercy and truth shall meet, righteousness and peace shall kiss," Psalm lxxxv. 10: again, "The Lord God great in mercy and truth," Psalm lxxxvi. 15: again, "My truth and my mercy shall be with him," Psalm lxxxix. 24: again, "Jehovah hath remembered His mercy and truth to the house of Israel," Psalm xcvi. 3: again, "Jehovah, not unto us, but unto Thy name give glory, by reason of Thy mercy and truth," Psalm cxv. 1: so in Micah, "Jehovah God will give truth to Jacob, mercy to Abraham, which Thou hast sworn to our fathers, from the days of old." vii. 20; where Jacob denotes the Lord's external man, and Abraham the internal, as to the Human [principle]: so in Hosea, "Jehovah hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the earth, because there is no truth and no mercy, and no knowledge of God," iv. 1; where no truth denotes no reception of the influx of charity; no mercy denotes no reception of the influx of love; and no knowledge of God denotes no reception of the influx of the truth of faith.

3123. "I being in the way"—that hereby is signified in a state of conjunction of truth with good in the rational principle, appears from the signification of way, as denoting truth, see n. 627, 2333; in the present case, in the way denotes the conjunction of truth with good in the rational principle, this being the subject treated of in this chapter, see n. 3012, 3013; for any one is then said to be in the way, when he advances whither he intends to go.

3124. "Jehovah hath led me to the house of the brethren of my lord"—that hereby is signified to the good of truth, appears from the signification of the house of the brethren whereof Rebecca was, as denoting good from which is truth; That the house of brethren is good, in the present case good wherein truth is grounded, appears from the signification of house as denoting good, see n. 2233, 2234, 2559; and of brethren as denoting whence that good is from which is derived the truth, which is represented by Rebecca.

3125. In the foregoing verses the subject treated of is concerning the exploration of truth which was to be conjoined to good in the rational principle, as to innocence, as to charity, and as to origin; for since the Lord, by His own proper power, made His rational principle Divine, as well in respect to truth as in respect to good, therefore He explored the truth which He conjoined to good. But with men truth is conjoined to good, not by their own proper power, but by the power of the Lord; which may be evident from this consideration, that all good and truth flows in from the Lord, and that all reformation and regeneration is from the Lord, and that man does not in the least know how he is regenerated; at this day indeed, he does not even know that he is regenerated by truth and good, still less that truth is to be initiated and conjoined to good, and that this is effected as it were by exploration, that is, most exactly. The subject treated of in these two verses is concerning perception as to the quality of truth, and whence it was, and at the same time concerning joy on that account; therefore in what follows, initiation is treated of.

3126. Verses 28, 29, 30. And the damsel ran, and told to the house of her mother, according to these words. And Rebecca had a brother, and his name was Laban, and Laban ran to the man forth to the fountain. And it came to pass, when he saw the ornament and bracelets upon the hands of his sister, and when he heard the words of Rebecca his sister, saying, thus spake the man unto me, that he came to the man, and lo! he was standing at the camels at the fountain. The damsel ran, signifies the mind of that affection: and told to the house of her mother, according to these words, signifies to natural good of every sort whither illustration could reach: and Rebecca had a brother, signifies the affection of good in the natural man: and his name was Laban, signifies the quality of that affection: and Laban ran to the man forth to the fountain, signifies the mind thereof towards truth which was to be initiated in Truth Divine: and it came to pass, when he saw the ornament and the bracelets on the hands of his sister, signifies when he saw Divine Good and Divine Truth in the power of the affection of truth, which is sister: and when he heard the words of Rebecca his sister, signifies the inclination thereof: saying, thus spake the man unto me, signifies the propensity of truth in the natural man: he came to the man, signifies that he adjoined himself: and lo! he was standing at the camels, signifies presence in common scientifics: at the fountain, signifies their illustration from Truth Divine.

3127. "The damsel ran"—that hereby is signified the mind (animus) of that affection, appears from the signification of running, as denoting somewhat of propensity or of mind; and from the signification of damsel, as denoting affection in which is innocence, see above, n. 3067, 3110.

3128. "And told to the house of her mother according to these words"—that hereby is signified to natural good of every sort whither illustration could reach, appears from the signification of the house of a mother, as denoting good of the external man, that is, natural good; that house is good, may be seen, n. 2233, 2234, 2559; and that man's external or natural principle is from the mother, but the internal from the father, n. 1815: good appertaining to man is in the Word compared to a house, and on this account man, who is principled in good, is called the house of God; but internal good is called the father's house, whereas good which is in the same degree is called the house of brethren, but external good, which is the same as natural good, is called the mother's house; all good and truth also is thus born, viz. by an influx of internal good as a father, into external good as a mother. Inasmuch as the subject treated of in this verse is concerning the origin of truth, which was to be conjoined to good in the rational principle, therefore it is said that Rebecca, by whom that truth is represented, ran to the house of her mother, for hence is the origin of truth, since, as was said and shewn above, all good flows in by an internal way, or by the way of the soul, into man's rational principle, and through that into his scientific principle, even into the scientific sensual principle, and by illustration therein causes truths to be seen; hence truths are called forth, and are stripped of their natural form, and are conjoined to good in the midway, viz. in the rational principle, and together constitute the rational man, and at length the spiritual. But how these things are effected is altogether unknown to man, inasmuch as at this day he scarce knows what good is, and that it is distinct from truth, still less does he know that he is reformed by an influx of good into truth, and by the conjunction of each; neither is it known that the rational principle is distinct from the natural; and since these things, which are most common (or general), are unknown, it cannot possibly be known how the initiation of truth into good, and the conjunction of each, is effected, which are the subjects treated of in this chapter in the internal sense; but whereas these arcana are revealed, and are evident to those who are principled in good, that is, who are angelic minds, therefore, howsoever obscure they may appear to others, still it is expedient they should be expounded, because they are contained in the internal sense. Concerning the illustration from good by truth in the natural man, which is here the mother's house, the case is this. Divine Good with man flows into his rational principle, and through the rational into his natural principle, and indeed into the scientifics thereof, or the knowledges and doctrinals therein, as was said above, and thereby inaptation forms to itself truths, whereby in such case it illustrates all things which are in the natural man; but if the life of the natural man be such, as not to receive Divine Good, but either to repel, or pervert, or suffocate it, in this case Divine Good cannot be inapted (infitted), consequently neither can it form to itself truths, and thus neither can the natural principle be illustrated; for illustration in the natural man is effected from good by truths, and when there is no longer any illustration, there can be no reformation: this is the reason why, in the internal sense of the Word, the natural man is also much treated of as to his quality, thus whence truth is, viz. that it is from good therein.

3129. “And Rebecca had a brother”—that hereby is signified the affection of good in the natural man, appears from the signification of brother and sister in the Word, viz. that brother is the affection of good, and sister the affection of truth, see n. 367, 2360, 2508, 2524; for there are in the natural man, as in the rational, consanguinities and affinities of all things which are therein, see n. 2556, 2739; hence also it is, that the mind, as well the rational as the natural, is called a house or family, where parents, brethren, sisters, kinsmen, and relations exist in order.

3131. “And Laban ran to the man forth to the fountain”—that hereby is signified the mind thereof, viz. of the affection of good towards truth, which was to be initiated in Truth Divine, appears from the signification of running, as denoting propensity or mind, see above n. 3127; and from the representation of Laban, as denoting the affection of good, see n. 3129, 3130; and from the signification of man (vir), as denoting truth, see n. 265, 749, 1007: and from the signification of fountain, as denoting also truth, in the present case Truth Divine, concerning which see n. 2702, 3096, and beneath, n. 3137. From these, and the rest of the things here treated of, it may appear what is the nature and quality of the internal sense of the Word, and what arcana are contained therein; who could know, except from an interior examination of the Word, and at the same time from revelation, that these words, “Laban ran to the man forth to the fountain,” signify the mind of the affection of good towards truth which was to be initiated in Truth Divine? Nevertheless this is what the angels perceive, when these words are read by man; for such are the correspondencies between the ideas of a man and the ideas of an angel, that whilst a man conceives those words according to the sense of the letter, and has an idea of Laban as running to the man forth to the fountain, an angel perceives the mind of the affection of good towards truth which is to be initiated in Truth Divine; for the angels have no idea of Laban, nor of running nor of a fountain, but they have spiritual corresponding ideas; that such is the correspondence of things, and thence of ideas, natural and spiritual, may also appear from what was said concerning correspondencies, n. 1563, 1568, 2763, 2987 to 3003, 3021. In respect to the thing itself, viz. that truth is to be initiated in Truth Divine, the case is this; the first truth in the natural man is not Divine Truth, but truth appearing as Divine; for all truth, in its first infancy, is not truth, but somewhat appearing like truth, which in process of time puts off its appearance, and puts on the essence of truth; in order to the better apprehending of this, the following example may serve, amongst many others, in the way of illustration: it is a Truth Divine, that the Lord is never angry, never punishes any one, still less does evil to any one, and that from the Lord there never comes any thing but good; nevertheless this truth in its first infancy is thus apprehended, viz. that the Lord is angry when any one commits sin, and that the Lord therefore punishes, yea, with some it is conceived that evil is from the Lord; but as man advances from infancy, and grows up to maturity of judgment, he puts off that, which was to him as truth from an appearance of its being so, and by degrees puts on the real truth itself, viz. that the Lord is never angry, neither does He punish, still less does He cause evil; and thus by the former truth he is initiated into this latter; for that which first enters is common (or general truth), which in itself is obscure, in which scarce any thing appears, until it is illustrated by particulars, and these by singulars, and in this case, when it is illustrated, interior things are made manifest: thus fallacies and appearances, which are truths in time of ignorance, are dissipated and shaken off.

3132. "And it came to pass when he saw the ornament and the bracelets on the hands of his sister"—that hereby is signified when he perceived Divine Good and Divine Truth in the power of the affection of truth, which is sister, appears from the signification of seeing, as denoting to perceive, see n. 2150; and from the signification of ornament, as denoting Divine Good, see n. 3103, 3105; and from the signification of bracelets, as denoting Divine Truth, see also n. 3103, 3105; and from the signification of hands, as denoting power, see n. 878, 3091; and from the signification of sister, as denoting the affection of truth, see n. 2508, 2524, 2556; from which it is evident, that to see the ornaments and the bracelets on the hands of his sister, is to perceive Divine Good and Divine Truth in the power of the affection of truth. The case herein is this; the conjunction of Divine Good and Divine Truth in the Lord, is the essential Divine marriage, from which is derived the celestial marriage, which in like manner is the conjunction of good and of truth, and from this is also conjugal love, see n. 2727 to 2759; hence it is, that wherever marriage is treated of in the Word, in the internal sense is signified celestial marriage, which is that of good and of truth, and in the supreme sense Divine marriage, which has place in the Lord; wherefore here, by the marriage between Isaac and Rebecca, nothing else is understood; the conjunction of good and truth is the real marriage itself, whereas the initiation is the betrothing, or the state preceding marriage; but the state previous to betrothing is what is here described; in this state, as it is in the power of a damsel to be betrothed, and afterwards as a wife to be joined to an husband, so it is in the power of the affection of truth to be initiated in Divine Truth, and thus to be conjoined to Divine Good : moreover, in the first and afterwards in every affection of truth, with the Lord, there was intimately the essential Divine Good and Divine Truth, because there was Jehovah Himself, hence the power which is here treated of.

3133. "And when he heard the words of Rebecca his sister"—that hereby is signified the inclination thereof, appears from the affection contained in these words, and also from what precedes ; for they testify inclination on the part of the affection of truth, which is here represented by Rebecca the sister.

no one shall pass by, their cities shall be laid waste, and there shall be no man, and no inhabitant," iii. 6; no man denotes no truth, and no inhabitant denotes no good, see n. 2268, 2451, 2712; besides many other places.

3135. "He came to the man"—that hereby is signified that he adjoined himself, viz. the affection of good which is represented by Laban, see n. 3129, 3130, with truth, which is signified by the man, see n. 3134, each in the natural man, may appear without explication.

3137. "At the fountain"—that hereby is signified their illustration from Truth Divine, appears from the signification of fountain, as denoting truth, see n. 2702, 3096, in the present case Truth Divine, as above, n. 3131; the Word, as being Truth Divine, is therefore called a fountain: that to stand at the fountain here involves, in the internal sense, the illustration of those things which are in the natural man, follows from the series of the things treated of, for where Truth Divine is, there is illustration.

3138. The subject treated of in these three verses is concerning the preparation and illustration of the natural man, in order that truth may be called forth thence, which is to be conjoined to good in the rational principle: but with respect to preparation and illustration, the case is this; there are two lights which form the intellectuals of man, the light of heaven, and the light of the world; the light of heaven is from the Lord, Who to the angels in another life is a Sun and Moon, see n. 1053, 1521, 1529, 1530; the light of the world is from the sun and moon which appear before the bodily sight; the internal man has his vision and his understanding from the light of heaven, but the external man has his vision and his understanding from the light of the world; the influx of the light of heaven into those things which are of the light of the world, causes illustration, and at the same time perception; if there be correspondence, the perception of truth; if there be not correspondence, the perception of what is false instead of truth; but illustration and perception cannot be given, unless there be affection or love, which is spiritual heat, and gives life to those things which are illustrated by light; just as, comparatively speaking, the light of the sun does not give life to vegetables, but the heat which is in the light, as is evident from the seasons of the year. In the verses which now immediately follow, preparation is farther described, viz. that the light of heaven which is the Divine [light] of the Lord, flowed into those things which were of the light of the world in his natural man, that thence he might bring out truth, and this by the ordinary way, which was to be conjoined to good in the rational principle; therefore to the intent that the Lord might make His Human [principle] Divine, by an ordinary way, He came into the world, that is, was willing to be born as another man, and to be instructed as another, and as another to be re-born, but with this difference, that man is re-born of the Lord, but that the Lord not only regenerated Himself, but also glorified Himself, that is, made Himself Divine; further, that man is made new by an influx of charity and faith, but the Lord by Love Divine, which was in Him, and which was His; hence it may be seen, that the regeneration of man is an image of the Glorification of the Lord; or, what is the same thing, that in the process of the regeneration of man, as in an image, may be seen, although remotely, the process of the Lord's Glorification.

3139. Verses 31, 32, 33. And he said, come blessed of Jehovah, why standest thou abroad, and I have swept the house, and there is room for the camels. And the man came to the house and loosed the camels, and gave straw and provender to the camels; and water to wash his feet, and the feet of the men who were with him. And there was set before him to eat, and he said, I eat not until I have spoken my words, and he said, speak. He said, come blessed of Jehovah, signifies an invitation of the Divine [principle] with Itself: why standest thou abroad, signifies somewhat thence; and I have swept the house, signifies that all things were prepared and full of goods; and there is room [or place] for the camels, signifies a state for all things which should be subservient thereto; and the man came to the house, signifies influx into good therein; and loosed the camels, signifies liberty to those things which were to be subservient: and gave straw and provender to the camels, signifies instruction in truths and goods: and water to wash his feet, signifies purification there; and the feet of the men who were with him, signifies purification of all things which were in his natural man: and there was set before him to eat, signifies that good in the natural man was willing that those things, [viz. things Divine] should be appropriated: and he said, I eat not, signifies refusal: until I have spoken my words, signifies before I was instructed: and he said, speak, signifies desire.

3140. "He said, come blessed of Jehovah"—that hereby is signified the invitation of the Divine [principle] with Itself, appears from the signification of come, as denoting invitation: and from the signification of blessed of Jehovah, as denoting the Divine [principle]: that by blessed of Jehovah is signified the Divine [principle] Itself, may be seen, n. 1096, 1420, 1422; of consequence by blessed of Jehovah is signified the Divine [principle] thence derived: Good is the Divine [principle] Itself, but

Truth is the Divine [principle] thence derived; by the man here, who was sent by Abraham, is signified truth which was from the Divine [principle] in the natural man, see n. 3134: Truth Divine, is what is called blessed of Jehovah, and what is invited.

3141. "Why standest thou abroad"—that hereby is signified somewhat thence [aliquantum inde], may appear without explanation: the case is this; the Lord's Divine rational principle was born from the essential Divine Truth Itself conjoined to Divine Good; the Divine rational principle is Isaac, who was born to Abraham, who is the Divine Good there, of Sarah, who is the Divine Truth there, as was shewn above; the Divine rational principle of the Lord alone was thus born, and this from Himself, because the very essential Esse of the Lord was Jehovah, or the essential Divine Good Itself, and the very essential Esse of the Lord thence derived was of Jehovah, or the essential Divine Truth Itself; Divine Good in the rational principle, which is Isaac, was thus born, which was not good separate from Truth, but was Divine Good with Divine Truth, but each together is called good in the rational principle, to which was to be joined truth from the natural man, which truth is Rebecca; that the Lord might make His Human [principle] Divine, both as to Good and as to Truth, and this by an ordinary way, as was said above, n. 3138, it could not be done otherwise; for this is the Divine Order, according to which all regeneration is wrought, consequently according to which the Lord's Glorification was wrought, see n. 3138. This Divine Good by Divine Truth in the rational principle was what flowed into the natural man, and illustrated all things therein; the process itself is here described, viz. that it first flowed-in somewhat more remotely, which is here meant by somewhat thence, and that it was not willing to flow-in more nearly before instruction; for the ordinary way is, that instruction ought to precede, and that influx has place according to degrees of instruction, and thus truth may continually thence exist, which may be initiated and afterwards conjoined to good of the rational principle. From these particulars it may be seen what arcana are contained in the internal sense of the Word, and that these arcana are such, that they can scarce be apprehended by man as to their most common [or general] meaning, and yet that they are evident to the angels, together with innumerable particulars, which can never be expressed by words.

3142. "And I have swept the house"—that hereby is signified that all things were prepared and full of goods, appears from the signification of sweeping, as denoting to prepare and to be filled, of which we shall speak presently; and from the signification of house, as denoting good, see n. 2233, 2234, 2559, and that man himself, by virtue of the good which is in him, is called a house, n. 3128: the ground and reason why to sweep denotes to prepare and to be filled is, because nothing else is required of man, but to sweep the house, that is, to reject the lusts of evil, and the persuasions of what is false thence originating; in this case he is filled with good things, for good from the Lord continually flows-in, but into the house, or into man, purged from such things as impede influx, that is, which either reflect, or pervert, or suffocate the in-flowing good; hence it was a customary formula of speaking with the ancients, to sweep or purge the house, also to sweep and prepare the way; and by sweeping the house was meant to purge themselves from evils, and thus to prepare themselves for the entrance of goods; whereas to sweep the way was meant to prepare themselves for the reception of truths; for by house was signified good, see n. 3128, and by way truth, see n. 627, 2333; as in Isaiah, "The voice of one crying in the wilderness, sweep ye (prepare) the way of Jehovah, and make straight the path in the desert for our God," xl. 3: again in the same prophet, "Make level, make level, sweep (prepare) the way, remove the stumbling-block from the way of my people," lvii. 14: again, "Pass through, pass through the gates, sweep (prepare) the way of the people, make level, make level the way, gather out the stones," lxii. 10; so in Malachi, "Behold I send my angel, and he shall sweep (prepare) the way before me, and the Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to the temple," iii. 1; in these passages to sweep the way denotes to make themselves ready and to prepare to receive truth. The subject here treated of, is concerning the coming of the Lord, for Whom they were to prepare themselves in order to receive the truth of faith, and thereby the good of charity, and thus eternal salvation. So in David, "Thou hast caused a vine to come forth out of Egypt, thou hast driven out the nations, and planted it, thou hast swept before it, and hast caused its roots to be rooted, and it hath filled the land," Psalm lxxx. 8, 9: speaking in a supreme sense of the Lord; the vine out of Egypt is truth from scientifics; to drive out the nations is to purge from evils; to sweep before it is to make ready that goodnesses may fill. To sweep the house also in an opposite sense is applied to man, to signify one who deprives himself of all things good and true, and who is thereby filled with things evil and false, as in Luke, "The unclean spirit, if he doth not find rest, saith, I will return to my house, whence I came forth, and if he cometh and findeth it swept and adorned, then he departeth and taketh ~~seven~~ other spirits worse than himself, and entering in they dwell there," xi. 24, 25, 26. Matt. xii. 43, 44, 45.

3143. "And there is room (or place) for the camels"—that hereby is signified a state for all things which should be subservient thereto, appears from the signification of room (or place), as denoting state, see n. 1273 to 1277, 1376 to 1381, 2625; and from the signification of camels, as denoting common scientifics, see n. 3048, 3071; that these are things subservient, may be seen n. 1486, 3019, 3020; for all things appertaining to the natural man are of no other use, than to be subservient to the spiritual, wherefore also men-servants, maid-servants, camels, and asses, in the internal sense, signify especially those things which appertain to the natural man.

3144. "And the man came to the house"—that hereby is signified influx into good there, appears from the signification of coming, as denoting in the present case to flow-in: and from the signification of house, as denoting good, see n. 2233, 2234, 2559.

3145. "And he loosed the camels"—that hereby is signified liberty to those things which were to be subservient, appears from the signification of loosing, as denoting to make free; and from the signification of camels, as denoting common scientifics, thus the things which were to be subservient, as immediately above, n. 3142. The real case is this; without liberty (or freedom) there is never any production of truth in the natural man, nor any calling forth of truth thence into the rational man, and conjunction with good therein; all these things are effected in a free state; for it is the affection of truth grounded in good which constitutes freedom; unless truth be learnt from affection, and thus in freedom, it is not implanted, still less is it exalted towards the interiors, and there made faith. That all reformation is effected in freedom, and that all freedom is of affection, and that the Lord keeps man in freedom, to the intent that he may of himself and of his own proprium be affected by truth and good, and thus be regenerated, may be seen, n. 2870 to 2893. This is what is signified by loosing the camels, and unless such a signification was implied, the circumstance would be too trifling to be recorded.

which is of love and charity by truth which is of faith ; unless spiritual heat, which is the good of love, operates by spiritual light which is the truth of faith, man would be as ground bound hard by frost, as in the time of winter, when nothing grows, and still less fructifies ; for as light without heat produces nothing, so nothing is produced by faith without love.

3147. "And water to wash his feet"—that hereby is signified purification there, appears from the signification of water to wash, or of washing with water, as denoting to purify, of which we shall speak presently ; and from the signification of feet, as denoting natural things, or, what is the same thing, those things which are in the natural man, see n. 2162. In the representative Church it was a common ceremony to wash the feet with water, thereby to signify, that the filth of the natural man should be washed away ; the filth of the natural man are all those things which relate to self-love and the love of the world, and when this filth is washed away, then goodnesses and truths flow-in, for this filth is what alone prevents the influx of good and of truth from the Lord ; for good is continually flowing-in from the Lord, but when it comes through the internal or spiritual man to his external or natural man, it is there either perverted, or reflected back, or suffocated : but when the things appertaining to self-love and the love of the world are removed, then good is there received, and there fructifies, for then man exercises himself in works of charity ; this may appear from many considerations, as from the state of man in misfortune, misery, and disease, when the things appertaining to the external or natural man are laid asleep, in which case man begins instantly to think piously, and to will what is good, and also to exercise himself in works of piety to the utmost of his ability ; but when the state is changed, there is a change also in these things. This was signified by washings in the ancient Church, and the same was represented in the Jewish Church. The reason why this was signified in the ancient Church, but was represented in the Jewish, was, because the man of the ancient Church regarded that rite as somewhat external in worship, nor did he believe that he was purified by washing, but by the washing away the filth of the natural man, which, as was said, are the things appertaining to self-love and the love of the world ; whereas the man of the Jewish Church believed that by washing he was purified, not knowing, nor being willing to know, that the purification of the interiors was thereby signified. That by washing was signified the washing away of that filth, may appear from Isaiah, "Wash yourselves, purify yourselves, put away the evil of your works from before mine eyes, cease to do evil," i. 16 ; where it is evident that to wash themselves denotes to purify themselves, and to put away evils : again, in the same prophet, "When the Lord shall wash the excrement of the daughters of Zion, and shall purge away the bloods of Jerusalem from the midst thereof, in the spirit of judgment, and in the spirit of expurgation," iv. 4; where to wash the excrement of the daughters of Zion, and to purge away the bloods of Jerusalem, denotes to purify from evils and falses: so in Jeremiah, "Wash thine heart from wickedness, O Jerusalem, that thou mayest be saved; how long shall the thoughts of thine iniquity tarry in the midst of thee?" iv. 14; so in Ezechiel, "I washed thee with waters, and I purged away bloods from upon thee, and anointed thee with oil," xvi. 9; speaking of Jerusalem, whereby is there meant the ancient Church; to wash with waters denotes to purify from false principles, to purge away bloods denotes to cleanse from evils, to anoint with oil denotes to fill with good in such case: so in David, "Wash me from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin; thou shalt purge me with hyssop, and I shall be cleansed, thou shalt wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow," Psalm li. 2, 7; where to be washed manifestly denotes to be purified from evils and from falses thence derived. These were the things which were signified by washing in the representative Church, and it was enjoined therein, for the sake of representation, that they should wash the skin, the hands, the feet, and also the garments, when they became unclean, and they should be cleansed; by all which things were signified the things appertaining to the natural man; the baths also, which were of brass, were placed out of the temple, viz. the brazen sea, and the ten brazen lavers, 1 Kings vii. 23 to 37, 38, 39; and the laver of brass, whereat Aaron and his sons were to wash themselves, was placed between the tent of the congregation and the altar, consequently also out of the tent, Exod. xxx. 18, 19, 21; by which also was signified that external or natural things only were to be purified; for unless these are purified, that is, unless the things of self-love and the love of the world are thence removed, it is impossible that things internal, which relate to love to the Lord and neighbourly love, should enter, as was said above. For the better conceiving how this case is, viz. that external things are to be purified, let us endeavour to illustrate it in the instance of good works, or what is the same thing, the goods of charity, which are at this day called the fruits of faith, and which as being exercises, are things external. Good works are evil works, unless the things appertaining to self-love and the love of the world ~~are~~ removed, for when works are done before the removal of these things, they appear outwardly good, but are inwardly evil, for they are done for the sake of reputation, or for the sake of gain, or for the sake of self-pre-eminence, or for the sake of recompence, thus they are either meritorious or hypocritical, for the things appertaining to self-love and the love of the world give to works such a nature and quality; but when these evils are removed, then the works become good, and are the goods of charity, there being nothing in them of self-respect, regard to the world, to reputation, or recompence; thus they are neither meritorious nor hypocritical, for in this case celestial and spiritual love from the Lord flows into the works, and causes them to become love and charity in act; and then the Lord by them also purifies the natural or external man, and disposes it to order, that it may receive correspondently the celestial and spiritual things which flow in. This appears manifestly from what the Lord taught, when He washed the feet of the disciples, as it is thus described in John, "He came to Simon Peter, who saith to Him, Lord, dost thou wash my feet? Jesus answered and said to him, what I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter: Peter saith to Him, thou shalt never wash my feet; Jesus answered him, if I wash thee not, thou hast no part with Me; Simon Peter saith to Him, Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head; Jesus saith to him, he that is washed, needeth not save to wash his feet, but is wholly clean; now ye are clean, but not all," xiii. 4 to 17; he that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, signifies that he who is reformed has need only to be cleansed as to natural things, that is, that evils and falses be removed thence, in which case all things are disposed to order by an influx of spiritual things from the Lord: moreover to wash the feet was a token of charity, to denote, that they did not reflect upon another's evils; and also of humiliation, to denote the cleansing another from evils as from filth, as may appear from the Lord's words in the same chapter, verses 13 to 17; also in Luke vii. 37, 38, 44, 46; John xi. 2; 1 Sam. xxv. 41. Every one may see, that by washing himself no one is purified from evils and falses, but only from the filth which adheres to him; nevertheless since it was amongst the rites commanded in the Church, it follows that somewhat peculiar is involved therein, viz. spiritual washing, that is, purification from that filth which inwardly adheres to man: such therefore in the representative Church as were acquainted with these things, and thought about purification of heart, or the removal of the evils of self-love and the love of the world from the natural man, and endeavoured to effect this with all diligence, these fulfilled the ordinance of washing, as an external ceremony of worship, in compliance with the commandment; but such as were not acquainted with those things, nor had any desire to be so, but thought that the mere ceremony of washing their garments, skin, hands, and feet, would purify them, and that in case they complied with this ritual, they might be allowed to live in avarice, hatreds, revenges, unmercifulness, and cruelty, which is spiritual filth, these rendered the ritual a mere idolatrous service; still however by this ritual they were capable of representing, and by representation of exhibiting somewhat of a Church, whereby there might be effected some conjunction of heaven with man, before the Lord's coming, yet such a conjunction as did but little or nothing affect the man of the Church. The Jews and Israelites were a people of this sort, that they thought not at all concerning the internal man, neither were they willing to know anything in relation thereto, consequently they thought not at all concerning things celestial and spiritual, which relate to the life after death; nevertheless, to prevent the total closing of communication with heaven, and thereby with the Lord, they were bound to external rites, whereby internal things were signified; all their captivities and plagues were in general for this end, that external rites might be duly observed for the sake of representation: hence then it was that "Moses washed Aaron and his sons with waters at the door of the tent, that they might be sanctified," Exod. xxix. 4; chap. xl. 12; Levit. viii. 6; and that "Aaron and his sons were to wash their hands and feet, before they entered into the tent of the assembly, and came near to the altar to minister, that they might not die, and that this should be to them the statute of an age," Exod. xxx. 18, 19, 20, 21; chap. xl. 30, 31: and that "Aaron was to wash his flesh, before he put on the garments of ministry," Levit. xvi. 4, 24; and "that the Levites were to be purified, by being sprinkled with the water of expiation, and that they should cause a razor to pass over their flesh, and should wash their garments, and thus should be pure," Numb. viii. 6, 7: and "that whosoever should eat the carcase of a clean beast, or torn, should wash his garments, and bathe himself in waters, and if he did not wash himself, and bathe his flesh, he should carry his iniquity," Levit. xvii. 15, 16; and "that whosoever touched the bed of one affected with the flux, or who sat upon a vessel on which he had sat, and whosoever touched his flesh, should wash his garments, and bathe himself with waters, and should be unclean till the evening," Levit. xv. 5, 6, 7, 10, 11, 12: and "that whosoever let go the he-goat for the scape-goat (Asasel), should wash his flesh," Levit. xvi. 26; and "that when a leprous person was cleansed, he was to wash his garments, to shave off all his hair, and to wash himself with waters, and he should be clean," Levit. xiv. 8, 9; yea, that "the very vessels, which were made unclean by the touching of things unclean, should pass through waters, and should be unclean till the evening," Levit. xi. 32. From these considerations it may appear, that no one was made clean or pure as to internal things by the mere rite of washing, but only represented one pure or clean for the reason spoken of above; that this is the case, the Lord teaches plainly in Matthew xv. 1, 2, 20; Mark vii. 1 to 23.

3148. "And the feet of the men who were with him—that hereby is signified the purification of all things which were in his natural man, appears from the signification of feet, as denoting the things appertaining to the natural man, see n. 2162; and from the signification of the men, who were with him, as denoting all things which were therein. It was customary in old time for travellers, when they came to any house, to wash their feet; as when the brethren of Joseph were introduced into Joseph's house, Gen. xlii. 24; and when the Levite and his attendant were received into the house of the old man, Judges xix. 21; and when Uriah, on his return home, was commanded by David to go down to his house, and to wash his feet, 2 Sam. xi. 8; the reason was, because journeyings and peregrinations signified things relating to instruction, and thence to life, see n. 1293, 1457, 1463, 2025; which things, as was shewn above, n. 3146, were to be purified; a further reason was, lest filth, understood in a spiritual sense, should adhere, and defile the house, that is, the man; as is also evident from our Lord's injunction to His disciples, "That they should shake off the dust of their feet, if the city or house did not receive peace," Matt. x. 14.

3149. "And there was set before him to eat"—that hereby is signified that the affection of good in the natural man was willing that those things [viz. things Divine] should be appropriated, appears from the representation of Laban, by whom it was set, as denoting the affection of good in the natural man, see n. 3129, 3130; and from the signification of eating, as denoting to be communicated and appropriated, see n. 2187, 2343, viz. the Divine things spoken of above, n. 3140, 3141.

3150. "And he said, I eat not"—that hereby is signified refusal, viz. that as yet they should not be thus appropriated, appears without explication.

3151. "Until I have spoken my words"—that hereby is signified before he was instructed, appears from the signification of speaking words, as denoting to instruct; the things which he spake, and which follow in the series, relate also to instruction: that things Divine flow into those things which are in the natural man, according to instruction, and advancement thereby, may be seen, n. 3141.

3152. "And he said, speak"—that hereby is signified desire, appears from the signification of speaking words, as denoting to instruct, in the present case, denoting that he should instruct, as signified by the expression, "Speak thou;" that these words imply desire is manifest.

3153. The contents of these three verses, in the internal sense, appear indeed from the explication, viz. that the things appertaining to the natural man should be prepared to receive Divine things; and thereby those truths which are signified by Rebecca, and which were to be initiated and conjoined to good of the rational principle, should be made Divine, and this by influx : but the things here contained in the internal sense are such, that unless they be viewed by one view of the thought, they appear too obscure to be apprehended, and especially because they are unknown, as for example, in respect to the manner how truths are called forth out of the natural man, and initiated into good in the rational principle, during man's regeneration ; these particulars are at this day so unknown, that it is not even known that such a process has place, the principal cause of which ignorance is, because at this day there are few who are regenerated, and such as are regenerated do not know from doctrine, that it is the good of charity into which the truth of faith is initiated, and to which it is conjoined, and this in the rational principle, and that in this case the state is altogether changed, viz. that the regenerate person no longer thinks from the truth of faith to the good of charity, but from the good of charity to the truth of faith. In the Lord's case, however, there was not regeneration, but Glorification, that is, all things, as well in the rational principle, as in the natural, were made Divine from Himself ; how this was effected is described in the internal sense.

3154. Verses 34 to 48. And he said, I am the servant of Abraham. And Jehovah hath blessed my lord exceedingly, and hath magnified him, and hath given him flock and herd, and silver and gold, and men-servants and maid-servants, and camels and asses. And Sarah, the wife of my lord, hath brought forth a son to my lord, after her old age, and he hath given him all that he hath. And my lord adjured me, saying, thou shalt not take a woman for my son of the daughters of the Canaanite, in whose land I dwell. Thou shalt not go but to the house of my father, and to my family, and shall take a woman for my son. And I said to my lord, perhaps the woman will not go after me. And he said to me, Jehovah, before Whom I have walked, will send His angel before thee, and will prosper thy way, and thou shalt take a woman for my son, out of my family, and out of the house of my father. In this case thou shalt be free from my curse, that thou camest to my family, and if they shall not give to thee, thou shalt be free from my curse. And I came to-day to the fountain, and said, Jehovah God of my lord Abraham, if Thou dost, I pray, prosper my way wherein I walk. Behold I stand at the fountain of waters, and let it come to pass, that the damsel who cometh forth to draw, and I say to her, cause me I pray to drink a little water out of thy cask, and she shall say unto me, drink both thou, and I will also draw for thy camels, she shall be the woman whom Jehovah hath destined for the son of my lord. I had scarce made an end of speaking to mine heart, when lo ! Rebecca came forth, and her cask upon her shoulder, and she came down to the fountain, and drew, and I said unto her, cause me to drink I pray. And she hastened and let down her cask from above her, and said, drink thou, and I will also make thy camels drink ;

and I drank, and she also made the camels drink. And I asked her, and said, whose daughter art thou? And she said the daughter of Bethuel the son of Nahor, whom Milcah bare to him; and I set an ornament on her nose, and bracelets on her hands. And I bended and bowed myself to Jehovah, and blessed Jehovah God of my lord Abraham, Who hath led me into the way of truth to take a daughter of the brother of my lord for his son.

And he said, I am the servant of Abraham, signifies that he was from the Divine Good: and Jehovah hath blessed my lord exceedingly and hath magnified him, signifies the Divine Human [principle] as to good and as to truth: and hath given him flock and herd, signifies goods in general: and silver and gold, signifies truths in general: and men-servants, and maid-servants, and camels, and asses, signifies truths in particular: and Sarah, the wife of my lord hath brought forth a son to my lord, signifies the rational Divine [principle] from Divine Truth: after his old age, signifies when the state was: and hath given him all that he hath, signifies that he has all Divine things: and my lord adjoined me, signifies here, as above, a binding and a sacrament: saying, thou shalt not take a woman for my son of the daughters of the Canaanite, signifies here, as above, that the rational Divine [principle] should not be conjoined to any affection which disagrees with truth: in whose land I dwell, signifies things discordant wherein Good Divine is: thou shalt not go but to the house of my father, signifies good which is from the Divine [principle]: and to my family, signifies truth which is from the Divine [principle]: and thou shalt take a woman for my son, signifies that hence would be conjunction: and I said to my lord, perhaps the woman will not go after me, signifies here, as above, a doubting of the natural man concerning that affection, whether it was separable: and he said to me, signifies instruction: Jehovah, before Whom I have walked, will send His angel with thee, signifies here, as above, the Divine Providence: and will prosper thy way, signifies as to truth: and thou shalt receive a woman for my son, signifies that there would be conjunction: out of my family, and out of the house of my father, signifies from good and truth derived therein from the Divine [principle]: in this case thou shalt be free from my curse, signifies here, as above, the liberty which the natural man had: that thou camest to my family, and if they shall not give to thee, signifies as to separation: and thou shalt be free from my curse, signifies that in this case the natural man shall be in no fault. The rest, as far as verse 48, signify like things as before.

3155. To explain these particulars is needless, inasmuch as they have been explained above in this chapter: they are repeated again, to the intent that the natural man might be instructed; for in regard to the initiation and conjunction of truth with good, the case is as when a virgin is betrothed and afterwards coupled to a husband, viz. that she must be instructed in all things before she gives consent: although these things do not appear to man when truth in him are initiated and conjoined to good, that is, when man is reformed, still they are effected, viz. instruction precedes, with good concerning truth, and with truth concerning good, afterwards follows consent on each part, which is the subject next treated of in this chapter.

3156. Verses 49, 50, 51. And now if ye are doing mercy and truth with my lord, tell me, and if not tell me, and I will look to the right or to the left. And Laban answered and Bethuel, and said, from Jehovah hath come forth the Word, we cannot speak to thee evil or good. Behold Rebecca before thee, receive and depart, and let the woman be for the son of thy lord, as Jehovah hath spoken. Now if ye do mercy and truth with my lord, signifies an exploration of their consent from each faculty, of will and of understanding: tell me, and if not, tell me, signifies the free state of their deliberation: and I will look to the right or to the left, signifies reciprocal freedom: and Laban answered and Bethuel, and said, from Jehovah hath come forth the Word, we cannot speak to thee evil or good, signifies acknowledgment that it was of the Lord alone: behold Rebecca before thee, receive and depart, and let the woman be for the son of thy lord, as Jehovah hath spoken, signifies consent inspired from the Lord.

3157. "Now if ye are doing mercy and truth with my lord"—that hereby is signified exploration of their consent from each faculty, of will and understanding, appears from the signification of mercy, as denoting what appertains to good, or love, see n. 3063, 3073, 3120: and from the signification of truth, as denoting what appertains to truth or faith, see n. 3121, 3122; and whereas good which is of love appertains to the will, and truth which is of faith appertains to the understanding, and these words are spoken to Laban and Bethuel, thus to men, that they should do mercy and truth, therefore they signify what proceeds from each of their faculties, viz. the will and the understanding; that it is an exploration of consent, is manifest, as well from its being said, "If ye are doing," as from the words which follow, "and if not, tell me, and I will look to the right or to the left." In the regeneration of man, which is an image of the Lord's Glorification, see n. 3138, the case is this, that the truth of faith is indeed learnt, but it is not acknowledged, still less received by good, unless there be consent from each faculty, viz. the will and the understanding: consent is essential acknowledgment, hereby is effected reception, and indeed from the will, for good is there; and when the truth of faith is received by the will, or, what is the same thing, by good, then man is regenerated, for in this case truth is grounded in good, or faith is grounded in charity, or as to life is charity itself, see n. 3121.

3158. "Tell me, and if not tell me"—that hereby is signified the free state of their deliberation, is evident from the sense of the words. From all that precedes, it is manifest, that what in the literal sense of this chapter treats of the betrothing and marriage of Rebecca with Isaac, in the internal sense treats of the initiation and conjunction of good and of truth, for the initiation and conjunction of truth and good is spiritual betrothing and spiritual marriage; in each case is required a free state of deliberation; that this is required in betrothing and marriage, is well known, but that it is required in the initiation and conjunction of good and of truth, is not so well known, because it does not appear to the natural man, and because it is one of those things which are effected without man's reflecting upon it; still however, it has place every moment during man's reformation and regeneration, viz. that he is in a free state whilst truth is conjoining with good. Every one may know, if he only weighs the matter with himself, that nothing ever becomes man's own, as his [property], before it becomes [the property] of his will, for the things which are of the will constitute the esse of the life of man, but the things which are of the understanding constitute the exister of his life thence derived; consent from the understanding alone is not consent, but all consent is from the will; wherefore, unless the truth of faith, which is of the understanding, be received by the good of love, which is of the will, it is in no wise truth which is acknowledged, consequently it is not faith; in order, however, that it may be received by good, which is of the will, it is necessary that there be a free state; every thing which is of the will appears free, the real state of the will is liberty, for what I will, this I choose, this I desire, because this I love, and acknowledge as good; hence it may appear, that truth, which is of faith, in no wise becomes man's own, as his [property], before it is received by the will, that is, before it is initiated and conjoined to good there, and that this cannot be effected except in a free state.

3159. "And I will look to the right or to the left"—that hereby is signified reciprocal freedom, may appear without explication. The case herein is this: good from the Lord through the internal man is continually flowing into the external, and in the first age in the external man it appears under a species of affection of truth; in proportion as man has respect to celestial and spiritual good as an end, in the same proportion truth is initiated and conjoined to good; or, what is the same thing, the affection of truth to the affection of good; but in proportion as man has respect to his own self-good, thus to himself and the world, as an end, in the same proportion celestial and spiritual good recedes; this is reciprocal freedom, which is signified by looking to the right or to the left.

evil or good"—that hereby is signified acknowledgment that it was of the Lord alone, may appear from the explication of each particular word as to the internal sense, but that this is their conclusive meaning, is manifest without such explication: that by the Word coming forth from Jehovah, is signified from the Lord, is evident, inasmuch as by Jehovah so often mentioned in the Old Testament, is never meant any other than the Lord, see n. 1343, 1736, 1815, 2156, 2329, 3023, 3035. That these words involve arcana, may appear from this consideration, that Laban here answered, who was the brother, and afterwards Bethuel, who was the father, but not the father and mother, and that the virgin did not answer till afterwards; the reason is, because by Laban as brother is represented the affection of good in the natural man, see n. 3129, 3130, and by Bethuel the origin of the affection of good: the affection of good and the affection of truth in the natural man are as brother and sister; and the affection of truth called forth out of the natural man, into the rational, and there conjoined with good, is as a married woman: the arcana involved in this circumstance, that Laban and Bethuel answered, that is, the brother first, and afterwards the father, is this; good from the rational man, whilst it flows into the natural, does not flow into truth there immediately, but into good there, and through good into truth; unless this be the influx, the affection of truth cannot exist; the affection of good in the natural man is what acknowledges, and thus what first consents, for an immediate communication is given between rational good and natural good, but not an immediate one between rational good and natural truth; concerning their parallelism, see n. 1831, 1832. These two ancient formulas of speaking often occur, viz. that "from Jehovah came forth the Word," denoting that it was done by Jehovah; also, "We cannot speak to thee evil or good," denoting that they durst not deny nor affirm. Concerning acknowledgment, that it was of the Lord alone, is the subject next treated of.

was to be procured by the ordinary way, as with other men ; for it is well known, that man is not born rational, but is born only into the power of becoming rational, and that he becomes so by scientifics, viz. by knowledges of several kinds and species, the first of which are means leading to those which next follow, and thus in order even to the last, which are the knowledges of the spiritual things of the Lord's kingdom, and are called doctrinals ; that these are learnt partly from the doctrine of faith, partly immediately from the Word, and thence partly by man's own study and application, is also well known ; these doctrinals, so long as they are in the memory, are only scientific truths ; nor as yet are appropriated to man as his, but they are then first appropriated to him, when he begins to love them for the sake of life, and especially when he applies them to life ; when this is the case, then truths are elevated out of the natural memory into the rational principle, and are there conjoined with good, and when they are thus conjoined, they are no longer things of science, but of life, for then man no longer learns from truths how he should live, but he lives from them, thus truths are appropriated to him, and gain a place in his will ; hereby man enters into the heavenly marriage, for the heavenly marriage is the conjunction of good and of truth in the rational principle ; these things the Lord accomplishes with men. But the Lord in Himself accomplished all these things from Himself, and from the essential Divine [principle] not only begot the rational principle as to good, but also hereby the natural principle as to truth, which He conjoined with good ; for it is good which chooses to itself truth, and also forms truth, inasmuch as good acknowledges nothing else for truth but what agrees with it ; thus Good Divine, which appertained to the Lord, made to ^{itself} truth, nor did it acknowledge any other for truth, but what agreed with Divine Good, that is, what was Divine from Itself ; and thus the Lord accomplished all and singular things from His own proper Power : these are the things which are signified by the acknowledgment that it was of the Lord alone, and by consent inspired from the Lord.

3162. Verses 52, 53, 54. And it came to pass when the servant of Abraham heard their words, that he bowed himself to the earth to Jehovah. And the servant brought forth vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and raiment, and gave to Rebecca ; and he gave precious things to her brother and to her mother. And they did eat and drink he and the men who were with him, and passed the night, and arose in the morning, and he said, send me to my lord. It come to pass when the servant of Abraham heard their words, that he bowed himself to the earth to Jehovah, signifies perception of joy in the natural man : and the servant brought forth vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and raiment, signifies truth and good and the ornaments thereof : and gave to Rebecca, signifies which then appertained to the affection of truth: and he gave precious things to her brother, signifies things spiritual thence communicated to natural good: and to her mother, signifies to natural truth also: and they did eat and drink, signifies the appropriation of good and truth thus initiated: he and the men who were with him, signifies the things which were in the natural man: and they passed the night, signifies the peace thereof: and arose in the morning, signifies a degree of elevation: and he said, send me to my lord, signifies affection of conjunction.

3163. "It came to pass when the servant of Abraham heard their words, that he bowed himself to the earth to Jehovah"—that hereby is signified perception of joy in the natural man, appears from the signification of hearing words, as denoting to perceive; and from the representation of Abraham's servant, as denoting in general the natural man, so far as it is subservient to the rational principle, in the present case to the Divine, see n. 3019, 3020; and from the signification of bowing to Jehovah, as denoting to rejoice, see n. 2927, 2950, 3118.

3164. "And the servant brought forth vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and raiment"—that hereby is signified truth and good, and the ornaments thereof, appears from the signification of vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and raiment in the internal sense; that silver signifies truth, may be seen, n. 1551, 2048, and that gold signifies good, may be seen, n. 113, 1551, 1552; they are called vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, because they are predicated of the affection of truth, which here is Rebecca, for truth considered in itself is nothing else but a vessel, or recipient of good, see n. 1496, 1832, 1900, 2063, 2261, 2269, 3068: vessels of silver are specifically scientifics, for these are the recipients of truth: vessels of gold are specifically truths, because these are the recipients of good; but that raiment signifies ornaments may appear without explication. Such things in ancient time were given to a virgin when she was betrothed, and this by reason of representation and signification, in that a betrothed virgin had reference to the truth of the Church about to be conjoined with good. Thus the ancient Church is also described in its first age in Ezechiel. "When it was the time of loves, I clothed thee with needle-work, I girded thee with fine linen, and I covered thee with silk, and I adorned thee with ornament, and gave bracelets upon thine hands, and a chain on thy neck, and I gave a jewel on thy nose, and ear-rings upon thine ears, and a crown of ornament on thine head; thus was thou adorned with gold and silver, and thy raiment was fine linen and silk, and needle-work," xvi. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13: and when the same Church receded from truth and good, she is thus described in the same chapter, "Thou hast taken off thy raiment, and hast made to thyself variegated heights; and thou hast taken the vessels of thine adorning of my gold, and of my silver, which I had given thee, and hast made to thyself images of a male, and hast taken the raiment of needle-work, and hast covered them," verses 16, 17, 18: from which passages it is very manifest that silver, gold, and raiment, are nothing else but such things as appertain to the Church, viz. truth and good, and the things which relate to truth and good.

3165. And gave to Rebecca"—that hereby is signified which then appertained to the affection of truth, appears from the representation of Rebecca, as denoting the affection of truth, see n. 2865, 3077: by the things mentioned just above, viz. by the vessels of silver, the vessels of gold, and raiment, is described the affection of truth, as a bride, wherefore by those words is signified, that such then was the affection of truth, or what is the same thing, that such things then appertained to the affection of truth.

3166. "And gave precious things to her brother"—that hereby are signified things spiritual communicated thence to natural good, appears from the signification of precious things, as denoting things spiritual, whereof we shall speak presently; and from the signification of her brother, as denoting natural good, see n. 3160; Laban also, who is here the brother, denotes the affection of good in the natural man, see n. 3129, 3130: that precious things signify things spiritual, appears from other passages in the Word, as in speaking of Joseph, "Blessed of Jehovah be his land, of the precious thing of heaven, of the dew, and of the abyss lying beneath; and of the precious thing of the produce of the sun, and of the precious thing of the produce of months; and of the precious thing of the hills of eternity, and of the precious thing of the earth, and of the fulness thereof," Deut. xxxiii. 13, 14, 15, 16: where by the precious thing of heaven, the precious thing of the produce of the sun, the precious thing of the produce of months, the precious thing of the hills of eternity, and the precious thing of the earth, are signified various kinds of spiritual things: moreover precious things were called precious stones, pearls, balsams, spices, and the like, all which signified things spiritual. What is meant by things spiritual, has been frequently shewn above, viz. that in the Lord's kingdom there are things celestial and things spiritual, and that celestial things are of good, and spiritual things are of truth thence derived: there is nothing in the universe which has not relation to good and to truth; whatever appertains to use and to life, has relation to good, but whatever appertains to doctrine and science, especially in things regarding use and life, has relation to truth; or what is the same thing, whatever is of the will, is called good or evil, but whatever is of the understanding is called true or false; good therefore which is only of love and charity, and flows in from the Lord, is celestial, whereas truth, which is thence derived, is spiritual. The reason why precious things were given to the brother, when vessels of silver, vessels of gold, and raiment, were given to the sister, on her being made a bride, was because the brother signified good in the natural man, and because this good is illustrated, when truth is initiated in good in the rational principle, for all illustration of good and of truth in the natural man is thence derived.

3167. "And to the mother"—that hereby is signified also to natural truth, viz. spiritual things thence communicated thereto, as to natural good, appears from the signification of mother, as denoting the Church, which by virtue of truth is called mother, see n. 289, 2717. For the better understanding how this case is, that spiritual things are communicated to natural good and to natural truth, in consequence of truth being initiated in good in the rational principle, it may be expedient briefly to explain it; every man has an internal and an external [part or principle], his internal is called the internal man, and his external the external man: but what the internal man is, and what the external, is known to few; the internal man is the same as the spiritual man, and the external is the same as the natural man; the spiritual man is that which understands and is wise by virtue of those things which are of the light of heaven, but the natural man, by virtue of those things which are of the light of the world; concerning each light, see n. 3138; for in heaven there exist only things spiritual, whereas in the world there exist only things natural; man is so created, that things spiritual and things natural in him, that is, his spiritual and natural man should agree or make one, but in this case the spiritual man ought to dispose all things in the natural, and the natural ought to obey, as a servant, his lord; but by the fall the natural man began to exalt himself above the spiritual; and thus inverted essential Divine order; hence the natural man separated himself from the spiritual, and spiritual things could no longer enter into him, but as through chinks (or clefts), and give the faculty of thinking and speaking: to the intent that spiritual things may flow again into the natural man, he must be regenerated by the Lord, that is truth out of the natural man must be initiated and conjoined with good in the rational principle: when this is the case, spiritual things have access to the natural man, for then the light of heaven flows in, and illustrates those things which are in the natural man, and causes them to receive light, good things therein the heat of light, that is love and charity, but truth the rays of light, that is faith: thus spiritual things are communicated to natural good and natural truth: natural good in this case is every delight and pleasantness arising from the end of serving the spiritual principle, consequently of serving our neighbour, and still more the public weal, and still more the Lord's kingdom, and above all the Lord; and natural truth is every doctrinal and scientific which has wisdom for its end, that is, the practice of what is good.

3168. "And they did eat and drink"—that hereby is signified the appropriation of good and of truth thus initiated, appears from the signification of eating, as denoting to be communicated and to be conjoined, thus to be appropriated, see n. 2187, 2343, and as this is predicated of bread, and by bread is signified good, n. 276, 680, 2165, 2177, 2187, it is the appropriation of good which is signified by eating; and from the signification of drinking, as denoting also to be communicated and to be conjoined, thus to be appropriated, see n. 3089; but whereas it is predicated of wine, and by wine is signified truth, n. 1071, 1798, it is the appropriation of truth which is signified by drinking. The real case is, as was said above, n. 3167, that when truth is initiated in good, and especially when it is conjoined thereto, in the rational principle, then the good and truth of the spiritual man, that is, spiritual things, are appropriated to the natural man.

3170. "And they passed the night"—that hereby is signified the peace thereof, appears from the signification of passing the night, as denoting to rest, and in the internal sense to have peace. The case herein is this: when spiritual things are appropriated to the natural man, then those things recede which appertain to the lust of evil and the persuasion of what is false, consequently those things which induce restlessness; and those things have access which appertain to the affection of good and of truth, consequently those things which cause peace; for all restlessness arises from what is evil and false, and all peace from what is good and true. What peace is, and what is the nature and quality of its state, may be seen, n. 92, 93, 1726, 2780.

3172. "And he said, send me to my lord"—that hereby is signified affection of conjunction, appears from the common sense which results from the internal sense of the words; for his desiring to be sent to his lord was grounded in affection, that the affection of truth, which is Rebecca, might be conjoined; for the betrothing, that is initiation, was already accomplished; affection of conjunction is what is here signified.

3173. Verses 55, 56, 57, 58. And her brother said and her mother, let the damsel remain with us a day, or ten, afterwards thou shalt go. And he said to them, do not delay me, and Jehovah hath prospered my way, send me, and I will go to my lord. And they said, let us call the damsel, and ask her mouth. And they called Rebecca, and said unto her, wilt thou go with this man? And she said I will go. Her brother said and her mother, signifies doubting of the natural man: let the damsel remain with us, signifies a detaining by them: a day or ten, afterwards thou shalt go, signifies a state of departure appearing to them full: and he said to them, do not delay me, signifies the will of the affection of good: and Jehovah hath prospered my way, signifies that all things were now provided: send me, and I will go to my lord, signifies as to the state of initiation: and they said, let us call the damsel and ask her mouth, signifies consent alone of the affection of truth: and they called Rebecca, and said unto her, wilt thou go with this man? and she said I will go, signifies her full consent.

of conscience; that this is the case, is very evident, for man even though he be instructed, still commits such crimes without conscience, yea, defends them, and by many arguments confirms himself in the lawfulness of so doing; what then would he not do supposing him uninstructed? The case is the same in spiritual things, for of those who are born within the Church, who have the Word and are constantly instructed, there are still very many, who ascribe little and scarce any thing to God, but all and everything to nature, consequently who do not in heart believe that there is any God, thus neither that they shall live after death, of course who have no desire to be acquainted with the things relating to eternal life; from these considerations it is manifest, that man is not born into any truth, but that he has all to learn, and this by an external way, viz. of hearing and of seeing, whereby truth ought to be insinuated, and to be implanted in his memory; but truth, so long as it is only in the memory, is merely science; in order, however, that it may have its full effect on man, it must be called forth thence, and be conveyed more towards the interiors, for man's human principle is interior, viz. in his rational principle, inasmuch as unless man be rational, he is not man, therefore according to the quality and quantity of rationality which any one possesses, such is the quality and quantity of his manhood: man can in nowise be rational unless he be principled in good; the good whereby man is distinguished from other animals, consists in loving God, and in loving his neighbour, all human good being derived hence: into this good truth must be initiated, and conjoined therewith, and this in the rational principle: truth is initiated in good and conjoined therewith, when man loves God and his neighbour, for in this case, truth enters to good, inasmuch as good and truth mutually acknowledge each other, all truth being derived from good, and having respect to good as its end, and as its soul, and thus as the source of its life. But truth cannot be separated from the natural man, and thence elevated into the rational principle, without difficulty, for in the natural man there are fallacies, and the lusts of evil, and also persuasions of what is false, and so long as these things are therein, and adjoin themselves to truth, so long the natural man detains truth with himself, not suffering it to be elevated thence into the rational principle, and this is what is signified in the internal sense by these words, "Let the damsel remain with us a day or ten, afterwards thou shalt go;" the reason is, because he places truth in doubt, and reasons concerning it whether it be so; but as soon as the lusts of evil, and the persuasions of what is false, and the fallacies thence arising, are separated by the Lord, and man begins from a principle of good to be averse to reasonings against truths, and to reject doubtings as absurd, then truth is in a state to depart from the natural principle, and to be elevated into the rational, and to put on a state of good, for in this case it becomes the truth of good, and has life. For the better conceiving of this, let us take the following examples; it is a spiritual truth that all good is from the Lord, and all evil from hell; this truth must be confirmed and illustrated by many considerations, before it can be elevated out of the natural man into the rational principle, nor can it in anywise be thither elevated, before man is principled in the love of God, for before this, it is not acknowledged, consequently it is not believed; the case is similar in regard to other truths, as for instance in regard to this, that the Divine Providence is in things the most particular and singular, and unless it be so, that it cannot be in universals; and further, in regard to this truth, that man then first begins to live, when that perishes, which in the world he believes to be the all of life, and that the life, which in this case he receives, is ineffable and indefinite respectively, and that he is altogether ignorant of this so long as he is in evil: these and similar truths cannot in anywise be believed, unless a man be principled in good; it is good which comprehends, for the Lord by good flows in with wisdom.

3177. "Jehovah hath prospered my way"—that hereby is signified that all things were now provided, may appear without explication; for by Jehovah prospering the way is denoted that He provides, in the present case as to truth which was to be conjoined to good, for by way is signified truth, see n. 627, 2333.

3178. "Send me, and I will go to my lord"—that hereby is signified as to a state of initiation, appears from that sense which results from the internal sense of the words; the same words also imply affection of conjunction, for such affection appertains to the state of initiation.

3179. "And they said, let us call the damsel, and let us ask her mouth"—that hereby is signified consent alone of the affection of truth, appears from the signification of damsel, as denoting affection wherein is innocence, see n. 3067, 3110, in the present case the affection of truth, because it is Rebecca, who,

before she consents, is called damsel, but when she consents, as presently follows, is called Rebecca; that Rebecca is the affection of truth, may be seen, n. 3077; and from the signification of asking her mouth, as denoting to perceive whether she consents; thus it is consent alone of the affection of truth, which is here signified. The case herein is this; essential truth, which is to be initiated in good, acknowledges its own good, because good acknowledges its own truth, hence comes consent, but that it is a consent inspired into truth from good, may be seen above, n. 3161: with man it in nowise appears, that there is any consent on the part of truth, when it is initiated and conjoined to good, that is, when man is regenerating, nor on the part of good as knowing its own truth, and initiating and conjoining such truth to itself, when yet all these things are effected altogether according to the process above described; for the things which exist, during man's regeneration, are altogether unknown to him; if he was acquainted only with one ten thousandth part of them, he would be astonished; there are innumerable, yea, indefinite arcana, by which man at such times is led of the Lord, and only some of them shine forth from the internal sense of the Word: the ancient Church formed to itself an idea of such things from marriages, viz. from the state of a virgin before betrothing, from her state after betrothing, from her state when she was to be given in marriage, and from her state afterwards when she was married, and lastly, from her state when she was obedient to her husband; the fruits of truth derived from good, or of faith derived from charity, they called children, and so forth: such was the wisdom of the ancient Church; their books were also written accordingly, and this manner of writing descended from them to the Gentiles; for they were willing by things of the world to express those which are in heaven, yea, from things natural to see things spiritual; but that wisdom at this day is altogether lost.

3180. "And they called Rebecca, and said unto her, wilt thou go with this man, and she said, I will go"—that hereby is signified full consent, may appear from the sense resulting from the internal sense of the words; for when she replied to the question, "I will go," it denotes, that she fully consented. The full consent of truth is, when truth perceives in itself an image of good, and in good the very effigy of itself from which it is.

3181. Verses 59, 60, 61. And they sent Rebecca their sister, and her nurse, and the servant of Abraham, and his men. And they blessed Rebecca, and said unto her, thou our sister be for thousands of myriads, and let thy seed inherit the gate of them that hate thee. And Rebecca arose, and her damsels, and they rode upon camels, and went after the man, and the servant received Rebecca, and went. They sent Rebecca their sister, signifies separation from the affection of Truth Divine : and her nurse, signifies from the innocence appertaining thereto : and the servant of Abraham and his men, signifies from Divine things in the natural man : and they blessed Rebecca, and said unto her, signifies devout wishes from Divine illustration : thou our sister be for thousands of myriads, signifies fructification of the affection of truth to an infinite degree : and let thy seed inherit the gate of them that hate thee, signifies the spiritual kingdom of the Lord derived from the marriage of good and truth in the Divine Human [principle], to which kingdom appertain charity and faith, where before were evil and false principles : and Rebecca arose, signifies the elevation of the affection of truth and separation thence : and her damsels, signifies subservient affections : and rode upon camels, signifies the intellectual principle elevated above natural scientifics : and went after the man, signifies by virtue of the auspices (or direction) of Divine Truth natural : and the servant received Rebecca, and went, signifies that Divine Good natural initiated (or led to initiation).

3182. "They sent Rebecca their sister"—that hereby is signified separation from the affection of Truth Divine, appears from the signification of sending, as denoting to be separated ; and from the representation of Rebecca the sister, as denoting the affection of Truth Divine, see n. 3077, 3179 ; that sister is truth, may be seen, n. 1495, 2508, 2524, 2556, 3160. How this case is, may appear from what has been said and shewn above in this chapter ; but to make the matter plainer, a few further observations may be expedient : when truth, which is to be initiated and conjoined to good, is elevated out of the natural principle, it is then separated from the things which are therein ; this separation is what is here signified by their sending Rebecca their sister ; truth is then separated, when man no longer from truth has respect to good, but from good has respect to truth, or, what is the same thing, when he no longer from doctrine respects life, but from life doctrine ; as for example ; doctrine teaches this truth, that no one is to be held in hatred, for whosoever hates another, kills him every moment ; man in his first age scarce admits this, but as he advances in age, when he is in the process of reformation, he accounts it one of those doctrinals, according to which he ought to regulate his life ; at length he lives according to it, in which case he no longer thinks from the doctrinal precept, but acts from a principle of life ; when this is the case, this truth of doctrine is elevated out of the natural principle, yea, separated from the natural principle, and is implanted in good in the rational principle ; and when this is effected, he no longer suffers that the natural man, by any sophistry in itself, should call it in doubt, yea, he does not suffer that the natural man should reason against it.

innocence appertaining thereto, viz. that they also sent this, that is, separated from themselves, appears from the signification of nurse, or one that gives suck, as denoting innocence; frequent mention is made in the Word of those that suck, and of those that give suck, and by the former is signified the first state of infants, which state, it is evident, is a state of innocence; for man, as soon as he is born, is introduced into a state of innocence, that it may be a plane of other succeeding states, and the inmost therein, which state is signified in the Word by one that sucks; next he is introduced into a state of affection of celestial good, that is, of love towards his parents, which at this time is instead of love to the Lord, and this state is signified by an infant; afterwards he is introduced into a state of spiritual good, or of mutual love, that is, of charity towards his like in age, and disposition, which state is signified by boys; as he advances further in age, he is introduced to a state of the affection of truth, this is signified by young men, whereas the subsequent states are signified by men, and at length by old men; this last state, which is signified by old men, is the state of wisdom, in which is the innocence of infancy, thus the first state and the last are united, and man when old, as again an infant but wise, is introduced into the Lord's kingdom; hence it may appear, that innocence is the first state, which is that of sucking; hence also she that gives suck signifies innocence, for of the giver and receiver, as of the agent and the patient, a similar state is perceived; it is here said, that they sent also the nurse, or her who gave suck, to the intent that the affection of truth might be described, viz. that it was from innocence, for the affection of truth is not the affection of truth, unless innocence be in it, see n. 2526, 2780, 3111; for by innocence the Lord flows into that affection, and indeed with wisdom, inasmuch as true innocence is essential wisdom, see n. 2305, 2306; and they who are in innocence, appear in the eyes of angels as infants, see n. 154, 2306. That one who sucks (or a suckling) in the Word signifies innocence, may also appear from other passages, as in David, "Out of the mouth of infants and of sucklings hast thou founded strength," Psalm viii. 2; Matt. xxi. 16; where infants denote celestial love, and sucklings innocence. So in Jeremiah, "Wherefore do ye great evil against your souls, to cut off from you man and woman, infant and suckling, from the midst of Judah, that I do not leave for you any remains," xlv. 7; where infant and suckling in like manner denote celestial love and the innocence thereof, and when these become none, then there are no longer any remains, that is, any good and truth remaining stored up in the internal man from the Lord; that these are remains, may be seen, n. 1906, 2284; for all goods and truths perish with innocence, inasmuch as innocence is immediately from the Divine [principle] Itself, consequently it is the very essential principle therein ; again, “The infant and the suckling fainteth in the streets of the city,” Lam. ii. 11 ; where the signification is the same ; again, in the same prophet, “The sea-monsters afford the pap, they give suck to their young ; the daughter of my people is cruel, the tongue of the suckling hath stuck to the roof of his mouth in thirst ; the infants have sought bread, there is none that holdeth it forth to them,” Lam. iv. 3, 4 ; where the suckling also denotes innocence, and infants denote the affections of good ; so in Moses, “Abroad the sword shall bereave, and from the closets terror, even the young man, even the virgin, even the suckling with the old man,” Deut. xxxii. 25 ; where by the sword bereaving the young man, the virgin, the suckling with the old man, is signified that the false principle would destroy the affection of truth, and the affection of good, and also innocence with wisdom ; so in Isaiah, “They shall bring thy sons in the bosom, and thy daughters shall be carried upon the shoulder, and kings shall be thy nourishers, and their queens shall give thee suck,” xlix. 22, 23 ; where kings thy nourishers denote intelligence, and queens that gave suck denote wisdom, which, it was shewn above, is the wisdom of innocence

3185. “And they blessed Rebecca, and said unto her”—that hereby are signified devout wishes from Divine illustration, appears from the signification of blessing, in bidding farewell to one that is departing, as denoting a devout wish of success and happiness : that in the present case this wish was from Divine illustration, is evident from what presently follows ; and also from this consideration, that illustration flows into the natural man by the affection of truth, which is Rebecca, when it is initiated in good, which is Isaac.

3186. “Thou our sister be for thousands of myriads”—that hereby is signified the fructification of the affection of truth to an infinite degree, appears from the signification of sister, who is Rebecca, as denoting the affection of truth, see n. 3077, 3179, 3182 ; and from the signification of being for thousands of myriads, as denoting fructification to an infinite degree ; thousands of myriads here denote infinite, because the subject treated of is concerning the Lord, in Whom all and singular things are infinite. With man the case is this ; goodnesses are not fructified, nor are truths multiplied with him, before that conjunction of truth and of good is effected in his rational principle, that is before he is regenerated, for then the fruits or offspring exist from legitimate or celestial marriage, which is that of good and of truth; before this time indeed, the good things which he does appear to be good, and truths appear to be truths, but they are not genuine, for the very soul, which is good wherein is innocence from the Lord, is not in them, consequently they do not affect the man, nor make him happy; the affection of love and of charity, with the happiness thereof, which is the soul, is given of the Lord, when man is regenerated. That by thousand is signified much, and also infinite, may be seen n. 2575, still more by myriads, and still more by thousands of myriads, as also in other passages: thus in Moses, when the ark rested, he said return Jehovah, the myriads of thousands of Israel," Numb. x. 36; where by myriads of thousands is also signified infinite, because predicated of the Lord, Who is here Jehovah: again, "Jehovah arose from Seir unto them, he shone forth from mount Paran, and came out from the myriads of holiness," Deut. xxxiii. 2; where myriads also denote infinite: so in David, "The chariots of God are myriads of thousands of peaceable ones," Psalm lxxviii. 17; where the chariots of God denote those things which are of the Word and of doctrine thence derived; myriads of thousands denote the infinite things which are therein: so in John, "I saw and heard the voice of many angels about the throne, their number was myriads of myriads, and chiliads of chiliads," Rev. v. 11; denoting that they were innumerable.

3187. "And let thy seed inherit the gate of them that hate thee"—that hereby is signified the Lord's spiritual kingdom derived from the marriage of good and of truth in the Divine Human [principle], to which kingdom appertain charity and faith, where before were evil and false principles, may appear from what was said and explained above, n. 2851, where nearly the same words occur: that seed denotes those who are called spiritual, thus in an universal sense all who constitute the Lord's spiritual kingdom, or what is the same thing, that very kingdom itself, appears from the signification of seed, as denoting charity and faith, see n. 1025, 1447, 1610, 1940; consequently denoting those who are principled in charity and faith, for that these are the spiritual, may be seen, n. 2088, 2184, 2507, 2708, 2715, 2954; that these have charity and faith from the marriage of good and truth in the Lord's Divine Human [principle], and that thus they have salvation thence, may be seen n. 2661, 2716, 2833, 2834. In the ancient Church this was a customary devout wish to a virgin betrothed, when she was going to be married, be thou for thousands of myriads, and may thy seed inherit the gate of thine enemies, or of them that hate thee; but the wise ones of that Church by these words understood things spiritual, viz. that when they entered into the marriage of good and of truth, that is, when they were regenerated, then goodnesses and truths would be fructified to thousands of myriads, that is to an immense degree; and that charity and faith would succeed in the place which was before possessed by evil and the false principle: but when the wisdom of the ancient Church expired, then they no longer apprehended these words according to a spiritual sense, but according to a worldly sense, viz. that their posterity might be innumerable, and that it might seize upon and inherit the land of the Gentiles; the descendants of Jacob, above all others, conceived the words according to this sense, and confirmed themselves therein by this consideration, that they not only increased immensely, but also inherited the land, which was to them the gate of their enemies; not knowing that all these things were representative, viz. representative of the Lord's celestial and spiritual kingdom, and that on the expulsion thence of evils and falses, there succeeded in their place goodness and truth, as will clearly appear, when, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, those representatives shall be opened: in a particular sense, viz. with every particular man who becomes a kingdom of the Lord, the case also is this: before the marriage of good and truth is effected, that is, before he is regenerated, he is inwardly nothing but what is evil and false, infernal and diabolical spirits likewise have possession of that which is called the gate, see n. 2851; but when he becomes a kingdom of the Lord, that is, when he is regenerated, then evils and falses, or what is the same thing, infernal and diabolical spirits, are thence expelled, and goodness and truth enter and inherit their place; then also there is in the mind a conscience of what is good and true: and as the case is in a particular sense, so it is also in a general sense. Hence then it is evident what is meant by the above words in the internal sense.

3189. "And her damsels"—that hereby are signified subservient affections, appears from the signification of damsel, when Rebecca was so called, as denoting affection in which is innocence, see n. 3067, 3110; but when they are so called who followed Rebecca to serve her, they signify subservient affections.

Every particular affection appears as somewhat simple, or one, but that it contains things innumerable, may be seen, n. 3078; all things which are therein are affections, consociated in an incomprehensible form; they are also mutually subordinate to each other, for there are some which minister, and some which serve; the societies of heaven are in such a form, yea, the whole heaven, being in orderly arrangement from the Lord, according to the Divine Form which is in Himself; the form of the Lord's spiritual kingdom exists according to the orderly arrangement of affections in His Divine Human [principle], which orderly arrangement is treated of in the internal sense in this chapter and the following; but there are very few things herein which can be explained to the apprehension, they being adapted to the perception of the angels.

3190. "And they rode upon camels"—that hereby is signified the intellectual principle elevated above natural scientifics, appears from the signification of riding, as denoting to be elevated as to the intellectual principle, see n. 2761, 2762; and from the signification of camels, as denoting common scientifics, in the natural man, see n. 3048, 3071, thus natural scientifics. The case herein is this; when truth is elevated out of the natural principle into the rational, it is then taken out of the sphere of worldly light into the sphere of heavenly light, thus as it were from the obscurity of night into the brightness of day; for the things which are of the light of the world, in which are all natural things, are respectively as in the night, whereas the things which are of the light of heaven, in which are spiritual things, are respectively as in the day; wherefore when truth is elevated out of the natural principle towards the rational, man is elevated at the same time into intelligence and into wisdom; all intelligence and wisdom also appertaining to man is from this source: this is what is signified by the intellectual principle being elevated above natural scientifics.

3191. "And went after the man"—that hereby is signified by virtue of the auspices (or direction) of Divine Truth natural, appears from the signification of going after or following, as denoting here in the internal sense, by virtue of guidance or auspices: and from the signification of the man, as denoting truth, see n. 3134, in the present case Divine Truth natural, as above, n. 3184.

3192. "And the servant received Rebecca, and went"—that hereby is signified that Divine Good natural initiated (or led to initiation), appears from the signification of servant as denoting Divine Good natural, as above, n. 3184; and from the signification of receiving Rebecca, and going, as denoting to initiate, viz. to introduce to Isaac, that is, to Divine Good in the rational principle, as may appear without further explanation. The case herein is this; truth out of the natural principle could not be elevated to good in the rational principle, except by Divine Truth and Divine Good, each natural; Divine Truth natural, which is called the man, must shew the way and lead; Divine Good natural, which is called servant, must introduce and initiate; these are, to use the comparison, like two wings which elevate: but these things cannot be as yet explained more fully to the apprehension, before it be known what is meant by Divine Truth natural, and what by Divine Good natural, which subjects are treated of in the internal sense in the following chapters concerning Joseph.

3193. Verses 62, 63. And Isaac came from coming to Beer-lahai-roi, and he dwelt in the land of the south. And Isaac went forth to meditate in the field towards evening, and he lifted up his eyes, and saw, and behold the camels coming. Isaac came from coming to Beer-lahai-roi, signifies Divine Good rational born from the essential Divine Truth: and he dwelt in the land of the south, signifies hence in the Divine Light: and Isaac went forth to meditate in the field, signifies a state of the rational principle in good: towards evening, signifies in respect to those things which are beneath: and he lifted up his eyes and saw, signifies intention: and behold the camels coming, signifies to common scientifics in the natural man.

3194. "Isaac came from coming to Beer-lahai-roi"—that hereby is signified Divine Good rational born from essential Divine Truth, appears from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Lord's Divine rational principle, see n. 2083, 2630, in the present case as to Divine Good therein, because Truth Divine was not as yet called forth out of the natural principle, which Truth Divine is represented by Rebecca, nor as yet conjoined to good; conjunction is treated of in the verses which follow; and from the signification of coming from coming to Beer-lahai-roi, as denoting to be born from Divine Truth; Beer-lahai-roi in the original tongue signifies the fountain of him that liveth and seeth me, as above, Gen. xvi. 13, where it was written, "Hagar called the name of Jehovah speaking to her, Thou God, seeing me, because she said, have I also seen behind him that seeth me? therefore she called the fountain Beer-lahai-roi (the fountain of him that liveth and seeth me);" what is signified by these words, may be seen, n. 1952 to 1958, where also it is evident that the fountain is Divine Truth; and that he that liveth and seeth me is Divine Good rational, which is there called the Lord's interior man derived from Divine Truth. The case in regard to this very deep arcanum is this; to the very essential Divine [principle] there appertains good and truth; the Lord, as to the Divine Human [principle], came forth from the Divine Good, and was born of the Divine Truth; or what is the same thing, the very Esse of the Lord was Divine Good, and the very existere was Divine Truth, hence was the Lord's Divine Rational, to which he conjoined Divine Truth from the Human [principle].

3195. "And he dwelt in the land of the south"—that hereby is signified hence in the Divine Light, appears from the signification of dwelling, as denoting to live, see n. 1293, and as predicated of good, see n. 2268, 2451, 2712; and from the signification of the land of the south, as denoting Divine Light; for the south signifies light, and indeed the light of intelligence, which is wisdom, see n. 1458; but the land of the south denotes the place and state where that light is; so in the present case, by Isaac coming from coming to Beer-lahai-roi, and dwelling in the land of the south, is signified that Divine Good rational, as being born from Divine Truth, was in Divine Light. Frequent mention is made of light in the Word, and by it in the internal sense is signified truth which is from good; but in the internal supreme sense is signified the Lord Himself, because He is the essential good and truth: there is also actually light in heaven, and infinitely brighter than light on earth, see n. 1053, 1117, 1521 to 1533, 1619 to 1632; in that light spirits and angels mutually see each other, and by it is discovered all the glory which is in heaven; that light as to it's lucidity, appears indeed like light in the world, but still it is not like, for it is not natural, but spiritual, having in it wisdom, so that it is nothing else but wisdom which thus shines before the eyes of the angels, and therefore the wiser the angels are, the brighter is the light in which they dwell, see n. 2776; this light also illuminates the understanding of man, especially of a regenerate man, but it is not perceived by him so long as he lives in the body, by reason of the light of the world, which then prevails; evil spirits in another life also mutually see each other, and also see several representative things which exist in the world of spirits, and this indeed by light from heaven, but it is a luminous principle such as proceeds from a charcoal fire, for the light of heaven is changed into such a principle when it approaches towards them: as to what concerns the origin of light, it was from eternity from the Lord alone, for Divine Good Itself, and Divine Truth, whence light comes, is the Lord: the Divine Human [principle], which was from eternity, see John xvii. 5, was that essential light; and whereas that light could no longer affect the human race, who had removed themselves so far from good and truth, and thus from light, and had cast themselves into darkness, therefore the Lord was willing to put on the essential Human [principle] by nativity; for thus He was enabled to illuminate not only man's rational principle, but also his natural; for He made both the rational principle, and the natural in Himself Divine, that they also might have light, who were in such gross darkness: that the Lord is light, that is, essential good and truth, and that thus all intelligence and wisdom is from Him, consequently all salvation, may appear from several passages in the Word, as in John, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and God was the Word, in Him was life, and the life was the light of men; John came to bear witness of the light, he was not that light, but was to bear witness of the light. That was the true light, which enlighteneth every man that cometh into the world," i. 1, 4, 7, 8, 9: the Word was Divine Truth, thus the Lord Himself as to the Divine Human [principle], of which it is said, that the Word was with God and God was the Word: again, in the same evangelist, "This is the judgment, that light is come into the world, but men loved darkness rather than light," iii. 19; where light denotes Divine Truth; again, "Jesus said, I am the light of the world, he that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life," viii. 12: again, "Yet a little while the light is with you, walk whilst ye have the light, lest darkness overtake you; whilst ye have the light, believe in the light, that ye may be the sons of the light," xii. 35, 36, again, "He that seeth Me, seeth Him that sent me; I am come a light into the world, that every one who believeth in Me, may not abide in darkness," xii. 45, 46: so in Luke, "Mine eyes have seen Thy salvation, which Thou hast prepared before the face of all people, a light for the revelation of the Gentiles, and the glory of Thy people Israel," ii. 30, 31, 32; this was the prophetic declaration of Simeon concerning the Lord when He was born: so in Matthew, "The people sitting in darkness have seen great light, and to them that sit in the region and shadow of death, is light arisen," iv. 16; Isaiah ix. 2: from which passage it is very evident, that the Lord, as to the Divine Good and Truth in the Divine Human [principle], is called light; He is also so called in the prophetic writings of the Old Testament, as in Isaiah, "The light of Israel shall be for a fire, and His Holy one for a flame," x. 17; again, in the same prophet, "I Jehovah have called thee in righteousness, and will give thee for a covenant of the people, and for a light of the Gentiles," xlii. 6; again, "I have given thee for a light of the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation even to the utmost part of the earth," xlix. 6: again, "Arise, shine, because thy light is come, and the glory of Jehovah is arisen upon thee; the Gentiles shall walk to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising," lx. 1, 3. That all the light of heaven, consequently wisdom and intelligence, is from the Lord, is thus taught in the Apocalypse, "The holy city new Jerusalem, descending from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband, hath no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it, the glory of God will enlighten it, and the Lamb is the lamp thereof," xxi. 2, 23: again, speaking of the same city, "There shall be no night there, neither have they need of a candle and the light of the sun, because the Lord God enlightens them," xxii. 5; so again in Isaiah, "The sun shall be no more for a light by day, neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee, but Jehovah shall be to thee for the light of eternity, and thy God for thy glory; thy sun shall no more set, neither shall thy moon be withdrawn, because Jehovah shall be to thee for thy light of eternity," lx. 19, 20; the sun shall be no more for light by day, neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee, denotes that light should come, not from the things which appertain to natural light, but from the things which appertain to spiritual light, which are signified by Jehovah being for the light of eternity; that Jehovah mentioned here, and in other places in the Old Testament, is the Lord, may be seen, n. 1343, 1736, 2156, 2329, 2921, 3023, 3035: and that He is the light of heaven, He also manifested to the three disciples, Peter, James, and John, at His transfiguration, in that "His countenance shone as the sun, and His raiment became as light," Matt. xvii. 2: His countenance as the sun was the Divine Good, His raiment as the light was the Divine Truth: hence it may be known what is meant by this expression in the benediction, "May Jehovah make his faces shine upon thee and be merciful unto thee," Numb. vi. 25; that the faces of Jehovah are mercy, peace, and good, may be seen, n. 222, 223: and that the sun is the Divine Love, thus that Divine Love is of the Lord, Who appears as a Sun in the heaven of angels, n. 30 to 38, 1053, 1521, 1529, 1530, 1531, 2441, 2495.

3197. "Towards evening"—that hereby is signified in respect to those things which are beneath, appears from the signification of evening, as denoting what is obscure, see n. 3056, and whereas those things with man which are beneath, viz. those things which appertain to the natural mind, are obscure in respect to those things which are above, viz. those things which appertain to the rational mind, therefore by evening are signified those things which are respectively in an obscure principle, as may appear from the series of things treated of in the internal sense; for the subject treated of is concerning truth out of the natural principle, which was to be conjoined with good in the rational principle; and whereas conjunction is here treated of, and the illustration of the natural man thereby, therefore by meditating in the field towards evening is signified a state of rational principle in good in respect to those things which are beneath; the state in good is described by dwelling in the land of the south, that is, in Divine Light in respect to which the things which are beneath were in the evening, viz. before the conjunction of truth and of good was effected, and before the natural principle was also made Divine.

3198. "And he lifted up his eyes and saw"—that hereby is signified intention, appears from the signification of lifting up the eyes, as denoting to think, see n. 2789, 2829, in the present case denoting intention, because it is said, he lifted up his eyes and saw, and it is predicated of rational good, to which truth out of the natural principle was not yet conjoined.

3200. In these two verses is described the state of rational good, when it is in expectation of truth, which is to be conjoined to it as a bride to a husband: in the two verses which immediately follow, is described the state of truth when it is near, and perceives the good to which it is to be conjoined: but it is to be observed, that these states did not exist once only, but continually during the Lord's whole life in the world, until He was Glorified; the case is the same with the regenerate, for they are not regenerated at once, but continually during their whole life, and even in another life; for man can never be perfected.

3201. Verses 64, 65. And Rebecca lifted up her eyes, and saw Isaac, and she fell from off the camel. And said to the servant, who is that man there walking in the field to meet us? And the servant said, he is my lord; and she took a veil and covered herself. Rebecca lifted up her eyes and saw Isaac, signifies the reciprocal intention of the affection of truth: and she fell from off the camel, signifies the separation thereof from scientifics in the natural man, on the perception of rational good: and she said to the servant, signifies exploration from the Divine Natural principle: who is that man there walking in the field to meet us, signifies concerning the rational principle which was in good alone, and the servant said, he is my lord, signifies acknowledgment: and she took a veil and covered herself, signifies the appearances of truth.

3202. "Rebecca lifted up her eyes and saw Isaac"—that hereby is signified the reciprocal intention of the affection of truth, appears from the signification of lifting up the eyes and seeing, as denoting intention, see n. 3198, in the present case reciprocal, because it was before said of Isaac, that he lifted up his eyes and saw, and here it is said of Rebecca, that she lifted up her eyes and saw Isaac; and from the representation of Rebecca, as denoting the affection of truth, concerning which see above in many places.

3203 "And she fell from off the camel"—that hereby is signified the separation thereof from scientifics in the natural man, on the perception of rational good, appears from the signification of falling, as denoting to be separated; and from the signification of camels, as denoting scientifics in the natural man, see n. 3048, 3071; that it was on the perception of rational good which is represented by Isaac, is evident. What is meant by being separated from the natural man, was said and shewn above, n. 3161, 3175, 3182, 3188, 3190, viz. that the affection of truth is then separated thence, when it has no longer respect to science, but to life; for when it has respect to life, it becomes habitual to man, and influences him like his temper or nature; and when it so influences him, then it flows forth into act as it were spontaneously, and this without thinking from any scientific ground concerning it; yea, when it has respect to life, then it can rule over scientifics, and thence press into it's service innumerable things as confirming proofs; thus it is with all truth, that in it's first age it is a mere matter of science, but as it advances in age it gains a place in the life; the case herein is like that of little children, in learning to walk, to speak, to think, also to see from the understanding, and to form conclusions from the judgment; these things are at first learnt scientifically, but when by habit they become voluntary, and thus spontaneous, they then vanish out of the scientific principle, and flow forth of their own accord; the case also is the same with those things which appertain to the knowledges of spiritual good and truth, with men who are regenerated or born again of the Lord; in the beginning such men are like little children, and spiritual truths are to them at first mere scientifics, for doctrinals, whilst they are in learning and inserting in the memory, are nothing else; but these are successively called forth thence by the Lord, and implanted in the life, that is, in good, for good is life: when this is effected, there is a kind of change takes place, viz. man begins to act from good, that is, from life, and no longer as before from science; thus he who is born anew is in this respect like a little child, (but the things which he imbibes have relation to spiritual life) until he no longer acts from doctrinals or truths, but from charity or good; when this is the case, he is then first in a state of bliss and in wisdom:

From these considerations it may appear what it is to be separated from scientifics in the natural man, which is signified by Rebecca falling from off the camel, and this before she knew that it was Isaac, in which circumstances, every one may see, some arcana are involved.

3204. "And she said to the servant"—that hereby is signified exploration from the Divine Natural principle, appears from the signification of saying in this place, as denoting to explore, for she asked, who is that man walking in the field to meet us? and from the signification of servant, as denoting the Divine Natural principle, see above, n. 3191, 3192.

3207. "And she took a veil and covered herself"—that hereby are signified appearances of truth, appears from the signification of a veil, with which brides covered the face when they first saw the bridegroom, as denoting appearances of truth; for brides with the ancients represented the affections of truth, and bridegrooms the affections of good, or, what is the same thing, the Church, which was called a bride from the affection of truth, the affection of good which is from the Lord being the bridegroom, hence the Lord Himself is called the Bridegroom throughout the Word: the brides veiled the face on their first access to the bridegroom, that they might represent the appearances of truth; the appearances of truth are not truths in themselves, but appear as truths, concerning which we shall speak presently; the affection of truth cannot accede to the affection of good except by appearances of truth, nor is it stripped of appearances before it is conjoined, for then it becomes the truth of good, and is genuine so far as the good is genuine; good itself is holy, because it is the Divine [principle] proceeding from the Lord, and flows-in by a superior way or gate in man; but truth, so far as respects its origin, is not holy, because it flows-in by an inferior way or gate, and at first has place in the natural man, but when it is elevated thence towards the rational man, it is by degrees purified, and at the first sight of the affection of good, is separated from scientifics, and puts on appearances of truth, and thus accedes to good, a proof this of the nature of it's origin, and that it could not endure the first sight of Good Divine, before it has entered into the bridegroom's chamber, that is, into the sanctuary of good, and conjunction was effected; for then truth no longer looks at good from appearances, or by appearances, but is looked at from good without them. It is however to be observed, that neither with man, nor angels, are any truths pure, that is, without appearances, all and singular of them being appearances of truth; nevertheless they are accepted of the Lord as truths, if good be in them; to the Lord alone appertain pure truths, because Divine, for as the Lord is essential Good, so also He is essential Truth; but see what was said above concerning truths and their appearances, viz. that the coverings and veils of the tent signified appearances of truth, n. 2576. That truths with man are appearances tainted with fallacies, n. 2053. That the rational things of man are appearances of truth, n. 2516. That truths are in appearances, n. 2196, 2203, 2209, 2242. That Good Divine flows into appearances, even into fallacies, n. 2554. That appearances of truth are adapted by the Lord as if they were truths, n. 1832. That the Word is written according to appearances, n. 1838. But what appearances are, may appear manifestly from those passages in the Word, where it is spoken according to appearances; there are however degrees of the appearances of truth; natural appearances of truth are in many cases fallacies, but when they have place with those who are principled in good, they are then not to be called fallacies, but appearances, and even truths in some respect, for the good which is in them, and in which is the Divine [principle], causes their essence to be different; but rational appearances of truth are more and more interior; in these appearances are the heavens, that is, the angels who are in the heavens, see n. 2576: that some idea may be had of the appearances of truth, and what they are, let the following cases serve for illustration. I. Man believes that he is reformed and regenerated by the truth of faith, but this is an appearance, he is reformed and regenerated by the good of faith, that is by charity towards his neighbour, and love to the Lord. II. Man believes that truth gives to perceive what good is, because it teaches, but this is an appearance, it is good which gives to truth to perceive, for good is the soul, or life of truth. III. Man believes that truth introduces to good, when he lives according to the truth which he has learnt, but it is good which flows into truth, and introduces it to itself. IV. It appears to man that truth perfects good, when yet good perfects truth. V. Goods of life appear to man as the fruits of faith, but they are the fruits of charity. From these few cases it may in some

3208. Verses 66, 67. And the servant told to Isaac all the words which he had done. And Isaac introduced her into the tent of Sarah his mother ; and took Rebecca, and she was to him for a woman, and he loved her ; and Isaac was comforted after his mother. The servant told to Isaac all the words which he had done, signifies perception from the Divine Natural principle, how the case was ; and Isaac introduced her into the tent of Sarah his mother, signifies the sanctuary of truth in the Divine Human [principle] ; and took Rebecca, and she was to him for a woman, and he loved her, signifies conjunction : and Isaac was comforted after his mother, signifies a new state.

3209. "The servant told to Isaac all the words which he had done"—that hereby is signified perception from the Divine Natural principle how the case was, appears from the signification of telling, as denoting to perceive ; for perception is a kind of internal telling, wherefore to perceive, in the historical parts of the Word, is expressed by telling, and also by saying, see n. 1791, 1815, 1819, 1822, 1898, 1919, 2080, 3619, 2862 ; and from the signification of servant here, as denoting the Divine Natural principle, of which we shall speak presently ; and from the signification of words, as denoting things, see n. 1785 ; from which considerations it is evident, that by the servant telling all the words which he had done, is signified, that Divine Good rational perceived from the Divine Natural principle how the case was. The case herein is this ; the rational principle is in a degree above the natural, and rational good in the Lord was Divine, but truth, which is elevated out of the natural principle, was not Divine, before it was conjoined to Divine Good of the rational principle ; in order therefore that the good of the rational principle might flow into the natural, there must be a means (or medium), this means (or medium) could be nothing else but a natural principle which should partake of the Divine ; this is represented by the elder servant of Abraham's house administering all things which he had, see n. 3019, 3020 ; and that this servant signifies the Divine Natural principle, may be seen, n. 3191, 3192, 3204, 3206.

3210. "And Isaac introduced her into the tent of Sarah his mother"—that hereby is signified the sanctuary of truth in the Divine Human [principle], appears from the signification of tent, as denoting what is holy, see n. 414, 1102, 2145, 2152, 2576 ; thus denoting sanctuary (or a holy place) ; and from the signification of Sarah the mother, as denoting Truth Divine, see n. 1468, 1901, 2063, 2065, 2904 ; whereof was born the Divine Human [principle], whose rational principle is represented by the son Isaac ; hence it is evident, that by Isaac introducing her into the tent of Sarah his mother, is signified, that rational good brought with it truth, which is represented by Rebecca into the sanctuary of truth. What the sanctuary of truth is, may appear from what was said above, n. 3194, concerning the Lord's Divine Human [principle], viz. that to the very essential Divine [principle] there appertains Good and Truth, and that the Lord, as to the Divine Human [principle], came forth from the Divine Good, and was born (viz. as to the essential Divine principle) of the Divine Truth, or what is the same thing, that the very Esse of the Lord was Divine Good, but the very Existere was Divine Truth; hence was the Divine Good rational, to which He conjoined Divine Truth from the Human principle; concerning this greatest of mysteries more cannot be said, only that it was the very essential Divine Good and Truth in the Lord's Divine Human [principle] whereunto truth from the human principle was conjoined, which was signified by the sanctuary, or the holy of holies, in the tabernacle, and in the temple; and its quality was represented by the things therein contained, as by the golden altar, by the table on which were the breads of proposition (commonly called the shew-bread), by the candlestick, and still more inwardly by the propitiatory, and by the ark, and most intimately by the testimony, which was the law promulgated from Sinai: this was the very holy of holies, or the sanctuary of truth.

3211. "And he received Rebecca, and she was to him for a woman, and he loved her"—that hereby is signified conjunction, viz. of good and truth, may appear without explication: the reason why it is said, that Rebecca was to him for a woman, and not for a wife, is because between rational good, and truth called forth out of the natural principle and made Divine, it is not marriage which has place, but a covenant resembling a conjugal covenant; the essential Divine Marriage, which has place in the Lord, is the union of the Divine Essence with the Human, and of the Human with the Divine, see n. 2803; this is the reason why Rebecca is called woman, not wife.

3212. "And Isaac was comforted after his mother"—that hereby is signified a new state, may appear from the signification of receiving comfort, as denoting a new state, for a state of consolation is new, and that it succeeded to the foregoing is signified by after his mother. A new state is a state of Glorification of the rational principle, as before in respect to good, so now in respect to truth; the rational principle was Glorified when it was made Divine in respect to each. That the Lord as to the Human [principle] was made new, that is, was Glorified, or, what is the same thing, was made Divine, can in nowise be conceived by any one, consequently not believed, who is in worldly and corporeal loves; such an one is altogether ignorant of any spiritual and celestial principle, nor is he willing to know what such a principle is; but he who is not in worldly and corporeal loves, is capable of perceiving this, for he believes that the Lord is one with the Father, and that from Him proceeds all that is holy; consequently that He is Divine even as to the Human [principle], and whoever believes in his manner, (or measure) perceives: the state of the Lord's Glorification may in some manner be conceived from the state of the regeneration of man, for the regeneration of man is an image of the Lord's Glorification, see n. 3043, 3138. When man is regenerated, he then becomes altogether another man, and is made new, therefore also when he is regenerated, he is said to be born again, and created anew; in this case, although his face is like what it was before and also his speech, yet his mind is not like his former mind; for his mind, when he is regenerated, is open towards heaven, and there dwells therein love to the Lord, and charity towards his neighbour, together with faith; it is the mind which makes another and a new man. Change of state cannot be perceived in the body of man, but in his spirit, the body being only the covering of his spirit, and when it is put off, then his spirit appears, and this in altogether another form when he is regenerated, for it has then the form of love and charity in beauty inexpressible, see n. 553, instead of its pristine form, which was that of hatred and cruelty with a deformity also inexpressible; hence it may appear what a regenerate person is, or one that is born again, or created anew, viz. that he is altogether another and a new man. From this image it may in some measure be conceived what the Glorification of the Lord is. He was not regenerated as a man, but was made Divine, and this from the most essential Divine Love, for He was made Divine Love Itself; what His Form was on this occasion, was made apparent to Peter, James, and John, when it was given them to see Him, not with the eyes of the body, but with the eyes of the spirit, viz. that His Countenance shone like the sun, Matt. xvii. 2; and that this was His Divine Human [principle], appears from the voice which then came out of the cloud, saying, This is My beloved Son, verse 5: that Son is the Divine Human [principle], may be seen, n. 2628.

3213. IN the world of spirits there exist innumerable and almost continual representatives, which are forms of things spiritual and celestial, not unlike those which are in the world; it was given to know their cause and ground, by daily commerce with spirits and angels; they flow from heaven, and are an effect of the ideas and discourses of the angels therein; for the ideas of the angels, and their discourses thence derived, when they are conveyed down to spirits, are exhibited representatively in diverse manners; by virtue thereof, upright and well-disposed spirits are enabled to know what subject the angels are discoursing upon, inasmuch as inwardly in the representatives there is an angelic principle, which, in consequence of the affection that it excites, is perceived even to it's quality. Angelic ideas and discourses cannot otherwise be exhibited before spirits, for an angelic idea contains things indefinite compared with the idea of a spirit, and unless it was formed and exhibited representatively, and thus visibly by images, a spirit would scarce understand anything of it's contents, they being for the most part ineffable; but when they are represented by forms, they then become comprehensible to spirits, as to things of a more common or general nature; and what is wonderful, there is not even the smallest thing in what is represented, which does not express somewhat spiritual and celestial, which is in the idea of the angelic society whence the representative flows down.

3214. Representatives of things spiritual and celestial exist sometimes in a long series, continued for an hour or two, in such an order successively as to beget astonishment. There are societies with whom these representatives are effected, and it has been given me to be in consort with them during several months; but these representations are such, that it would fill several pages to relate and describe only one in it's order; they are very delightful, inasmuch as somewhat new and unexpected is in a continual succession, and this until what is represented is fully perfected; and when all things are perfected, it is allowed to contemplate them in one view, and in this case it is given to perceive at the same time what is signified by every particular. Good spirits are thus also initiated into spiritual and celestial ideas.

3215. The representatives, which exist before spirits, are of a variety incredible; nevertheless they resemble for the most part those things which exist on the earth, and in it's three kingdoms. For the better understanding their nature and quality, see what was said above concerning them, n. 1521, 1532, 1619 to 1625, 1807, 1808, 1971, 1974, 1977, 1980, 1981, 2299, 2601, 2758.

3216. In order that it may be still more fully known how the case is with respect to representatives in another life, viz. with those things which appear in the world of spirits, it may be expedient to adduce here some further examples. When the discourse with the angels is concerning the doctrinals of charity and faith, there sometimes appears on such occasions, in an inferior sphere inhabited by a corresponding society of spirits, the idea of a city or of cities, with palaces therein, exhibiting such skill in architecture as to beget astonishment, so that the beholder would imagine that the very essence of the architectonic art was there and thence derived, besides houses of various appearances; and what is wonderful, in all and singular of these things, there is not the smallest point, or the most minute visible particle, but what represents somewhat of angelic idea and discourse; hence it may appear what innumerable things are contained therein; and also what is signified by the cities described in the Word as seen by the prophets, and likewise what by the holy city or New Jerusalem; and what by the cities mentioned in the prophetic Word, viz. the doctrinals of charity and faith, see n. 412, 2450.

3217. When the angels are in discourse on intellectual subjects, there appear on such occasions in the world of spirits, beneath the angels, or in corresponding societies, horses, and these of a size, form, colour, attitude, agreeable to the ideas which the angels have concerning the intellectual subject, adorned also with various trappings. There is also a place at some depth a little to the right, which is called the abode of the intelligent, where horses continually appear, and this by reason that their thoughts are employed on intellectual subjects, and when the angels, who are in discourse on what is intellectual, flow into their thoughts, there is a representation of horses; hence it may appear what was signified by the horses which were seen by the prophets, and also by horses as mentioned in the Word, viz. things intellectual, see n. 2760, 2761, 2762.

3219. When the angels are in discourse concerning knowledges, and concerning ideas, and concerning influx, then there appear in the world of spirits as it were birds formed according to the subject of their discourse; hence it is that birds in the Word signify things rational, or those things which relate to thought, see n. 40, 745, 776, 991. There were on a time presented to my view some birds, one dark and deformed, but two of a noble and beautiful aspect, and when I saw them, lo! there instantly fell upon me some spirits with such violence, as to excite a tremor in my nerves and bones; I imagined that on this occasion, as had occasionally before happened, some evil spirits were assailing me, with intent to destroy me, but this was not the case; on the cessation of the tremor and of the emotion of the spirits who fell upon me, I discoursed with them, asking what was the matter? They said, that they had fallen down from a certain angelic society, in which the discourse was concerning thoughts and influx, and that they were in the opinion, that things relating to thought flow in from without, viz. through the external senses, according to appearance; whereas the heavenly society in which they were, was in the opinion that they flow in from within; and inasmuch as they were in a false principle, therefore they fell down thence, not that they were cast down, for the angels cast no one down from them, but because, being in a falsity, they fell down thence of themselves, and that this was the cause. Hence it was given to know, that discourse in heaven concerning thoughts and influx is represented by birds, and that the thoughts of those who are in the false principle are represented by dark and deformed birds, but of those who are in the truth, by birds of a noble and beautiful appearance; I was at the same time instructed, that all things of thought enter from within, but not from without, although it appears so; and it was told me, that it is contrary to order that what is posterior should flow into what is prior, or what is grosser into what is purer, which would be like the body flowing into the soul.

3220. When the angels hold discourse concerning things appertaining to intelligence and wisdom, and concerning perceptions and knowledges, on such occasions, the influx thence into corresponding societies of spirits falls into representations of such things as are in the vegetable kingdom, as into representations of paradises, of vineyards, of forests, of meadows adorned with flowers, and into several kinds of beauties, which exceed all human imagination; hence it is, that those things which relate to wisdom and intelligence, are described in the Word by paradises, vineyards, forests, meadows, and that where these things are named, such things are signified.

3221. The discourses of the angels are sometimes represented by clouds, and by their forms, colours, motions and translations; affirmatives of truth by bright and ascending clouds, negatives by dark and descending clouds; affirmatives of what is false by dusky and black clouds; consent and dissent by various consociations and dissociations of clouds, and these in a sky colour, like that of the heavens by night.

3222. Moreover the different kinds of love and their affections are represented by flames, and this with inexpressible variation; but truths are represented by lights, and by innumerable modifications of light; hence it may appear from what ground it is, that by flames in the Word are signified the good things appertaining to love, and by lights the truths appertaining to faith.

3223. There are two lights whereby man is illuminated, the light of the world and the light of heaven; the light of the world is from the sun, the light of heaven is from the Lord; the light of the world is for the natural or external man, thus for those things which are in him; such things although they do not appear to appertain to that light, still do appertain to it, for nothing can be comprehended or conceived by the natural man, except by such things as exist and appear in the solar world, and thus except they have somewhat of form from the light and shade therein. All ideas of time and of space, which are of so much account in the natural man, that he cannot think without them, appertain also to the light of the world. But the light of heaven is for the spiritual or internal man; the interior mind of man, where are his intellectual ideas which are called immaterial, is in this light; man is ignorant of this, although he calls his intellect sight, and ascribes light to it; the reason is, because so long as he is in worldly and corporeal things, he has only a perception of such things as appertain to the light of the world, but not of such things as appertain to the light of heaven; the light of heaven is from the Lord alone, and the universal heaven is in that light. This light, viz. of heaven, is immensely more perfect than the light of the world; the things which in the light of the world make one ray, in the light of heaven make myriads; in the light of heaven is intelligence and wisdom. This is the light which flows into the light of the world which is in the external or natural man, and causes him to perceive sensually the objects of things; unless this light flowed in, man could not have any perception, for the things appertaining to the light of the world derive hence their life. Between those lights, or between those things which are in the light of heaven and in the light of the world, there is given a correspondence, when the external or natural man makes one with the internal or spiritual man, that is, when the former is subservient to the latter; and in this case, the things which exist in the light of the world, are representative of such things as exist in the light of heaven.

3224. It is surprising that man does not as yet know, that his intellectual mind is in a certain light, which is altogether different from the light of the world: but such is the constitution of things, that to those who are in the light of the world, the light of heaven is as it were darkness, and to those who are in the light of heaven, the light of the world is as it were darkness; this arises principally from the loves, which are the heats of light; they who are in the loves of self and of the world, consequently in the heat only of the light of the world, are only affected with evils and falses, and these are the things which extinguish truths, which are of the light of heaven; but they who are in love to the Lord, and in love towards their neighbour, consequently in spiritual heat, which is of the light of heaven, are affected with goodnesses and truths, which extinguish false principles, but still with these persons there is given a correspondence. Spirits, who are only in those things which appertain to the light of the world, and thereby are in false principles derived from evils, have indeed light from heaven in another life, but such a light as is that of an ignis fatuus, or as what issues from a lighted coal or fire-brand, but this light is immediately extinguished on the approach of the light of heaven, and becomes darkness; they who are in that light are in phantasies, and the things which they see in phantasies they believe to be truths, nor do they account any other things to be truths; their phantasies are also bound close to filthy and obscene objects, with which they are particularly delighted, thus they think like persons insane and delirious; in regard to what is false, they do not reason concerning it, whether it be so or not, but they affirm instantly, whereas in regard to goodnesses and truths, they have continual reasoning, which terminates in the negative: for truths and goodnesses, which are from the light of heaven, flow into the interior mind, which with them is closed, wherefore the light flows in around and out of that mind, and becomes such that it is modified only by false principles appearing to them as truths: truths and goodnesses cannot be acknowledged but with those, whose interior mind is open, into which light from the Lord may flow in, and so far as that mind is open, so far truths and goodnesses are acknowledged; that mind is open only with those who are in innocence, in love to the Lord, and in charity towards their neighbour; but not with those who are in the truths of faith, unless at the same time they are in the good of life.

3225. Hence then it may appear what correspondence is, and whence it is, what representation is, and whence; viz. that correspondence is between those things which appertain to the light of heaven, and those things which appertain to the light of the world, that is, between those things which appertain to the internal or spiritual man, and those which appertain to the external or natural man; and that representation is whatever exists in the things appertaining to the light of the world, that is, whatever exists in the external or natural man, considered in respect to the things appertaining to the light of heaven, that is, appertaining to the internal or spiritual man.

3226. It is one of the distinguishing faculties which man possesses in himself; although he is ignorant of it, and which he carries with him into another life, when he passes thither after the dissolution of the body, that he perceives what is signified by the representatives which appear in another life, also that he is able by the sense of his mind to express fully in a moment of time, what would require many hours to express in the body, and this by ideas derived from the things appertaining to the light of heaven, assisted and made as it were winged by suitable appearances representative of the subject of discourse, which are such as cannot be described: and whereas man after death cometh into those faculties, and has no need to be instructed respecting them in another life, it may hence appear that he is in them, that is, that they are in him, even during his life in the body, notwithstanding his ignorance of it. The reason of this is, because there is a continual influx with man through heaven from the Lord; this influx is an influx of things spiritual and celestial, which fall into his natural things, and are there exhibited representatively. In heaven, with the angels, nothing is a subject of thought but what relates to things celestial and spiritual appertaining to the Lord's kingdom; but in the world with man, scarce any thing is a subject of thought but what relates to things corporeal and natural, which appertain to the kingdom and the necessities of life in which he is; and whereas the spiritual and celestial things of heaven which flow in, are exhibited representatively with man in his natural things, therefore they remain ingrafted, and man is in them when he puts off things corporeal, and leaves worldly things.

CHAPTER THE TWENTY-FIFTH.

3228. THE subject treated of in this chapter is concerning the sons of Abraham which he had by Keturah, and also concerning the sons of Ishmael, who are named by name; afterwards concerning Isaac and Rebecca, in that Esau and Jacob were born to them; and lastly concerning Esau, that he sold the birth-right (primogeniture) to Jacob for pottage of pulse. Every one may see that these relations are such, that they may indeed be serviceable in regard to the ecclesiastical history of that time, but that they are very little serviceable in regard to spiritual life, which nevertheless is the end which the Word was intended to promote; for of what use is it for man to know, who were the sons which Abraham had by Keturah, or who were the sons of Ishmael? also, that Esau, being weary with hunting, desired pottage of pulse, and that Jacob by the cunning which he employed on the occasion, for the pottage procured to himself the birth-right (primogeniture)? In like manner in the following chapter, of what use is it for a man to know, that the shepherds of Abimelech disputed with the shepherds of Isaac concerning the wells which they digged, almost in the same manner as with the shepherds of Abraham above, chap. xxi. Add to this, that in some places we meet with nothing but mere names, as of the posterity of Esau, chap. xxxvi. and so in other chapters, in which, so far as regards the mere historical relations, there is so little of anything Divine, that it can in nowise be said that it is the Word of the Lord, divinely inspired as to every particular expression, and even as to every dot and tittle, that is, that it was sent down from the Lord through heaven to man, by whom those relations were written; for what was sent down from the Lord must needs be Divine in all and singular things, thus not as to historicals, as being the transactions of men, but only by virtue of those things which lie deeply hid and contained therein, all and singular of which treat of the Lord and of His kingdom; the historicals of the Word are in this particular distinguished above all other historicals in the universe, that they involve in them such hidden contents.

3229. If the Word was the Word merely as to historicals, that is, as to the external or literal sense, then all the historicals which are therein would be holy; and what is more, several persons who are spoken of therein would be esteemed as saints, and it would come to pass, as is the case with many, that they would be worshiped as gods, because they are treated of in the most holy of all writing; for instance those who are called patriarchs, viz. Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and after them the Fathers of the tribes, the twelve sons of Jacob, and afterwards David, with many others; when nevertheless all these were men, and some of them were little solicitous about Divine worship, and, what I can testify, have nothing about them above the common lot of men, and likewise are altogether unknown in heaven, concerning whom, and their state in another life, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, we shall speak elsewhere. Hence then it may plainly appear, that the external or literal sense is the Word only by virtue of the internal or spiritual sense, which is in it, and from which it is.

CHAPTER XXV.

1. AND Abraham added, and took a woman, and her name was Keturah.

2. And she bare to him Simran, and Jokshan, and Medan, and Midian, and Jishbak, and Skuah.

3. And Jokshan begat Sheba, and Dedan. And the sons of Dedan were Ashurim, and Letushim, and Leumin.

4. And the sons of Midian, Ephah, and Ephher, and Hanoah, and Abidah, and Eldaah. All these were the sons of Keturah.

5. And Abraham gave all that he had unto Isaac.

6. And to the sons of the concubines, which Abraham had, Abraham gave gifts; and he sent them away from Isaac his son, while he yet lived, towards the east to the land of the east.

7. And these are the days of the years of the lives of Abraham, which he lived, an hundred years, and seventy years, and five years.

8. And Abraham expired and died, in a good old age, an old man and full fraught; and was gathered to his people.

9. And Isaac and Ishmael his sons buried him at the cave of Machpelah, at the field of Ephron the son of Zoar the Hittite, which is upon the faces of Mamre.

10. The field which Abraham bought of the sons of Heth, there was Abraham buried and Sarah his wife.

11. And it came to pass after the death of Abraham, that God blessed Isaac his son; and Isaac dwelt with Beer-lahai-roi.

* * * * *

12. And these are the nativities of Ishmael the son of Abraham, whom Hagar, the Egyptian, Sarah's handmaid, bare to Abraham.

13. And these are the names of the sons Ishmael, in their names, according to their nativities: the first born of Ishmael Nabaioth, and Kedar, and Abdeel, and Mibsam.

14. And Mishmah, and Dumah, and Massa.

15. Hadar, and Themah, Jetur, Naphish, and Kedmah.

16. And these are the sons of Ishmael, and these their names, in their villages, and in their castles, twelve princes of their peoples.

17. And these are the years of the lives of Ishmael, an hundred years, and thirty years, and seven years; and he expired and died, and was gathered to his people.

18. And they resided from Havilah even to Shur, which is upon the faces of Egypt, in coming to Ashur; he fell upon the faces of all his brethren.

* * * * *

19. And these are the nativities of Isaac, the son of Abraham: Abraham begat Isaac.

20. And Isaac was a son of forty years in his taking to himself for a woman Rebecca, the daughter of Bethuel, the Aramæan, of Padan-Aram, the sister of Laban the Aramæan.

21. And Isaac prayed to Jehovah on account of his woman, because she was barren, and Jehovah was intreated for her, and Rebecca his woman conceived.

22. And the sons struggled together in the midst of her, and she said, if so, for what is this I? and she went to ask Jehovah.

23. And Jehovah said unto her, two nations are in thy womb, and two people shall be separated from thy bowels, and people shall prevail over people, and the greater shall serve the lesser.

24. And her days were fulfilled to bring forth, and lo, twins were in her womb.

25. And the first came forth, he was wholly red, like a hairy garment, and they called his name Esau.

26. And after this, his brother came forth, and his hand took hold on the heel of Esau, and they called his name Jacob. And Isaac was a son of sixty years in her bearing them.

* * * * *

27. And the boys grew up, and Esau was a man skilful in hunting, a man of the field; and Jacob was an entire man inhabiting tents.

28. And Isaac loved Esau, because hunting [what is acquired by hunting] was in his mouth; and Rebecca loved Jacob.

29. And Jacob boiled pulse, and Esau came from the field, and he was weary.

30. And Esau said to Jacob, cause me to sup I pray of the red thing, this red thing, because I am weary, therefore he called his name Edom.

31. And Jacob said, sell me as to-day thy birthright.

32. And Esau said, behold I go to die, and for what is this birthright to me?

33. And Jacob said, swear to me as to-day, and he swear to him, and sold his birth-right to Jacob.

34. And Jacob gave to Esau bread and pottage of pulse, and he eat, and drank, and rose up, and went, and Esau despised his birthright.

CONTENTS.

3230. THE subject treated of in this chapter, in the internal sense, is, first, concerning the Lord's spiritual kingdom, and its derivations, verses 1, 2, 3, 4. That it was separated from the Lord's celestial kingdom, verses 5, 6. That the representative of the Lord by Abraham was ended, verses 7, 8. And that the representative of the Lord by Isaac and Ishmael began, verses 9, 10, 11.

3231. Secondly, the spiritual Church is treated of, which is represented by Ishmael, together with its derivations, verses 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18.

3232. Thirdly, the subject treated of is concerning the conception and birth of the Divine natural [principle], as to good, which is Esau, and as to truth, which is Jacob, verses 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25.

3233. Fourthly, concerning the priority of good and of truth in the Church, verses 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34.

THE INTERNAL SENSE.

3234. VERSE 1. And Abraham added, and took a woman, and her name was Keturah. Abraham added, and took a woman, signifies another state of the Lord, which Abraham represents; Abraham and Sarah represented the Lord as to the Divine Celestial [principle], Abraham and Keturah represented the Lord as to the Divine Spiritual [principle]; thus Abraham here represents the Lord as to Divine Good Spiritual: and his woman, as to Divine Truth adjoined to that Good: and her name was Keturah, signifies the essence of this Divine Truth.

3235. "Abraham added and took a woman"—that hereby is signified another state of the Lord, which Abraham represents, and that Abraham and Sarah represented the Lord, as to the Divine Celestial [principle], and that Abraham and Keturah represented the Lord, as to the Divine Spiritual [principle], appears from those things which have been said and shewn above concerning Abraham and his wife Sarah, and from those things which are here related concerning Abraham and Keturah: but whereas it is said that Abraham here represents another state of the Lord, and that Abraham and Sarah represent the Lord as to the Divine Celestial [principle] but Abraham and Keturah as to the Divine Spiritual, it is expedient it should be known what the Divine Celestial [principle] is, and what is the Divine Spiritual [principle]; the Divine Celestial and the Divine Spiritual [principle] are so called in respect to those who receive the Divine [principle] of the Lord, for the Lord appears to every one according to the quality of him who receives, as may be manifest from what was said, n. 1838, 1861; and is further manifest from this consideration, that He has one appearance to the celestial, and another to the spiritual; for to the celestial He appears as a sun, but to the spiritual as a moon, see n. 1529, 1530, 1531, 1838. The Lord appears as a sun to the celestial, because they are in celestial love, that is in love to the Lord; but to the spiritual as a moon, because they are in spiritual love, that is, in charity towards their neighbour. The difference is like the difference between the light of the sun in the day-time, and the light of the moon in the night-time, also between the heat of each, whence the vegetation comes. This is what is meant in the first chapter of Genesis by these words,

“ And God made two great luminaries, the great luminary to rule by day, and the lesser luminary to rule by night,” verse 16. The Lord’s kingdom is distinguished in general into celestial and spiritual, that is, it consists of such as are celestial, and such as are spiritual; and whereas the Lord’s Divine [principle] appears to the celestial as celestial, and to the spiritual as spiritual, it is from this ground that it is said, that Abraham and Sarah represented the Lord as to the Divine Celestial [principle], and Abraham and Keturah as to the Divine Spiritual. But inasmuch as it is scarce known to any one what the celestial principle is, and what the spiritual, also who are in each principle, the reader is referred to what was said and shewn above on this subject under the following articles, viz. what the celestial principle is and what the spiritual, n. 1155, 1577, 1824, 2048, 2184, 2227, 2507. Who are celestial and who spiritual, n. 2088, 2669, 2708, 2715. That the celestial man is a likeness of the Lord, and does what is good from a principle of love, and that the spiritual man is an image of the Lord, and does what is good from a principle of faith, n. 50, 51, 52, 1013. That the celestial perceive what is true by virtue of what is good, and that they in no case reason concerning what is true, n. 202, 337, 607, 895, 1121, 2715. That with the celestial man good is implanted in his will-principle, but with the spiritual man in his intellectual principle; and that in this principle with the spiritual a new will is created, n. 863, 875, 895, 897, 927, 1023, 1043, 1044, 2256. That the celestial, by virtue of essential good, see things indefinite, but that the spiritual, in consequence of reasoning whether a thing be so or not, cannot attain unto the first boundary of their light, n. 2718. That the spiritual are respectively in an obscure principle, n. 1043, 2708, 2715. That the Lord came into the world that he might save the spiritual, n. 2661, 2716, 2833, 2834.

3236. That Abraham here represents the Lord as to Divine Good Spiritual, and that his woman represents the Lord as to Divine Truth adjoined to that Good, may appear from what was said above, concerning husbands and wives, viz. that the husband represents good, and the wife truth, as above in the case of Abraham and Sarah, n. 1468, 1901, 2063, 2065, 2172, 2173, 2198, 2904: and as in the case of Isaac and Rebecca in the preceding chapter, n. 3077. The ground and reason why husband represents good, and wife truth, is, because the Church is compared to a marriage, and also is a marriage of good and of truth; good is what the husband represents, as being in the first place, but truth what the wife represents, as being in the second; therefore also the Lord in the Word is called bridegroom, man (vir) husband, and the Church is called bride, woman, wife. What spiritual good is, and spiritual truth adjoined to that good, may appear from the passages just above cited, n.

3235; good appertaining to the spiritual man is in general that which is called the good of faith, and this is no other than charity towards his neighbour, but in order to its becoming charity, it must come from the new will with which the spiritual man is gifted by the Lord; the spiritual truth adjoined to that good is what is called the truth of faith, and this is no other than what has respect to charity, at first as the end for the sake of which it exists, and afterwards as the principle from which it exists; but in order that the spiritual man may have the truth of faith, or faith, it must come from the new understanding with which he is gifted by the Lord, and the new understanding must have its light from the new will.

3237. "And her name was Keturah"—that hereby is signified the essence of this Divine Truth, appears from the signification of name, as denoting quality, and of calling by name, as denoting to know the quality of a thing what it is, see n. 144, 145, 1754, 1896, 2009: but whereas not quality, but Esse, is predicated of what is Divine, therefore here by name is signified essence, and indeed the essence of Divine Truth, which is here signified by her, viz. the woman's; that woman in this passage is Divine Truth, may be seen just above, n. 3236: hence it is evident what Keturah in general involves.

3238. Verses 2, 3, 4. And she bare to him Simran, and Jokshan, and Medan, and Median, and Jishbak, and Shuah. And Jokshan begat Sheba and Dedan; and the sons of Dedan were Ashurim, and Letushim, and Leumim. And the sons of Midian, Ephah and Ephraim, and Hanoch, and Abidah and Eldaah: all these were the sons of Keturah. She bare to him Simran and Jokshan, and Medan, and Midian, and Jishbak and Shuah, represent common lots of the Lord's spiritual kingdom in the heavens and in the earths: and Jokshan begat Sheba and Dedan, signifies derivations from the first lot: and, the sons of Dedan were Ashurim, and Letushim, and Leumim, signifies derivations from the second lot: and the sons of Midian, Ephah and Ephraim, and Hanoch, and Abidah, and Eldaah, signifies derivations from a third lot: all these were the sons of Keturah, signifies as to doctrinals and worship thence derived.

3239. "She bare to him Simran and Jokshan, and Medan, and Midian, and Jishbak and Shuah"—that hereby are represented common lots of the Lord's spiritual kingdom in the heavens and in the earths, cannot so well appear from the Word, because none of these names are mentioned in any other place except Midian, of whom we shall speak presently; it may, however, appear from this consideration, viz. that all persons, as many as are named in the Word, represent somewhat, as may be sufficiently evident from all those which have been mentioned above from the first chapter of Genesis. That the names, as well of persons as of kingdoms, and of provinces, and of cities, in the internal sense of the Word signify things, may be seen, n. 768, 1224, 1264, 1876, 1888, and in many other places, where this in particular is confirmed from the Word. The reason why the rest of these names except Midian are not mentioned in any other part of the Word is, because they are of the sons of the east, of whom mention is made in the Word throughout, and by whom in general are signified those who are of the Lord's spiritual kingdom, as will be seen below at the 6th verse of this chapter. That these sons of Abraham by Keturah have such representation, appears from this consideration, that Abraham and Keturah represent the Lord as to the Divine Spiritual [principle], viz. Abraham as to Divine Good spiritual, and Keturah as to Divine Truth spiritual conjoined to that Good, secn. 3235, 3236; hence it follows, that their sons represent common lots of the kingdom which is from the Lord's Divine Spiritual [principle]. They are called common lots, because the Lord's kingdom is represented by the earth (or land), which is distributed by lots amongst those to whom it is given as an inheritance for possession, as the earth (or land) of Canaan was given to the sons of Israel. Lots in general are twelve, for by twelve are signified all the things of charity and of faith thence derived, which are of the Lord's kingdom, concerning which see beneath at verse 16; here however there are only six, which is but half of twelve, nevertheless the half implies the same as the whole, for multiplication and division, where a like thing is involved, do not vary the thing itself as to what is essential.

3240. "And Jokshan begat Sheba and Dedan"—that hereby are signified derivations from the first lot, appears from the representation of Jokshan, and of his sons Sheba and Dedan, of whom we shall speak presently. In this passage, inasmuch as there occur only mere names, and by those names are signified states and derivations of the Lord's spiritual Church, it may be expedient to shew how the case is in general with those states and derivations. The celestial Church differs from the spiritual Church in this, that they who are of the celestial Church, and are called celestial, are principled in love, viz. in the good and truth thereof, but they who are of the spiritual Church, and are called spiritual, are principled in faith, viz. in it's good and truth. The good which the celestial enjoy is that of love to the Lord, and the truth in which they are principled is that of love towards their neighbour; but the good which the spiritual enjoy is that of charity towards their neighbour, and the truth in which they are principled is that of faith, so far as this is doctrine concerning charity: hence it may appear, that the Lord's spiritual kingdom, like His celestial kingdom, has it's good and truth, but with much difference. It is further to be noted, that they who are in each kingdom are distinguished among themselves by good and truth, inasmuch as there are some who are more principled in good, and others who are more principled in truth; hence then come derivations, viz. derivations of good and derivations of truth, the derivations of good in the Lord's spiritual kingdom are what are represented by the sons of Jokshan, spoken of in this verse, but the derivations of truth in the same kingdom are what are represented by the sons of Midian spoken of in the following verse. And whereas there are two classes of spiritual men, viz. those who are more principled in good, and those who are more principled in truth, they have hence two sorts of doctrinals, viz. doctrinals of charity, and doctrinals of faith; doctrinals of charity are for those who are principled in the good of faith, and are here signified by the sons of Jokshan, whereas doctrinals of faith are for those who are principled in the truth of faith, and are signified by the sons of Midian. Sheba and Dedan are those who constitute the first class, that is, who in the Lord's spiritual kingdom are principled in the good of faith, and who have doctrinals of charity; hence it is, that by Sheba and Dedan are signified the knowledges of things celestial, or, what is the same thing, those who are in the knowledges of things celestial, that is, who are in the doctrinals of charity; for doctrinals are knowledges, and charity is the celestial principle appertaining to the spiritual man. That Sheba and Dedan have this signification, was shewn, n. 117, 1168, 1171, 1172; but Sheba and Dedan there are the grandsons of Ham, and are called sons of Rama. It is however to be noted, that there were never any such persons as either Ham, Japhet, or Shem, but that they, who were of the Church called Noah after the flood, were distinguished as to goodnesses and truths into three classes, which classes were so named, see n. 736, 1062, 1065, 1140, 1141, 1162, and in many other places; nevertheless there were nations which were so called, but which were descended from others, as in the present case of Sheba and Dedan, who, it is here evident, were descended from Jokshan the son of Abraham by Keturah. That by Sheba are signified those who are principled in the knowledges of things celestial, consequently who are in the good of faith, is evident from the passages which were adduced, n. 117, 1171; and that Dedan had a like signification, appears from the passages adduced, n. 1172; and further from the following, "The prophetic [denunciation] concerning Arabia: in the forest in Arabia, ye shall spend the night ye troops of Dedan; bring ye waters to meet him that is thirsty, ye inhabitants of the land of Thema, with the bread thereof prevent him that wandereth; for they shall wander before swords, before a drawn sword," Isaiah xxi. 13, 14, 15; where to spend the night in the forest denotes to be desolated as to good, for by Arabia are signified those who are principled in things celestial, that is, who are principled in the good things of faith, and to spend the night there in the forest is to be no longer principled in what is good, consequently it is to be in desolation, which is also described by wandering before swords, before a drawn sword; celestial things, that is, the good things of faith, or, what is the same thing, works of charity, in which they are principled, are signified by bringing waters to meet him that thirsteth, and by preventing with bread him that wandereth. So in Jeremiah, "I have received a cup from the hand of Jehovah, and I have caused all nations to drink to whom Jehovah hath sent me, Jerusalem and the cities of Judah, and her kings, and her princes, to deliver them into desolation; Pharaoh king of Egypt, and his servants, and his princes, and all his people; all the kings of Tyre, and all the kings of Sidon Dedan, and Thema, and Buz, and all that are cut off the corner; all the kings of Simri, and all the kings of Elam, and all the kings of Media, and all the kings of the north," xxv. 17, 18, 19, 22, 23, 25, 26; where also the desolation of the spiritual Church is treated of, of which Church the different classes are mentioned in order, and are signified by Jerusalem, the cities of Judah, Egypt, Tyre, Sidon, Dedan, Thema, Buz, Simri, Elam, Media. So in Ezechiel, "Sheba and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish, and all the young lions thereof, shall say to thee, art thou come to spoil the spoil, hast thou gathered together my congregation to plunder the prey, to take away the silver and gold, to take the cattle and possessions, to spoil a great spoil," xxxviii. 13; speaking of Gog, by whom is signified external worship separate from internal, which is idolatrous, see n. 7151: Sheba and Dedan denote the internal things of worship, viz. the good things of faith; Tarshish denotes external worship corresponding thereto; the silver, gold, cattle, possessions, and spoil, which Gog, or the external principle of worship separate from the internal, is desirous to take away, are the knowledges of good and of truth, for which those who are Sheba and Dedan fight, and which they defend, wherefore they are called young lions. Sheba in a proper sense denotes those who are principled in the knowledges of good, Dedan those who are principled in the knowledges of truth grounded in good.

3241. "And the sons of Dedan were Ashurim, and Letushim, and Leumin"—that hereby are signified derivations from a second lot, may appear from the representation of Dedan, as denoting those who are principled in the good of faith, properly those who are principled in the truth of faith grounded in good, see n. 3240; that these are derivations from a second lot, is evident: the truths of faith grounded in good are what are especially signified by these three; but what is signified by each in particular, though it might be declared, cannot so well be confirmed by other passages from the Word, inasmuch as the names are never again mentioned. In the Lord's kingdom the varieties are innumerable as to goodnesses and truths, notwithstanding they all constitute but one heaven; for the varieties are so numerous, that one society is in no case altogether like another, that is, in the same good and truth, see n. 684, 615, 690. Oneness therein is constituted of several various things, so arranged by the Lord as to be in concord with each other, which concord, or harmony, of several things is impressed by the Lord in consequence of their all having relation to Him, see n. 551. The case herein is like that of the organs, members, and viscera of the body, none of which is altogether like another, but all are various, and yet they make one, and this in consequence of their all having relation to one soul, and thereby to heaven, and thus to the Lord; for every thing that is unconnected with the Lord is nothing. Hence it may appear, that the differences of truth and of good as to species are innumerable, but their genera, and these the most general, which are spiritual Churches, are signified by these sons and grandsons of Abraham. They who are of the spiritual Church, inasmuch as they have no perception, like those who are of the celestial Church, of what is good and true, but acknowledge for truths what they have learnt from others, therefore they are in continual dispute about truths, reasoning whether they be so or not, and each abides in that doctrinal, and calls it true, which is taught in his own particular Church, whence there are so many differences; besides this several form conclusions concerning things good and true from appearances and fallacies, one in one manner, and another in another, but none from any internal perception, yea, they do not know what perception is; and whereas their intellect is so obscured as to the goodnesses and truths of faith, it is not to be wondered at that they are disagreed about that most essential of all truths, viz. the Lord's Divine Human, and Holy Proceeding [principle]. The celestial perceive that they are not three but one, whereas the spiritual abide in the idea of three, yet are willing to think that they are one. Since therefore there are dissensions about this most essential point of all, it may appear, that the varieties and differences of doctrinals are innumerable. Hence it may be known what is the ground and origin of the derivations, which are signified by those who are here named; but notwithstanding there being so many varieties and differences of doctrinals, or so many derivations, still they form together one Church, when all acknowledge charity as the essential of the Church, or, what is the same thing, when they have respect to life as the end of doctrine, that is, when they inquire how a man of the Church lives, and not so much what are his sentiments, for every one, in another life, is gifted with a lot from the Lord, according to the good of his life, not according to truth of doctrine separate from the good of life.

3242. "And the sons of Midian, Ephah, and Ephraim, and Hanock, and Abidah, and Eldaah"—that hereby are signified derivations from a third lot, may appear from the representation of Midian, as denoting those who are principled in the truth of faith, of which representation we shall speak presently; and since they who are principled in the truth of faith are Midian, it follows that sons are derivations thence. With those who are principled in the truth of faith the case is this; no one is admitted into the Lord's kingdom, unless he be principled in the good of faith, for the good of faith appertains to life, and the life of faith remains, but not the doctrine of faith, unless so far as it makes one with the life; still however they who are principled in the truth of faith, that is, who profess faith, and call it essential, by reason that they have been taught so, and nevertheless are principled in the good of life, that is, are Christians in heart and not in profession only, are in the Lord's spiritual kingdom. For any one may easily be persuaded that faith is essential, when he has been taught so by his instructors, and has imbibed this opinion from his early years, and because they who are in highest reputation for their learning, and are called the heads of the Church, think so, some of whom are afraid to speak of the good of life, because the life condemns them, moreover also, because the things which are of faith flow in perceptibly, but not so the things which are of charity. Whosoever then are principled in the truth of faith, and are still in the good of life, these are they who are called Midian, but the truths, according to which they live, are the sons of Midian: and as they, who are principled in the truth of faith conjoined to the good thereof, are Midian, so also in an opposite sense Midian denotes those who are principled in what is false, in consequence of not being in good of life, as may appear from the following passages, "A company of camels shall cover thee, the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah, all shall come from Sheba; they shall carry gold and frankincense, and shall announce the praises of Jehovah," Isaiah lx. 6; speaking of the Lord's spiritual kingdom, where the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah denote doctrinals; doctrinals of good are gold, doctrinals of truth are frankincense, each are the praises of Jehovah; hence also it is evident what is signified by Ephah. That by the Midianites, who drew out Joseph from the pit, and sold him to the Ishmaelites, and into Egypt to Potiphar, Gen. xxxvii. 28, 36, are signified those, who are principled in the truth of simple good, will be seen, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, in the explication of those verses hereafter. That by Midian are also signified those who are principled in what is false, in consequence of not being in the good of life, may appear from what is said concerning Midian in the book of Numbers, viz. that "The elders of Moab and the elders of Midian, with cunning sleights in the hand went to Balaam, and spake to him the words of Balak," xxii. 4, 7, and the following verses; Moab in a good sense denotes those who are in natural good, and suffer themselves to be easily seduced, but in an opposite sense those who adulterate what is good, see n. 2468: Midian in a good sense denotes those, who are in the truth of simple good, as was said, and thus suffer themselves to be easily persuaded, but in an opposite sense, as in the present case, those who falsify truths; falsifications are signified by cunning sleights (præstigias) in the hand, and actions grounded in false principles by their sending to Balaam to come against the sons of Israel, who are the goodnesses and truths of faith. The like was signified by the whoredoms of the sons of Israel with the women of the Midianites, by reason of which a plague was sent, which was appeased by Phineas stabbing the Midianitish woman and the man of Israel in the brothel, Numb. xxv. 6, 7, 8, for by whoredoms were represented the falsifications of truth, see n. 2466, 2729; and whereas the falsifications of truth are what are signified in the internal sense by whoredoms, therefore, as they were commanded, twelve thousand of the sons of Israel smote the Midianites, slew their kings, and every male, and the women whom they had led captive, which had known a man, and divided the spoil amongst themselves, Numb. xxv. 16, 17; chap. xxxi. 1 to the end; the reason why there were twelve thousand was, because twelve signified all things of faith, see n. 577, 2089, 2129, 2130, whereby false principles are destroyed; the kings whom they slew are false principles, and also every male; the women which had known man are affections of what is false: the spoil, as gold, silver, cattle, are the truths which were falsified; hence it is evident, that all and singular the things therein related are representative of the punishment and destruction of what is false by truths. The case is the same in regard to what is said of the Midianites in the book of Judges, viz. "That the sons of Israel, because they did evil in the eyes of Jehovah, were given into the hand of Midian seven years; and that the sons of Israel, by reason of Midian, made to themselves caves in the mountains, and dens, and fortified places; and when Israel sowed the ground, that Midian and Amalek, and the sons of the east came up and spoiled the produce of their land; and afterwards that they were delivered of Gideon by three hundred, who lapped water with the tongue as a dog, and that they were sent home, who fell down upon the knees and drank," besides other particulars, concerning which see chap. vii. 6, 7, 8; where also all and singular things are representative of the falsification of truth, and of punishment on that account, even to their being destroyed by such things as are signified by lapping water with the tongue as a dog; but what each particular signifies in the internal sense, it would be too tedious here to explain: by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, it will be shewn in it's place. So in Habakkuk, "He hath seen and dissipated the nations, and the mountains of time were dispersed, and the hills of an age humbled themselves; I saw the tents of Cushan under affliction, the curtains of the land of Midian trembled," iii. 6, 7; speaking of the coming of the Lord, where the tents of Cushan denote the religious principles grounded in evil, and the curtains of the land of Midian the religious principles grounded in what is false.

3244. Verses 5, 6. And Abraham gave all that he had to Isaac. And to the sons of the concubines which Abraham had, Abraham gave gifts, and he sent them away from Isaac his son, while he yet lived, towards the east to the land of the east. Abraham gave all that he had to Isaac, signifies in the supreme sense all Things Divine in the Divine Rational principle: in a respective sense, the celestial things of love given to the Lord's celestial kingdom: and to the sons of the concubines—which Abraham had, Abraham gave gifts, signifies the spiritual adopted of the Lord's Divine Human [principle], that they have lots in the Lord's spiritual kingdom: and he sent them away from Isaac his son, signifies the distinction and separation of the spiritual from the celestial: whilst he was yet alive, signifies to whom he could give life: towards the east to the land of the east, signifies to the good of faith.

3245. "Abraham gave all that he had to Isaac"—that hereby are signified in the supreme sense all Things Divine in the Divine Rational principle: and in a respective sense the celestial things of love, given to the Lord's celestial kingdom, appears from the representation of Abraham, as denoting the Lord in respect to the essential Divine [principle], concerning which much has been said above; and from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Lord in respect to the Divine Rational principle, of which also we have frequently before spoken; and whereas the Lord in the internal sense is both Abraham and Isaac, and the Lord made his rational principle Divine by virtue of His own Divine [principle], hence it is, that by Abraham giving all he had to Isaac, are signified all things Divine in the Divine Rational principle: the things which precede, and those which follow, have all respect to this circumstance, viz. that in the Lord's rational principle all things were made Divine; for in the internal sense, wherever Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob are treated of, the subject relates to the Lord's Human [principle], how it was made Divine. There are two principles, which properly constitute the Human [principle], viz. the rational principle and the natural; the Lord's rational principle is represented by Isaac, but his natural by Jacob; the Lord made each Divine. How He made the rational Divine, is contained in what is said concerning Isaac, but how the natural, is contained in what is said hereafter concerning Jacob; the latter however, viz. the natural principle, could not be made Divine, before the rational was made Divine, for the former was made so by the latter; hence therefore it is, that by the above words are signified all things Divine in the Divine Rational principle. Moreover, all and singular the things, which in the internal sense treat of the Lord, treat also of His kingdom and Church, by reason that the Lord's Divine [principle] constitutes His kingdom; hence it is, that wheresoever the Lord is treated of, His kingdom is treated of also, see n. 1965; but the internal sense concerning the Lord is the supreme sense, whereas the internal sense concerning His kingdom is the respective sense; the respective sense of these words, viz. that Abraham gave all to Isaac, is, that the celestial things of love are given to the Lord's celestial kingdom; for by Isaac in the respective sense is signified the celestial kingdom, inasmuch as by the rest of Abraham's sons, viz. those which he had by Keturah, is signified the Lord's spiritual kingdom, as was shewn above; the same is also signified by Ishmael, of whom more will be said presently.

3246 "And to the sons of the concubines which Abraham had, Abraham gave gifts"—that hereby are signified the spiritual adopted of the Lord's Divine Human [principle], that they had lots in the Lord's spiritual kingdom, appears from the signification of the sons of concubines, of whom we shall speak presently; and from the representation of Abraham, as denoting the Lord's Divine Human [principle]; thus by the words, which Abraham had, is signified, that they, viz. the spiritual, were adopted of the Lord's Divine Human [principle]; and from the signification of gifts, which Abraham gave them, as denoting lots in the Lord's spiritual kingdom. From what has been occasionally shewn above concerning those who constitute the Lord's spiritual kingdom, and are called spiritual, as at n. 3235, and in other places, it may appear, that they are not sons born from the essential marriage of good and truth, but from a kind of covenant not so conjugal in its nature; they are, indeed, from the same father, but not from the same mother, that is, they are from the same Divine Good, but not from the same Divine Truth; for the celestial, as being born from the essential marriage of good and truth, possess good and thence truth, wherefore they in nowise inquire what is true, but perceive it by virtue of good: nor, in their discourse concerning truth, do they say anything further than that it is so, according to what the Lord teaches in Matthew, "Let your discourse be, yea, yea, nay, nay, for whatsoever is more than this, is of evil," v. 36; whereas the spiritual, as being born from a covenant not so conjugal, do not know from any perception what truth is, but call that true which was delivered to them as such by their parents and masters, wherefore the marriage of good and truth has no place with them; nevertheless, the truth which they thus believe is adopted of the Lord as truth, when they are in the good of life, see n. 1832. Hence then it is, that the spiritual are called the sons of concubines, and by them are meant all the sons of Keturah above mentioned, and also the sons born of Hagar, who are spoken of below, verses 12 and 18. In order that both the celestial and the spiritual might be represented in marriages formerly, it was allowed besides a wife to have also a concubine; such concubine was given to the husband by the wife, and was then called his woman (mulier), or was said to be given to him for a woman, as in the case of Hagar the Egyptian given to Abraham by Sarah, Gen. xvi. 3; and of Bilhah the handmaid, given to Jacob by Rachel, Gen. xxx. 4; and of the handmaid Silpah given to Jacob by Leah, Gen. xxx. 9; where they are called women, but in other places concubines, as Hagar the Egyptian in this verse; and as Bilhah is called, Gen. xxv. 22; and as Keturah herself also is called, 1 Chron. i. 32. The reason why these ancients had concubines besides a wife, as was the case not only with Abraham and Jacob, but also with their posterity, as with Gideon, Judges viii. 31; with Saul, 2 Sam. iii. 7; with David, 2 Sam. v. 13; chap. xv. 16; and with Solomon, 1 Kings, xi. 3, was of permission, for the sake of representation, viz. of the celestial Church by a wife, and of the spiritual Church by a concubine; the reason of the permission was, because they were persons of such a nature as to have no conjugal love, thus neither was marriage to them marriage, but only carnal copulation for the sake of begetting children, and to such might permission be granted, without doing injury to conjugal love and the covenant thence derived, but in nowise to those who are principled in good and in truth, and who are internal men or capable of becoming so; for as soon as ever man is principled in good and truth, and in things internal, such permissions cease: hence it is not allowable for Christians, as for Jews, to take to themselves a concubine with a wife, and hence this is adultery. That the spiritual are adopted of the Lord's Divine Human [principle], may be seen above, n. 2661, 2716, 2833, 2834.

3247. "And he sent them away from Isaac his son"—that hereby is signified a distinction and separation of the spiritual from the celestial, may appear from what has been said just now above, viz. that the sons of Abraham by Keturah and by Hagar the Egyptian, who are called sons of concubines, are the spiritual, and that Isaac in the respective sense denotes the celestial, see n. 3245, and that they were separated.

3248. "Whilst he was yet living"—that hereby is signified to whom he could give life, appears from the signification of the words, whilst he was yet living, or whilst he yet lived, as denoting to give life; for by Abraham is here represented the Lord as to the Divine Human [principle]; that the spiritual have life from the Lord's Divine Human [principle], may be seen n. 2661, 2716, 2833, 2834; and since they have life thence, the Lord is said to live with them; this form of speaking is usual in common discourse: hence it is that by the expression, "Whilst Abraham was yet living," is signified in the internal sense to give life: life is given to the spiritual by the good of faith, which is meant by the words which next follow.

king of Moab hath brought me out of Syria, from the mountains of the east," Numb. xxiii. 7. That Aram or Syria was the country where the sons of the east dwelt, may appear from this circumstance, that when Jacob went into Syria, he is said to have gone to the "land of the sons of the east," Gen. xxix. 1.

3250. Verses 7, 8, 9, 10. And these are the days of the years of the lives of Abraham, which he lived, an hundred years, and seventy years, and five years. And Abraham expired and died in a good old age, old and full fraught; and he was gathered to his people. And Isaac and Ishmael his sons buried him, at the cave of Machpelah, at the field of Ephron the son of Zoar the Hittite, which is upon the faces of Mamre. The field which Abraham bought of the sons of Heth; there was Abraham buried and Sarah his wife. These are the days of the years of the lives of Abraham which he lived, signifies the representative state of the Lord as to the essential Divine [principle] by Abraham; an hundred years, and seventy years, and five years, signifies the things appertaining to that state; and Abraham expired and died, signifies an end of the representation by Abraham; in a good old age, old and full fraught, signifies a new [state] of representation; and was gathered to his people, signifies that these things were concerning Abraham: and Isaac and Ishmael his sons buried him, signifies that the representation of the Lord was now taken up by Isaac and Ishmael; at the cave of Machpelah, signifies resurrection as to truth: at the field of Ephron the son of Zoar the Hittite, which is upon the faces of Mamre, signifies as to good; it also signifies the spiritual, as above, who receive truth and good from the Lord's Divine Human [principle], and are saved; the field which Abraham bought of the sons of Heth, signifies the Lord's spiritual kingdom thence; there was Abraham buried and Sarah his wife, signifies resurrection (or a raising up again).

3251. "These are the days of the years of the lives of Abraham which he lived"—that hereby is signified the representative state of the Lord as to the essential Divine [principle] by Abraham, appears from the signification of days and years, as denoting states, see n. 23, 487, 488, 493, 2788; and from the signification of lives here, as denoting also states, see n. 2904; in the present case representative states which were by Abraham; for all his life, such as it is described in the Word, was representative, the end whereof is the subject now treated of. That Abraham represented the Lord as to the essential Divine [principle], has been shewn in the explications above; to the end that he might represent, he was called by name Abraham, the letter H being inserted, which was taken out of the name Jehovah, see n. 2010. Abraham represented both the essential Divine [principle] which is called Father, and the Divine Human [principle] which is called Son, thus the Lord as to each principle, but the Divine Human [principle] which is from eternity, from which existed, and to which He reduced the Human [principle] born in time, when He glorified this latter principle: this is the representation of the Lord by Abraham.

3252. "An hundred years, and seventy years, and five years"—that hereby are signified the things appertaining to that state, may appear from this consideration, that all numbers in the Word signify things, see n. 482, 487, 575, 647, 648, 1963, 1988, 2075, 2252: thus the present number, which consequently signifies the things appertaining to the state here treated of. Whilst the mind abides merely in what is historical, it appears as if numbers, as in the present case of these relating to the years of the age of Abraham, did not involve any interior sense; nevertheless, that they do involve such a sense, is evident from all that has been shewn above concerning numbers, and may appear further from this consideration, that in number, considered merely as number, there is nothing holy, when yet there is not the smallest expression in the Word but what is holy.

3253. "And Abraham expired and died"—that hereby is signified the end of the representation by Abraham, appears from the signification of expiring and dying, as denoting to cease, or to have an end, see n. 494, in the present case an end of representation; for the whole of the life of Abraham, which is described in the Word, has no respect to Abraham, except only in the historical sense, but has respect to the Lord and His kingdom; wherefore when it is said of Abraham that he expired and died, nothing else can be signified in the Word, that is, in it's genuine sense, but that the state representative of the Lord by Abraham had an end.

3254. "In a good old age and full fraught"—that hereby is signified a new [state] of the representation, appears from the signification of old age in the internal sense, as denoting to put off what is old and to put on what is new, see n. 1854, 2198, 3016; the reason why what is new, or a new state, is what is signified by old age in the internal sense is, because with the angels, for whose use the internal sense of the Word is, there is no idea of time, consequently no idea of the things appertaining to time, as of the ages of man, viz. infancy, childhood, youth, adult age, and of old age, but instead of all these ages they have an idea of states; thus, instead of the time of infancy they have an idea of a state of innocence, instead of the time of childhood and youth, they have an idea of a state of affection of good and of truth; instead of adult age an idea of a state of intelligence, and instead of old age an idea of a state of wisdom, see n. 3183; and whereas man then passes from those things which are of time, into those things which are of life without time, and thus puts on a new state, therefore by old age, is signified what is new, and in the present case a new representative, because of the representative in regard to Abraham is predicated old age, and also old and full fraught, as may appear from what has been just now said above.

3255. "And was gathered to his people"—that hereby is signified that these things were concerning Abraham, appears from the signification of being gathered to his people, that he is no longer treated of; for to be gathered to his people is to depart from those amongst whom he was heretofore, and to pass to his own; thus in the present case it denotes to represent no longer. It was usual with the ancients to say, when any one died, that he was gathered to his fathers, or to his people, and they understood thereby that he actually came to his parents, to his relations and kinsfolk in another life; they derived this form of expression from the most ancient people, who were celestial men, and who, during their abode on earth, were at the same time with angels in heaven, and thus knew how the real case was, viz. that all who were principled in the same good, meet and are together in another life, and likewise all who are principled in the same truth; of the former they said that they were gathered to their fathers, but of the latter that they were gathered to their people; for fathers with them signified goodnesses, see n. 2803; and people signified truths, see n. 1259, 1260; they also who were of the most ancient Church, as being principled in similar good, dwell together in heaven, see n. 1115; and likewise several of those who are of the ancient Church, and were principled in similar truth, see n. 1125, 1127; moreover every man, during his life in the body, is always as to his soul in some society of spirits in another life, see n. 1277, 2379; he who is evil, in a society of infernal spirits, but he who is good, in a society of angels, thus every one in a society of such as he is in agreement with, as to good and truth, or as to what is evil and false; into this same society man comes when he dies, see n. 687. This is what was signified among the ancients by being gathered to their fathers, or being gathered to their people; as it is here said of Abraham when he expired, and of Ishmael in this same chapter, verse 17; and of Isaac, Gen. xxxv. 29; and of Jacob, Gen. xlix. 29, 33; and of Aaron, Numb. xx. 24, 26; and of Moses, Numb. xxvii. 13; chap. xxxi. 2; Deut. xxxii. 50; and of the first generation which entered into the land of Canaan, Judges ii. 10. But in the internal sense of the Word, where the subject treated of is concerning the life of any one, as being representative, then by his being gathered to his people is signified, that he is no longer treated of, as was said above.

3256. "And Isaac and Ishmael his sons buried him"—that hereby is signified that the representation of the Lord was now taken up by Isaac and Ishmael, may appear from the signification of burying. That to be buried is to be raised up and rise again, was shewn, n. 2916, 2917. In the present passage, inasmuch as the subject treated of is concerning the representation of the Lord by Abraham, in that this state had an end, and the representation was now beginning by Isaac and Ishmael, therefore by burying is here signified the raising up again of that state, the significations of words being determined in application to the things whereof they are predicated. With representatives in the Word the case is this, that they are continual, although they appear interrupted by the deaths of those who represented; their deaths, however, do not signify any interruption, but a continuation; therefore also their burials signify the representative raised up again and continued in another.

3257. "At the cave of Machpelah"—that hereby is signified resurrection as to truth; and at the field of Ephron the son of Zohar the Hittite which is upon the faces of Mamre, that hereby is signified as to good: and that it also signifies the spiritual, as above, who receive truth and good, and are saved from the Lord's Divine Human [principle]; also the field which Abraham bought of the sons of Heth, that it signifies the Lord's spiritual kingdom thence derived; and that by Abraham being buried there, and Sarah his wife, is signified resurrection (a raising up again), may appear from what was said and shewn above concerning the signification of all these expressions, chap. xxiii. n. 2913, 2928, 2968, 2969, 2970, 2971, 2975, 2980; and concerning the signification of being buried, n. 2916, 2917.

3258. Verse 11. And it came to pass after the death of Abraham, that God blessed Isaac his son; and Isaac dwelt with Beer-la-hai-roi. It came to pass after the death of Abraham, signifies after the state and time of the representation of the Lord by Abraham: that God blessed Isaac his son, signifies the beginning of the representation of the Lord by Isaac: and Isaac dwelt with Beer-la-hai-roi, signifies the Lord's Divine Rational principle in Divine Light.

3259. "It came to pass after the death of Abraham"—that hereby is signified after the state and time of the representation of the Lord by Abraham, appears from the signification of dying, when the subject treated of is concerning the representative life of any one, as denoting an end of representation, concerning which see above, n. 3253; hence in the present case, after the death of Abraham signifies after the state and time of the representation of the Lord by Abraham.

3260. "God blessed Isaac his son"—that hereby is signified the beginning of representation by Isaac, may appear from the signification of God blessing; when any work was to be begun, it was customary with the ancients to say, may God bless, and thereby was signified the same thing as by this votive expression, may the work be prosperous and happy; hence it is, that in a more remote sense, by God blessing, as by the votive expression, may the work be prosperous and happy, is signified a beginning, in the present case a beginning of representation by Isaac, because it immediately follows after the end thereof by Abraham, signified by his death.

3261. "And Isaac dwelt with Beer-la-hai-roi"—that hereby is signified the Lord's Divine Rational principle in Divine Light, appears from the signification of dwelling as denoting to live, see n. 1293; and from the signification of Beer-la-hai-roi, as denoting Divine Good rational born from essential Divine Truth, see n. 3194; hence the proximate sense is, that the Divine Rational principle lived or was in Divine Good which was born of essential Divine Truth; but it was not there, wherefore it is not said in Beer-la-hai-roi, but with Beer-la-hai-roi, that is, if it be interpreted, "With the fountain of him that liveth and seeth me," which is with that Divine Good; for Isaac dwelt in the land of the south, according to what is written in the foregoing chapter, verse 62, where are these words, "and Isaac came from coming to Beer-la-hai-roi, and he dwelt in the land of the south;" and whereas there by the land of the south is signified Divine Light thence derived, see n. 3195; therefore here also nothing else is signified.

3263. "These are the nativities of Ishmael the son of Abraham"—that hereby are signified derivations of the spiritual Church represented by Ishmael, appears from the signification of nativities, as denoting derivations of faith, consequently of the Church, see n. 1145, 1255, 1330; and from the representation of Ishmael, as denoting those who are rational, and who are of the Lord's spiritual Church, see n. 2078, 2691, 2699; and from the signification of the sons of Abraham, as denoting those who are principled in truth from the Lord, for by sons are signified truths, see n. 489, 491, 533, 1147, 2623; and by Abraham is represented the Lord, even as to the Divine Human [principle], see n. 3251; from which principle the spiritual derive truth and good, see n. 2661, 2716, 2833, 2834. As to what concerns the Lord's spiritual Church, it is to be noted, that it extends over the whole globe, not being limited to those who have the Word, and who thereby know the Lord, and some particular truths of faith; but it is also amongst those who have not the Word, and who therefore, are altogether ignorant of the Lord, and consequently do not know any truths of faith, (for all the truths of faith have respect unto the Lord), that is, it is amongst the Gentiles remote from the Church; for there are several amongst them, who know by rational illumination that there is one God, that He created all things, and that He preserves all things, likewise that from Him cometh all good, consequently all truth, and that similitude with Him makes man blessed; and who moreover live according to their religious tenets, in love to that God and in charity towards their neighbour; from the affection of good doing works of charity, and from the affection of truth worshiping the Supreme. They who are such amongst the Gentiles, are those who are in the Lord's spiritual Church; and although they are ignorant of the Lord during their abode in the world, still they have in themselves the worship and tacit acknowledgment of Him, when they are in good, for in all good the Lord is present; wherefore also these in another life easily acknowledge Him, and more so than such Christians, as are not so principled in good, and yet receive the truth of faith respecting the Lord, as may appear from what was said, n. 2589 to 2604, concerning the state and lot of the nations and people out of the Church, in another life, as made known from experience. The natural illumination which they have, contains in it a spiritual principle, for without a spiritual principle, which is from the Lord, such things could never be acknowledged. Hence then it may appear what Ishmael is, consequently what the Ishmaelites are, in a representative sense, viz. those of the Lord's spiritual Church, who as to life are principled in simple good, and therefore as to doctrine are principled in natural truth; such also are signified by the Ishmaelites, in the following passage concerning Joseph, "Lo, a troop of Ishmaelites came from Gilead, carrying wax, resin, and sweet oil, going to carry it down into Egypt," Gen. xxxvii. 25; where Ishmaelites denote those who are principled in simple good, as is the case with the well-disposed Gentiles; camels carrying wax, resin, and sweet oil, denote the interior goods of such; the like is signified by the Ishmaelites spoken of in verse 28, of the same chapter, and in chap. xxxix. 1.; and also in the book of Judges, where it is written, "That at Gideon's request every one shall give the ear-rings of his prey, for they had ear-rings of gold, because they were Ishmaelites," chap. viii. 24; where ear-rings of gold signify those things which appertain to simple good, see n. 3103.

3264. "Whom Hagar the Egyptian, Sarah's handmaid bare to Abraham"—that hereby is signified the nativity of the spiritual man from Divine Influx into the affection of sciences, appears from the signification of bearing (or bringing forth), as denoting to exist, see n. 2621, 2629 ; and from the representation of Hagar the Egyptian, as denoting the life of the exterior man, see n. 1896, 1909 ; and from the signification of handmaid, as denoting the affection of sciences and knowledges which appertain to the exterior man, see n. 1895, 2691 ; she is called Sarah's handmaid, because by Sarah is represented the Divine Truth of the Lord, to which the affection of sciences and of the knowledges of truth is subordinate ; and inasmuch as by Ishmael is represented the spiritual man, it is evident that by these words, "Whom Hagar the Egyptian, Sarah's handmaid, bare to Abraham," is signified the nativity of the spiritual man from Divine Influx into the affection of sciences. That man's rational principle is thus born, may be seen, n. 1895, 1896, 1902, 1910, 2094, 2557, 3030, 3074 ; consequently that the spiritual principle is thus born, for this principle is not given except in the rational principle, wherefore the spiritual man and the rational is almost the same, the spiritual differing from each other only according to the quality of reason and of life thence derived ; that their nativity or regeneration is from Divine Influx into the affection of knowledges, may be seen n. 1555, 1904, 2046, 2063, 2189, 2657, 2675, 2691, 2697, 2979. See also what was said and shewn above concerning Ishmael, viz. that by him was represented the Lord's first rational principle which was not yet Divine, n. 1893 ; that afterwards the truly rational or spiritual were represented by him, n. 2078, 2691 ; thus the Lord's spiritual Church, n. 2699.

3265. Verses 13, 14, 15, 16. And these are the names of the sons of Ishmael, in their names, according to their nativities ; the first-born of Ishmael Nebaioth, and Kedar, and Abdeel, and Mibsam. And Mishmah, and Dumah, and Massah. Hadar and Thema, Jetur, Naphish, and Kedmah. These are the sons of Ishmael, and these their names, in their villages, and in their castles ; twelve princes of their people. These are the names of the sons of Ishmael, signifies the qualities of their doctrinals : in their names, according to their nativities, signifies interior qualities according to the derivations of faith : the first-born of Ishmael Nebaioth, and Kedar, and Abdeel, and Mibsam ; and Mishmah, and Dumah, and Massa ; Hadar, and Thema, Jetur, Naphish, and Kedmah, signifies all things appertaining to the spiritual Church, especially amongst the Gentiles : these are the sons of Ishmael, and these their names, signifies doctrinals and their quality : in their villages, signifies the external things of the Church : in their castles, signifies internal things : twelve princes of their people, signifies all primary truths of that spiritual Church.

3266. "These are the names of the sons of Ishmael"—that hereby are signified the qualities of their doctrinals, viz. of the spiritual, appears from the signification of name, as denoting quality, see n. 144, 145, 1754, 1896, 2009, 2724, 3006; and from the signification of sons, as denoting truths, and also doctrinals, see n. 489, 491, 533, 1147, 2623; and from the representation of Ishmael, as denoting the spiritual, see above, n. 3263.

3267. "In their names, according to their nativities"—that hereby are signified interior qualities according to the derivations of faith, appears from the signification of name, as denoting quality, or of names, as denoting qualities, see above, n. 3266, in the present case interior qualities, because it is said, "These are the names of the sons of Ishmael in their names," where names in the former place denote general qualities, but in the latter place qualities which are in the former, or which are as to the former, that is, interior qualities; and because these qualities are according to the derivations of faith, which are signified by these words, "According to their nativities;" that nativities are derivations of faith, consequently of the Church, may be seen n. 1145, 1255, 1330, 3263. With the Lord's spiritual Church the case is this, that it is dispersed over the whole globe, and that it is every where various according to articles of belief or the truths of faith; these varieties are the derivations which are here signified by nativities, which exist as well together at the same time as successively. The Lord's spiritual kingdom itself in the heavens is also thus circumstanced, viz. it is various according to what appertains to faith, insomuch that there is not one society, nor even one in a society, who, in those things which relate to the truth of faith, is entirely agreed with others as to his ideas, see n. 3241. Nevertheless the Lord's spiritual kingdom in the heavens is one; the reason is, because all account charity as principal, for charity constitutes the spiritual church, and not faith, unless you say that faith is charity; whosoever is principled in charity, he loves his neighbour, and with regard to his dissenting from him in matters of belief, this he excuses, provided only that he lives in goodnesses and truth; he does not even condemn the well-disposed Gentiles, although they are ignorant of the Lord, and know not any truth of faith; for he who lives in charity, that is, in good, receives truths from the Lord, such as suit with his good, and good Gentiles receive such truths, as in another life may be bended into truths of faith, see n. 2599, 2600, 2601, 2602, 2603: but he who is not principled in charity, that is, who does not live in good, can in no wise receive any truth; he may indeed know what is true, but it is not implanted in his life; thus he may have it indeed in his mouth, but not in his heart; for truth cannot be conjoined with evil, wherefore also they who know truths, which are called articles of belief, and do not live in charity, or in good, although they are in the Church, as being born there, still they are not of the Church, inasmuch as they have nothing of the Church in them, that is, nothing of good, to which truth may be conjoined.

3268. "The first-born of Ishmael, Nebaioth, and Kedar, and Abdeel, and Mibsam, and Mishmah, Dumah, and Massa, Hadar, and Thema, Jetur, Naphish, and Kedmah"—that hereby are signified all things appertaining to the spiritual Church, especially amongst the Gentiles, appears from the representation of those who are here named, some of whom are mentioned in other parts of the Word, particularly the prophetical, as Nebaioth, Kedar, Dumah, and Thema, and there signify such things as appertain to the spiritual Church, especially amongst the Gentiles; and it is further evident from this consideration, that they are in number twelve, and by twelve are signified all things appertaining to faith, consequently to the Church, on which subject we shall speak presently; and therefore it is said in verse 16, that they were twelve princes of their peoples. That by Nebaioth and Kedar are represented those things which appertain to the spiritual Church, especially amongst the Gentiles, is evident from these words in Isaiah, "A company of camels shall cover thee, the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah, all shall come from Sheba; they shall carry gold and frankincense, and shall announce the praises of Jehovah: all the flock of Kedar shall be gathered together to thee; the rams of Nebaioth shall minister to thee, they shall ascend my altar to be well pleasing," lx. 6, 7; speaking in the supreme sense concerning the Lord, and in the respective sense concerning His kingdom; the flock of Kedar denotes spiritual good; that flock is spiritual good, may be seen n. 343, 415, 2566; the rams of Nebaioth denote spiritual truth; that ram is spiritual truth, may be seen, n. 2833. That Kedar is Arabia, is evident from the following passages, and that Arabia was named Kedar may appear from this consideration, that what are mentioned in these two verses are lands or nations, all named from the sons and grandsons of Abraham, as Midian, Ephah, Sheba, spoken of above, verses 2, 3, 4, and so in the present verse, Kedar and Nebaioth. So in Ezechiel, "Arabia and all the princes of Kedar, these are the traders of thy hand, in lambs, and rams, and he-goats, in these are thy traders," xxvii. 21; speaking of Tyre, that is, of those who are principled in the knowledges of goodness and truth; that Tyre denotes those, may be seen, n. 1201; Arabia denotes spiritual good, the princes of Kedar spiritual truths; lambs, rams, and he-goats are spiritual goods and truths. So in Jeremiah, "Arise, ascend to Kedar, and lay waste the sons of the east, their tents and their flocks they shall take, their curtains, and all their vessels, and their camels, they shall take to themselves," xlix. 28, 29; speaking of the vastation of the spiritual Church understood by Kedar and the sons of the east, where tents and flocks denote the goods of that Church, and curtains and vessels denote it's truths; the holy things of worship are what are signified by tents and flocks, and by curtains and vessels, but the holy things of worship have all of them relation to good and truth. They, however, who are not principled in truth, because not in good, are those who are represented by the Arabians and the Kedars in the wilderness, as in Isaiah, "Babel shall not be inhabited for ever, the Arabian shall not tarry there," xiii. 20: again, "Let the wilderness and the cities thereof lift up, the villages which Kedar inhabits," xlii. 10, 12: so in Jeremiah, "In the ways thou hast set for them, as the Arabian in the wilderness," iii. 2: and in David, "Woe is me, because I sojourn at Mesech, I tarry with the tents of Kedar," Psalm cxx. 5: and in Isaiah, "In the forest in Arabia ye shall pass the night, O troops of Dedan; bring ye water to meet him that thirsteth, ye inhabitants of the land of Thema, with the bread thereof prevent him that wandereth, because they shall wander before swords, before the drawn sword, before the bended bow, and before the weight of war; for thus has the Lord said unto me, yet a year, according to the year of a mercenary, and all the GLORY OF KEDAR shall be consumed, and the residue of the number of bows of the mighty sons of Kedar," xxi. 13, 14; where to pass the night in the forest of Arabia, denotes to be vastated as to truth; the troops of Dedan denote those who are principled in knowledges, see n. 3240, 3241; the inhabitants of the land of Thema denote those who are in simple good, such as the well-disposed Gentiles are principled in; that these were so called from Themah the son of Ishmael, is evident; Kedar denotes those who are in simple truth; of whom it is said, that they shall wander before swords, and before the weight of war, by which is signified that they will not sustain temptation-combats, because they are no longer principled in good. So in Jeremiah, "Pass over to the isles of Chittim and see, and send to Kedar, and attend diligently, and see whether it was ever done like this, whether a nation hath changed gods, and they are not gods," ii. 10; where the isles of Chittim denote those who are more remote from worship, that is, the Gentiles, who are principled in simple good, and thence in natural truth, see n. 1156, 1158; that Kedar also denotes such, is evident. Again, in the same prophet, "I have received a cup from the hand of Jehovah, and have made all nations to drink, to whom Jehovah hath sent me, both Dedan, and Thema, and Buz, and all that are cut off the corner, and all the kings of Arabia, and all the kings of the west, that dwell in the wilderness," xxv. 17, 23, 24; speaking also of the vastation of the spiritual Church, where amongst many others are mentioned Thema and Arabia, whence it is evident, that by Thema, as by Arabia, are signified those who are of the spiritual Church; but to Arabia, are attributed kings and also cities, whereas to Kedar are attributed princes and villages. Besides these Duma is also mentioned in Isaiah, chap. xxi. 11. The ground and reason why by these nations are signified the things appertaining to the spiritual Church is, because the ancient Church, which was spiritual, was amongst them, see n. 1238, 2385; but their doctrinals and rituals were various, nevertheless they formed one Church, because they made not faith, but charity essential; in process of time however, as charity ceased, even that [principle or property] of the Church, which was amongst them, became none, nevertheless there still remained a representative of the Church by them, with variety according to that [principle or property] of the Church which had been amongst them; hence it is, that where-soever these nations are named in the Word, they signify, not these nations, but only that [principle or property] of the Church in general which had existed amongst them.

3271. "In their castles"—that hereby are signified things internal, appears from the signification of castles, as denoting the internal things of faith, in the present case of the Church, because they are especially predicated of the Gentiles, who are not in possession of the truth of faith, but of rational and natural truth; these truths are called castles, when the truths of faith are called cities. In the original tongue, these expressions, which signify villages and castles, signify also courts and palaces, and courts in like manner are the external things of the Church, and palaces the internal.

3272. "Twelve princes of their peoples"—that hereby are signified all the primary [truths or principles] of that spiritual Church, appears from the signification of twelve, as denoting all the things of faith, or of the Church, see n. 577, 2089, 2129, 2130; and from the signification of princes, as denoting primary [truths or principles], see n. 1482, 2089; and from the signification of people, as denoting those who are principled in truths, see n. 1259, 1260, consequently those who are of the spiritual Church, for they are said to be principled in truths. That all numbers in the Word signify things, may manifestly appear from the number twelve, which so often occurs; this number, wheresoever it is written in the Word, signifies all; as the twelve tribes in the Old Testament, and the twelve Apostles in the New, signify all things of faith, consequently all things of the Church; so in the present case, twelve princes signify all the primary [truths or principles] of that Church which is represented by so many sons of Ishmael. That the number twelve has such signification, may appear from what was adduced in the passages above cited, and also from the following passages in the Word, "I heard the number of those who were sealed out of every tribe of Israel; of the tribe of Judah were sealed twelve thousand; of the tribe of Reuben were sealed twelve thousand; of the tribe of Gad were sealed twelve thousand," and so forth, Apoc. vii. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8; where by the twelve thousand sealed out of every tribe, nothing else is signified than that all who are principled in faith, that is, in the good thereof, are saved. Again, "A woman encompassed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and on her head a crown of twelve stars," Apoc. xii. 1; where woman denotes the Church, see n. 252, 253; the sun denotes celestial love, the moon spiritual love, see n. 30 to 38, 1529, 1530, 2441, 2495; twelve stars denote all things of faith; that stars are the knowledges of good and of truth, which appertain to faith, see n. 2495, 2849. Again, "The holy city New Jerusalem, having twelve gates, and above the gates twelve angels; and names written, which are of the twelve tribes of the sons of Israel; the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb; he measured the city in furlongs twelve thousand; and he measured the wall thereof, an hundred and forty-four cubits (twelve times twelve), which is the measure of a man, that is, of an angel: the twelve gates were twelve pearls," Apoc. xxi. 12, 14, 16, 17, 21; where by the holy city nothing else is signified but the Lord's spiritual kingdom: and by the gates, the wall, and the foundations, are signified the things which appertain to charity and faith, all of which are expressed by twelve so often mentioned. That neither twelve tribes are here meant, nor twelve apostles, may be plain to every one. Again, "In the midst of the street thereof and of the river, on this side and on that was the tree of life, bearing twelve fruits, according to every month yielding it's fruit," Apoc. xxii. 2; where twelve fruits are all the things of charity; so in Matthew, "Jesus said, verily I say unto you, that ye who have followed Me in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit on the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel," xix. 28; where by apostles are not meant apostles, nor by thrones thrones, nor by tribes tribes, but all things appertaining to faith, see n. 2129. Moreover in the Word of the Old Testament, where mention is made of twelve tribes, it signifies all things relating to the Church: the case is the same in regard to the twelve stones according to the names of the twelve tribes of Israel, in the urim and thumim, Exod. xxviii. 21; and with the twelve breads of proposition (the shew-bread) set in order on the table, Levit. xxiv. 5, 6; and in other instances. That also all things appertaining to faith are contained in the twelve sons of Jacob or Israel, will be shewn by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, when we come to treat hereafter of the xxixth and xxxth chapters.

3273. Verses 17, 18. These are the years of the lives of Ishmael, an hundred years, and thirty years, and seven years; and he expired and died, and was gathered to his people. And they resided from Havilah even to Shur, which is upon the faces of Egypt, in coming to Ashur; he fell upon the faces of all his brethren. These are the years of the lives of Ishmael, signifies the representative state of the Lord's spiritual kingdom by Ishmael: an hundred years, thirty years, and seven years, signifies the things appertaining to that state: and he expired and died, signifies an end of the representation by Ishmael: and was gathered to his people, signifies that these particulars are concerning Ishmael: and they resided from Havilah even to Shur which is upon the faces of Egypt, in coming to Ashur, signifies the extension of intelligence: he fell upon the faces of all his brethren, signifies contentions respecting truth, but that he was superior.

3274. "These are the years of the lives of Ishmael"—that hereby is signified the representative state of the Lord's spiritual kingdom by Ishmael, appears from the signification of years and of lives, as here denoting representative states, see above, n. 3251; and from the representation of Ishmael, as denoting the Lord's spiritual kingdom, see n. 2699, 3263, 3268.

3275. "An hundred years, and thirty years, and seven years"—that hereby are signified the things appertaining to that state, may appear from what was said above, n. 3252, concerning the age of Abraham.

3276. "And he expired and died"—that hereby is signified an end of the representation by Ishmael, appears also from what was said above, n. 3253, where the same words occur, and the internal sense is the same. In like manner, that by being gathered to his people is signified, that these particulars are concerning Ishmael, may be seen, n. 3255.

3277. "And they resided from Havilah even to Shur, which is upon the faces of Egypt, in coming to Ashur"—that hereby is signified the extension of intelligence; and that by falling on the faces of all his brethren, are signified contentions about truth, but that he was superior, appears from what was said, n. 115, 1951, where these expressions are explained.

3278. Verses 19, 20. And these are the nativities of Isaac the son of Abraham; Abraham begat Isaac. And Isaac was a son of forty years in taking to himself for a woman Rebecca the daughter of Bethuel, the Aramæan, of Padan-Aram, the sister of Laban the Aramæan. These are the nativities of Isaac the son of Abraham, signifies the Lord's Divine Rational [principle] from which was derived the Divine Natural [principle]; Abraham begat Isaac, signifies the Divine Rational [principle] originating in the essential Divine [principle]: and Isaac was a son of forty years, signifies the rational principle made Divine through the Lord's own proper power by temptation-combats; in taking to himself for a woman Rebecca, signifies the conjunction of Divine Truth; the daughter of Bethuel the Aramæan of Padan-Aram, the sister of Laban the Aramæan, signifies quality and state.

3279. "These are the nativities of Isaac the son of Abraham"—that hereby is signified the Lord's Divine Rational principle from which was derived the Divine Natural principle, appears from the signification of nativities, as denoting derivations, see n. 1145, 1255, 1330, viz. derivations of faith, where faith is the subject treated of, and derivations of the Church, where the Church is the subject treated of, as above, the derivations of the spiritual Church are denoted by the nativities of Ishmael, see n. 3263; but in the present case, inasmuch as nativities are predicated of the Lord, therefore Divine Nativities are what are meant, viz. the birth of the Divine Rational [principle] from the essential Divine [principle], which is signified by Isaac being begotten of Abraham, as the birth of the Divine Natural [principle] from the Divine Rational is signified by Esau and Jacob being begotten of Isaac, for by Esau and Jacob is represented the Lord's Divine Natural [principle], by Esau that principle as to good, and by Jacob that principle as to truth, which is the subject treated of in what now follows; this is what is here signified by nativities.

3280. "Abraham begat Isaac"—that hereby is signified the Divine Rational [principle] originating in the essential Divine [principle], appears from the representation of Abraham, as denoting the essential Divine [principle]; and from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Divine Rational [principle], on which subjects much has been said above.

3281. "And Isaac was a son of forty years"—that hereby is signified the rational [principle] made Divine through the Lord's own proper power by temptation-combats, appears from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Divine Rational [principle], concerning which see above; and from the signification of forty, as denoting temptations, see n. 730, 862; and from the signification of years, as denoting states, see n. 23, 487, 488, 493, 893, 2788; hence the internal sense of these words is, that the Lord made His rational [principle] Divine even as to truth, by temptation-combats, thus of His own proper power; that the Lord, of His own proper power, by temptations admitted upon Himself, made all that was Human in Himself Divine, was shewn above, n. 1616, 1663, 1668, 1690, 1787, 2083, 2523, 2632, 2776, 3030, 3043, 3141.

3282. "In taking to himself for a woman, Rebecca"—that hereby is signified the conjunction of Divine Truth, appears from the representation of Rebecca, as denoting Divine Truth, adjoined to Divine Good in the rational principle, the birth whereof from the natural man was treated of in the foregoing chapter.

3283. "The daughter of Bethuel the Aramæan of Padan-Aram, the sister of Laban the Aramæan"—that hereby is signified quality and state, appears from the representation of Bethuel and Laban, and also from the signification of Aram and Padan-Aram, as denoting those things which involve the birth of Divine Truth represented by Rebecca as to quality and state; but what is represented by each, viz. by Bethuel and Laban, and what is signified by Aram or Syria, was explained in the foregoing chapter. The reason why they are here again mentioned, is, because in what follows, the Lord's natural principle is treated of, which principle could not be made Divine until truth was adjoined to His rational principle, and thus made Divine; for influx into the natural principle must needs be from the Divine Good of the rational principle through the Divine Truth therein, inasmuch as all man's natural life, in respect to knowing and acting intelligently, is thence derived; for the rational principle is what disposes to order all things in the natural, and according to such orderly arrangement views the things contained therein at pleasure, the rational principle being like superior vision, which in taking a view of the scientifics of the natural man, looks down as it were into a plane beneath itself; the light of that vision is the light of truth, but the origin of the light is from good in the rational principle: more however will be said on this subject in what follows.

which is the Son, with the Divine [principle] which is the Father : on account of the woman because she was barren, signifies that as yet the Divine Natural [principle] was not : and Jehovah was intreated for her, signifies effect : and Rebecca his woman conceived, signifies that [the effect] was from the Divine Truth as a mother : and the sons struggled together in the midst of her, signifies combat concerning which : and she said, if so, for what is this I, signifies straitness : and she went to ask Jehovah, signifies a state of communication : and Jehovah said unto her, signifies perception from the Divine [principle] : two nations are in thy womb, signifies the natural principle as to interior and exterior good, which is conception : and two people shall be separated from thy bowels, signifies that thence truth is derived : and people shall prevail over people, signifies, that at first truth shall be superior to the good of truth : and the greater shall serve the lesser, signifies that the good of truth shall be inferior for a time.

3285. "Isaac prayed to Jehovah"—that hereby is signified communication of the Divine [principle], which is the Son, with the Divine [principle] which is the Father, appears from the signification of praying, as denoting to communicate, for prayer is nothing else but communication ; and from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Divine Rational principle ; the Divine [principle], which is the Son, is Isaac, or the rational principle when truth is conjoined to it ; but the Divine [principle], which is the Father, is here Jehovah : This communication was in the Lord, for the Father was in the Son, and the Son in the Father, John xiv. 10, 11.

3286. "On account of his woman, because she was barren"—that hereby is signified that as yet the natural principle was not, appears from the signification of woman, as denoting^a Divine Truth, conjoined to good of the rational principle, which truth, it was shewn in the preceding chapter, is represented by Rebecca ; and from the signification of being barren, as denoting that as yet the natural principle was not ; for the case herein is this ; the Divine Natural principle had its existence from the Divine Good of the rational principle as a father, and from the Divine Truth therein as a mother ; when as yet the Divine Natural principle was not, then the truth of the rational principle is said to be barren, which is here described by the woman being barren. Thus it is in the case of man : during his regeneration, good is insinuated from the Lord into his rational principle, that is, good-will towards his neighbour, and to this good-will or good is adjoined truth from the natural man ; this being effected, the natural principle is not as yet regenerated, which may be known from this circumstance, that there often arises combat between the internal or rational man and the external or natural man, and so long as there is combat, the natural principle is not regenerated; and whilst the natural principle is not regenerated, the rational as to truth is barren; thus it is in general, and in like manner in every particular wherein the rational principle dissents from the natural, the rational principle in that particular is said, as to truth, to be barren: the work of regeneration is employed chiefly in this, that the natural man may correspond to the rational, not only in general, but also in every particular, and the natural man is reduced to correspondence of the Lord by the rational principle, in that good is insinuated into the rational principle, and in this good as in ground, truths are implanted, and afterwards by rational truths the natural principle is reduced to obedience, and when it obeys then it corresponds; and so far as it corresponds, so far man is regenerated.

3287. "And Jehovah was intreated for her"—that hereby is signified effect, may appear without explication, because when Jehovah is intreated, then prayer comes to pass or is efficacious.

3288. "And Rebecca his woman conceived"—that hereby is signified that [the effect] was from Divine Truth as a mother, appears from the representation of Rebecca, as denoting Divine Truth of the rational principle, concerning which see the preceding chapter; and from the signification of conceiving, as denoting the first beginning of the birth of the Divine Natural principle as from a mother; for, as was just now shewn above, the Divine Natural principle, has it's birth from the Divine Good of the rational principle, as from a father, and from the Divine Truth of the rational principle, as from a mother. That this is the case, is known scarcely to any one, and the less so, because few know that the rational principle is distinct from the natural; nor is this known to any but those who are truly rational, nor are any truly rational but they who are regenerated of the Lord; the unregenerated do not comprehend this, for with them the rational principle is the same as the natural.

3289. "And the sons struggled together in the midst of her,"—that hereby is signified combat, concerning which, appears from the signification of struggling, as denoting to combat; and from the signification of sons in this passage, as denoting the natural principle as to good and as to truth; for that Esau and Jacob, who are the sons here spoken of, represented the Lord's Divine Natural principle, Esau as to good, and Jacob as to truth, will appear from what follows. This struggling or combat is also treated of in this chapter, and it is a struggle or combat concerning priority, viz. whether good or truth be prior, or, what is the same thing, whether charity which relates to good, or faith which relates to truth, be prior; this point has been matter of combat amongst several in the spiritual Church from the earliest times; and inasmuch as this priority is treated of in what follows, therefore it is said, that the sons struggled together in the midst of her, and by these words is signified combat, concerning which.

3290. "And she said, if so, for what is this I?"—that hereby is signified straitness, may appear from the sense of these words, as denoting straitness, and indeed a straitness by reason of the struggle, that is, the combat, between the brothers; If so, signifies if they combated on this account; for what is this, signifies that they ought not to combat on this account; I, or for what am I, signifies, that if they combated on this account, they would not receive influx from rational truth; hence came straitness.

3291. "And she went to ask Jehovah"—that hereby is signified a state of communication, appears from the signification of asking, as denoting communication, when it is spoken concerning the Lord; for it was Jehovah in Himself who was asked; in the historical sense, however, this communication is expressed by praying, see n. 3285, and the state of communication by asking.

3293. "Two nations are in thy womb"—that hereby is signified the natural principle as to interior and exterior good, which is conception, appears from the signification of nations, as denoting goods, especially goods of the Church, see n. 1159, 1258, 1260, 1416, 1849. That in the present case are signified goods which are in the natural principle, appears from this consideration, that Esau and Jacob, who were then in the womb, represent the Lord's Divine Natural principle, as will be made very manifest from what follows, where they are treated of. The natural principle like the rational consists of good and truth; good in the natural principle is whatever appertains to natural affections, and is called delightful, but truth is whatever appertains to science, and is called scientific; it is necessary that these two be in the natural principle in order to its existence; what is scientific, considered abstractedly by itself from what is delightful, which is grounded in affection, is not any thing, for the natural principle has its life from what is delightful, deriving thence the very power and capacity of knowing anything; but what is delightful, which is the good of the natural principle without the scientific, is somewhat, yet it is only somewhat of a vital principle, such as exists with infants: in order therefore that the natural principle be human, it must needs consist both of good and truth, the one being perfected by the other; but it has essential life from good. As to what regards this good, which is here treated of, it is two-fold, interior and exterior; the interior communicates with the interior man, that is, with the rational principle, the exterior with the external man, that is, with what appertains to the body, constituting life in the external senses, and also in the actions; without a communication on both parts it is impossible for man to live either in regard to the faculty of reason, or to the body. It is this interior communication which remains with man after death, and in another world constitutes his natural life, for a spirit has also natural life, inasmuch as his spiritual life is terminated in what is natural as in its ultimate plane; for man cannot immediately after death think spiritually, except from such things as appertain to his natural principle; but it is this exterior communication which man has during his life in the body, which nevertheless ceases by the death of the body: from these considerations then it may appear what is signified by two nations being in the womb, viz. the natural principle as to interior and exterior good. In the womb signifies, in the internal sense, conception, therefore it is here said that it denotes conception.

3294. "And two people shall be separated from thy bowels"—that hereby is signified that hence truth has birth, appears from the signification of people, as denoting truth, see n. 1259, 1260; and from the signification of being separated from the bowels, as denoting to have birth thence. In the Word, where-soever the subject treated of is concerning nativity, in regard to the birth from the mother, it is said to come forth from the womb or belly, but in regard to the father, it is said to be separated from the bowels; for the womb and the loins are predicated of the things appertaining to love, that is, to good, but when mention is made of being separated from the bowels, the birth of truth is signified; therefore in the present case, when good is treated of, it is said that two nations are in thy womb, but when truth is treated of, it is said two people shall be separated from thy bowels, and hereby is signified, in the internal sense, the birth of truth from good. Two people are spoken of, because as good is interior and exterior, see n. 3293, so also is truth; interior truth in the natural principle is that which is conjoined to interior good of the natural principle, but exterior truth is that which is conjoined to exterior good of the natural principle; the interior truth is called natural truth, but the exterior is called sensual truth. How the case is in respect to these two kinds of truth, will appear, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, from what follows, where the subject treated of is concerning Jacob, for by Jacob both those kinds of truths are represented.

3295. "And people shall prevail over people"—that hereby is signified that at first truth shall be superior to the good of truth, appears from the signification of people, as denoting truth, see above, n. 3291 ; and from the signification of prevailing over as denoting to be superior : the people mentioned in the first place signifies truth, but the people mentioned in the second place signifies the good of truth ; the good of truth is the good which exists from truth, and which in its first existence is truth, but is called good, because it appears as good ; hence it is that by people is also signified this good, which is called the good of truth first existing. In order to acquire some idea of this good, it is to be observed, that man, before he is regenerated, does good from a principle of truth, but after he is regenerated, he does good from a principle of good ; or to make it more clear, before man is regenerated, he does good from the understanding, but after he is regenerated, he does good from the will ; the good therefore, which is from the understanding, is not in itself good, but truth, whereas the good, which is from the will, is good. As for example, he who does not honour his parents, but from the commandment of the decalogue is taught to honour them, is influenced by the commandment in the honour which he first pays them ; this honour, however, as being grounded in the commandment, is not good in itself, because it does not proceed from a principle of love, but either from obedience to the law, or from the fear of punishment ; nevertheless it is called the good of truth, yet in its first existence it is truth, inasmuch as at this time the man does not do good but truth ; whereas when he honours his parents from a principle of love, then it is good : the same is true in other instances.

3296. "And the greater shall serve the lesser"—that hereby is signified that the good of truth should be inferior for a time, appears from a signification of greater, as denoting good ; and from the signification of serving, as denoting to be inferior ; and from the signification of lesser, as denoting truth : how this case is, may appear from what follows, being described by Esau and Jacob, for, as was observed, by Esau is represented good, by Jacob, truth. The struggling or combat concerning priority and dominion is described, in the internal sense, by Jacob's depriving Esau of his birth-right (primogeniture), and also of his blessing ; nevertheless, that this was done only for a time, is evident from Isaac's prophetic declaration concerning Esau, "Upon thy sword thou shalt live, and shalt serve thy brother, and it shall come to pass when thou shalt have dominion, thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck," Gen. xxvii. 40. That the expressions contained in the verse, as above explained, have an internal sense, and that without an internal sense, it cannot be known what they signify, viz. what is signified by two nations being in the womb, and by two people being separated from the bowels, and by people prevailing over people, and the greater serving the lesser, is evident ; that these expressions, however, signify what has been said above, will appear manifestly from what follows, where the same subject is much treated of. Moreover, it can scarcely be believed that such a spiritual signification is involved in these expressions, unless it be known how the case is in respect to good and truth, and how one is born from the other, and how man undergoes a change of state during regeneration. In the internal sense indeed the Lord is treated of, and in the present case how He made His natural principle Divine, but still in the representative sense the regeneration of man is treated of; for the regeneration of man is an image of the Lord's Glorification, see n. 3043, 3138, 3212; that is, in regeneration as in a kind of image it appears how the Lord glorified His Human [principle], or what is the same thing, made it Divine; for as the Lord altogether changed His Human state into Divine, so also the Lord with man, when he regenerates man, altogether changes his state, for he makes his old man new.

3297. Verses 24, 25, 26. And her days were fulfilled to bring forth, and lo! twins were in her womb. And the first came forth, he was wholly red, like a hairy garment, and they called his name Esau. And after this, his brother came forth, and his hand took hold on the heel of Esau, and they called his name Jacob; and Isaac was a son of sixty years in her bearing them. Her days were fulfilled to bring forth, signifies the first state of effect; and lo! twins were in her womb, signifies that each principle (viz. good and truth) was conceived together: and the first came forth, he was wholly red, like a hairy garment, signifies the natural good of the life of truth; and they called his name Esau, signifies his quality; and after this, his brother came forth, signifies truth: and his hand took hold on the heel of Esau, signifies the lowest principle of natural good to which it (viz. truth) adhered with some power: and they called his name Jacob, signifies the doctrine of natural truth: and Isaac was a son of sixty years in her bearing them, signifies the state of the Divine Rational principle at that time.

3298. "Her days were fulfilled to bring forth"—that hereby is signified the first state of effect, appears from the signification of days, as denoting states, see n. 23, 487, 488, 493, 893, 2788: these being fulfilled to bring forth, signifies the first state of effect; for to bring forth, in a spiritual sense, has respect to good and truth, and in this sense denotes their existence, see n. 2621, 2629. The case in regard to good and truth, is like that of man's natural offspring, in that they are conceived, are in the womb, are born, and afterwards grow up to maturity; after conception, the efficient, or conceived seed, begins to produce effect, which effect has place in the womb; when these states are fulfilled, and the time is near to bring forth, then the effect commences, and is called the first beginning of the effect, for then the offspring begins to act as from itself, and to exert itself in attaining to that essential state, which is called the state of the effect.

3299. "And lo! twins were in her womb"—that hereby is signified that each principle (viz. good and truth) was conceived together, appears from the signification of twins, as denoting each principle, viz. good which is represented by Esau, and truth which is represented by Jacob; and from the signification of being in the womb, as denoting conception, concerning which see above, n. 3293. In respect to each principle, viz. good and truth of the natural man, being conceived together, the case is this; whatsoever is born, derives its esse from a father, and its exister from a mother, and it is impossible that any thing should have being unless it partake of each principle; the natural principle as to good is conceived of the good of the rational principle as a father, and as to truth is conceived of the truth of the rational principle as a mother, see n. 3286, 3288; it is good which gives life, but by truth: each principle is called soul, but still good is principally soul, the truth clothing it as it were with a species of tender vessel or body, so that good is in truth. This is what is signified by twins being in the womb.

3300. "And the first came forth, he was wholly red as a hairy garment"—that hereby is signified natural good of the life of truth, appears from the signification of coming forth, as denoting to be born; and from the signification of red, as denoting good of life, whereof we shall speak presently; and from the signification of a hairy garment, as denoting truth of the natural principle, of which also we shall speak presently. His being the first, signifies, that good as to essence is prior, according to what was said above, n. 3299; mention is made also of a hairy garment, in order to signify that good is clothed with truth, as with a tender vessel or body, according to what was likewise said above, n. 3299; neither is any thing else signified by garment in the Word, than such a principle as invests (or clothes) another principle, wherefore also truths are compared to garments, see n. 1073, 2576. The ground and reason why red signifies the good of life, is, because all good is of love, and essential love is celestial and spiritual fire, and is also compared to fire, and likewise called fire, see n. 933, 934, 935, 936; it is also compared to blood, and is likewise called blood, see n. 1001; because each is red, therefore the good, which is of love, is signified by what is red, as may also appear from the following passages in the Word. "He shall wash his raiment in wine, and his covering in the blood of grapes, his eyes are redder than wine, and his teeth whiter than milk," Gen. xlix. 11, 12; speaking of Judah, by whom is here meant the Lord, as may be manifest to every one; raiment and covering denote the Lord's Divine Natural principle; wine and the blood of grapes denote the Divine Good and Divine Truth of the natural principle; of the former it is said that it's eyes are redder than wine, and of the latter that it's teeth are whiter than milk ; it is the conjunction of good and truth in the natural principle which is thus described : so in Isaiah, "Who is this that cometh from Edom, red as to his apparel, and his garments as of one that treadeth in the wine-press?" lxiii. 1, 2 ; where Edom denotes the Divine Good of the Lord's Divine Natural principle, as will appear from what follows ; red as to his apparel denotes the good of truth ; his garments as of one that treadeth in the wine-press denote the truth of good ; so in Jeremiah, "Her Nazarites were whiter than snow, they were fairer than milk, they were redder in bone than rubies, the sapphire was their polishing," Lam. iv. 7 ; by Nazarites was represented the Lord as to His Divine Human [principle], especially as to His Divine Natural principle ; thus the good therein was represented by their being redder in bone than rubies. Inasmuch as red signified good, especially the good of the natural principle, therefore in the Jewish Church, where all and singular things were representative of the Lord, and thence of His kingdom, consequently of good and truth, because the Lord's kingdom is derived from these principles, it was commanded, that the covering of the tent should be of the "skins of red rams" Exod. xxv. 5 ; chap. xxvi. 14 ; chap. xxxv. 7, 23 ; chap. xxxvi. 19 : and also that the water of expiation should be made of the ashes of a burnt red heifer, Numb. xix. 2, and the following verses. Unless the colour of red had signified somewhat celestial in the Lord's kingdom, it would never have been commanded as above, that the rams should be red, and the heifer red ; that holy things were represented thereby, must be acknowledged by every one who accounts the Word holy. Inasmuch as the colour of red has such a signification, therefore also the coverings of the tent were interwoven and tied up with loops of scarlet, purple, and blue, Exod. xxxv. 25. As almost all expressions in the Word have an opposite sense, according to what has been frequently observed above, so also has red, in which case it signifies evil originating in self-love, and this also from this ground, because the lusts of self-love are compared to fire, and are called fire, see n. 934, 1297, 1527, 1528, 1861, 2446 ; in like manner they are compared to blood, and are called blood, see n. 374, 954, 1005 ; hence red in an opposite sense has such signification, as in Isaiah, "If your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow ; if they be red as purple, they shall be like wool," i. 18 ; so in Nahum, "The shield of the mighty ones of Belial is become red, the men of strength are purpled, in the fire of torches are the chariots in the day," ii. 3 ; so in the Apocalypse, "There appeared another sign in heaven, behold a great red dragon, having seven heads, and upon the heads seven diadems," xii. 3 ; again, "I saw, and behold a white horse, and he that sat thereon had a bow, and there was given him a crown, and he went forth conquering and to conquer; then went out another horse red, and to him that sat thereon it was given to take away peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another, and there was given unto him a great sword; afterwards there went forth a black horse, and lastly a pale horse, whose name was Death," vi. 2 to 8.

3301. That by an hairy garment is signified truth of the natural principle, appears from the signification of garment, as denoting such a principle as invests (or clothes) another principle, in the present case therefore denoting truth, because this invests, (or clothes) good, for truth is a vesture, see n. 1073, 2576; or, what is nearly the same thing, truth is a vessel receptive of good, see n. 1469, 1496, 1832, 1900, 2063, 2261, 2269; and also from the signification of hairy, as denoting the natural principle as to truth. Hair is occasionally mentioned in the Word, and therein signifies the natural principle; the reason is, because hairs are excrescences in the ultimate parts of man, as also the natural principle is in his rational principle and the interiors thereof: it appears to man, during his life in the body, that the natural principle in him is all and every thing, but this is so far from being true, that the natural principle is rather an excrescence from his internal principles, as hairs are from what appertains to the body; they proceed also in nearly the like manner from things internal; wherefore also those men, who in the life of the body have been merely natural, when in another life they are exhibited to the sight according to that state, appear hairy as to almost the whole face. Moreover, man's natural principle is represented by hair; when it is grounded in good, it is represented by decent and well adjusted hair, but when it is not grounded in good, by unbecoming and dishevelled hair. It is in consequence of this representation, that hair in the Word signifies the natural principle, especially in regard to truth, as in Zechariah, "It shall come to pass in that day, the prophet shall be ashamed, a man by reason of his vision, when he hath prophesied, and they shall not put on a hairy garment that they may declare a lie," xiii. 4; where prophets denote those who teach truths, in the present case who teach falses, see n. 2534; vision denotes truths, in the present case falses; an hairy garment denotes the natural principle as to truth, and whereas there was not any truth, but only what was false, therefore it is said that they declare a lie: prophets were clothed with such raiment, in order to represent natural truth, as being external; therefore also Elijah the Tishbite, by reason of such clothing, is called a "hairy man," 2 Kings i. 8; and John, who was the last of the prophets, had raiment of "camels hair," Matt. iii. 4; that camels denote scientifics in the natural man, may be seen, n. 3048, 3071, 3143, 3145; and that scientifics are the truths of the natural man, n. 3293. That hair signifies the natural principle as to truth, appears manifest from the Nazarites, to whom it was commanded, that during all the days of their Nazariteship, "no razor should pass upon their head, until the days were fulfilled in which they should separate themselves to Jehovah, and then they should let down the hair of their head, and should then shave the head of their Nazariteship at the door of the tent of the congregation, and should put the hair upon the fire which was under the eucharistic sacrifice," Numb. vi. 5, 18, 19; the Nazarites represented the Lord as to His Divine Human [principle], and thence they represented the man of the celestial Church, who is a likeness of the Lord, see n. 51, and the natural principle of that man by the hair; wherefore when they were sanctified, they were to put off their natural old or former man, to which they were born, and were to put on the new man, which was signified by this, that when the days were fulfilled, in which they should separate themselves to Jehovah, they should let down the hair of their head, and should put it on the fire beneath the sacrifice; for the state of the celestial man is this, that he is principled in good, and by virtue of good knows all truths, and never thinks and speaks from truths concerning good, much less from scientifics, see n. 202, 337, 2715, 2718, 3246; moreover celestial men are such, that before they put off that state, they are in so strong a natural principle as to truth, that they can engage in combat with the infernals, for it is truth, not good, which engages in combat, inasmuch as the infernals are not capable of the most distant approach to good; that such is the nature and quality of good and of truth, may be seen, n. 1950, 1951. Hence it is evident whence Samson had strength from his hair, of whom it is thus written, "The angel of Jehovah appeared to the mother of Samson, saying lo, thou shalt conceive and bear a son, and no razor shall come up upon his head, he shall be a Nazarite of God, a child from the womb," Judges xiii. 3, 5; it is afterwards said, that he told Delilah, that if he was shaven his strength would depart from him, and he should be rendered weak; and then, when he was shaven, that his strength departed, and the Philistines seized upon him; and afterwards when the hair of his head began to grow, as he was shaven, that his strength returned, so that he removed the pillars of the house, Judges xvi. 1 to the end. Who does not see that in these particulars are contained heavenly arcana, which can be known to no one, unless he be instructed concerning representatives, viz. that the Nazarite had relation to the celestial man, and so long as he had hair, had relation to the natural principle of that man, who, as was observed above, is in so powerful and strong a principle of truth? And whereas at that time all representatives, which were enjoined by the Lord, had such force and effect, hence Samson had his strength; but he was not a sanctified Nazarite, such as those spoken of above, who had put on a state of good instead of a state of truth: hence the effect of his strength by reason of his hair was principally for this purpose, that he might represent the Lord, Who, by virtue of the natural man as to truth, fought with the hells and subdued them, and this before He put on Divine Good and Truth also as to the natural man. Hence likewise it is evident why it was required, "that the great priest, upon whose head the oil of anointing was poured, and his hand fulfilled to put on raiment, should not shave his head, and should not rend his clothes," Lev. xxi. 10; and in like manner it was required of the priests the Levites, in treating of the new temple, that they should not shave their heads, and let down their hair," Ezech. xliv. 20, viz. that they might represent the Lord's Divine Natural principle as to truth which is grounded in good, and is called the truth of good. That hair signifies the natural principle as to truth, appears also from the prophetic parts of the Word, as in Ezechiel, "I have given thee as the bud of the field, whence thou hast increased and grown up to ornaments of ornaments, thy breasts are fashioned, and thy hair is grown," xvi. 7; speaking of Jerusalem, which in this chapter denotes the ancient Church, which in process of time became perverted; the breasts fashioned denote natural good, the hair which was grown denotes natural truth. So in Daniel, "I saw until the thrones were cast down, and the ancient of days sat, his raiment was like white snow, and the hair of his head like clean wool; his throne was as a flame of fire," vii. 9; and in the Apocalypse, "In the midst of the seven candlesticks, one like unto the Son of Man, clothed with a garment down to the feet, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle; his head and hairs were white, like white wool, like snow, and his eyes as a flame of fire," i. 13, 14; where white hairs like clean wool denote the Divine Natural principle as to truth. Essential truth in the Word, and in the rituals of the Jewish Church, was represented by white, and inasmuch as essential truth is from good, it is called clean wool. The ground and reason why the representation of truth is by white, and of good by red, is, because truth has relation to light, and good to fire from whence light proceeds, hair, like other expressions in the Word, has also an opposite sense, and signifies the natural principle as to truth perverted; as in Isaiah, "In that day shall the Lord shave by an hired razor, in the passages of the river, by the king of Ashur, the head and the hairs of the feet, and shall also consume the beard," vii. 20: so in Ezechiel, "Son of man, take to thee a sharp sword, take to thee a barber's razor and draw it over thy head, and over thy beard; afterwards take to thee balances of weight, and divide them; burn a third with fire in the midst of the city; smite a third with the sword round about it; and a third disperse to the wind; and thou shalt take thereof a few in number, and bind it in thy wings; lastly, thou shalt take thereof again, and cast it into the midst of the fire, and burn it with fire, whence fire shall go forth to the whole house of Israel," v. 1, 2, 3, 4; hereby is representatively described, that there was no longer any natural truth interior and exterior, which is signified by hair and beard; that this was destroyed by concupiscencies, is signified by it's being to be burnt with fire; that it was destroyed by reasonings, is signified by it's being to be smitten with the sword round about; that it was destroyed by false principles, is signified by it's being to be dispersed to the wind: hereby is implied the same as what the Lord teaches in Matthew, where He says of the seed, which is truth, that "some fell amongst thorns, some on a rock, and some on the way," xiii. 1 to 9. That hair signifies truths unclean and false which appertain to the natural man, was also represented by this circumstance, that a woman who was to be married from amongst the prisoners of the enemy, was to be led to the house, the hair of her head to be shaved, her nails to be pared, and the garments of her captivity to be removed," Deut. xxi. 12, 13; also from this circumstance, "that when the Levites were consecrated, the water of expiation was to be sprinkled upon them, and they were to cause a razor to pass over all their flesh, and were to wash their garments, and thus were to be pure," Numb. viii. 7; and further from this, "that Nebuchadnezzar was driven away from man, that he might eat grass like oxen, and his body might be wet with the dew of heaven, until his hair grew like that of eagles, and his nails like those of birds," Dan. iv. 30: and lastly from this circumstance, that in the leprosy the colours of the hair and beard should be observed, as white, reddish, yellow, and black; the same was to be observed in respect to the garments; and that he, who was cleansed from the leprosy, should shave away all the hair of his head, beard, and eye-brows," Levit. xiii. 1 to the end; xiv. 8, 9; whereby were signified unclean false principles grounded in what is profane, which is leprosy in the internal sense. But baldness signified the natural principle, in which is nothing of truth, as in Isaiah, "He is gone up to Bajith and to Dibon, the high places to weeping over Nebo, and Moab shall howl over Medba, on all their heads shall be baldness, every beard shall be shaven," xv. 2: so again, "It shall come to pass that instead of well-set hair shall be baldness, and burning instead of beauty," iii. 24. The circumstance of the boys who said to Elisha, go up thou bald-head, go up thou bald-head, being torn in pieces by bears out of the wood, 2 Kings ii. 23, 24, represented those who blaspheme the Word, as if the truth was not contained therein; for Elisha represented the Lord as to the Word, see n. 2762: hence also it is evident, how much representatives prevailed at that time.

3302. "And called his name Esau"—that hereby is signified it's quality, viz. the quality of the natural principle as to good, appears from the signification of calling a name, or of calling by name, as denoting to know the quality of a person or thing, see n. 144, 145, 440, 768, 1754, 1896, 2009, 2724, 3006; and from this consideration, that names in the Word, how many soever are mentioned, in the internal sense signify things, see n. 1224, 1888; this is the case also in respect to Esau. That Esau signifies the Lord's Divine Natural principle as to Divine Good at first conceived, appears from what has been already said, and from what follows concerning Esau, and also from other parts of the Word: but inasmuch as Esau and Edom have nearly the same signification, with this difference only, that Edom signifies the Divine Natural principle as to good, to which are adjoined the doctrinals of truth, therefore at the explication of verse 31, where Esau is called Edom, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, their signification will be confirmed by passages from the Word.

3303. "And after this his brother came forth"—that hereby is signified truth, appears from the signification of brother, as denoting good, and also denoting truth, these being called brothers; that charity is the brother of faith, or good the brother of truth, may be seen, n. 367; so vice versâ, faith is the brother of charity, or truth the brother of good; also in the natural principle, the affection of good is called brother, and the affection of truth, sister; see n. 3160; likewise husband and woman, and also man (vir) and woman; but this always in respect to the states treated of.

3304. "And his hand took hold on the heel of Esau"—that hereby is signified the lowest principle of natural good to which it adhered, (viz. truth) with some power, appears from the signification of hand, as denoting power, see n. 878, and as being predicated of truth, n. 3091; and from the signification of taking hold of, as denoting to adhere to: and from the signification of heel, as denoting the lowest principle of what is natural, see n. 259; and from the representation of Esau, as denoting the good of the natural principle, see n. 3302. Hence it is manifest, that by his hand taking hold of the heel of Esau, is signified the lowest principle of natural good, to which truth adhered with some power. With regard to this circumstance, that truth adhered with some power to the lowest good of the natural principle, the case is this; the natural principle, or the natural man, when it is regenerated, has it's conception as to good and truth from the rational principle, or by the rational from the spiritual principle, by this from the celestial, and by the celestial from the Divine; thus there is a succession of influx, which beginning from the Divine Principle, and thus going on by gradations, is terminated in the lowest state of the natural principle, that is, in the worldly and corporeal principle. When the lowest natural principle is in any respect vitiated by what is hereditary from the mother, in this case truth cannot be united with good, but only adhere to it with some power, nor is truth united with good until that vitiation is expelled; this is the reason that good indeed is connate to (born with) man, but not truth, and therefore infants are without any knowledge of truth, and truth is to be learned by them, and afterwards to be conjoined to good, see n. 1831, 1832; it is on this account also said, that they struggled together in the midst of her, that is fought together, see n. 3289; hence it is that from the first conception truth supplants good, as it is said of Jacob that he supplanted Esau, "Doth he not call his name Jacob, and hath supplanted me these two times?" Gen. xxvii. 36; and in Hosea, "To visit upon Jacob his ways, he will recompense him according to his works, in the womb he supplanted his brother," xii. 2, 3. They who keep the mind fixed in historicals only, and cannot separate it thence, know no other than that the particulars here mentioned, as well as those mentioned above, are a sort of preface to what happened afterwards between Esau and Jacob, in which notion they are also confirmed by what follows; but such is the Word of the Lord, that things historical are in their series, and things spiritual, which appertain to the internal sense, are in their's, to the intent that the former may be viewed by the external man, but the latter by the internal, and thus there may be a correspondence between each, viz. the external man and the internal; and this by means of the Word, for the Word is the union of earth and heaven, as has been frequently shewn above; thus in every particular person, who is in a holy principle whilst he reads the Word, there is an union of his external man which is on earth, with his internal man which is in heaven.

3305. "And they called his name Jacob"—that hereby is signified the doctrine of natural truths, appears from the signification of calling a name, or of calling by name, as denoting quality, see above, n. 3302; the quality, which is represented by Jacob, is the doctrine of natural truth, as may appear from the representation of Esau, as denoting the good of life of natural truth, see n. 3300, and from the several passages in the Word where the name is mentioned: for there are two things which constitute the natural principle, as there are two things which constitute the rational, yea, which constitute the whole man, one which appertains to life, the other which appertains to doctrine; what appertains to life is of the will, what appertains to doctrine is of the understanding; the former is called good, but the latter truth; this good is what is represented by Esau, but the truth by Jacob, or what is the same thing, the good of life of natural truth is what is represented by Esau, and the doctrine of natural truth is what is represented by Jacob; whether we speak of the good of life of natural truth, and the doctrine of natural truth, or of those who are principled therein, it is the same thing, for good of life and doctrine of truth cannot be given without their subject, but must needs respect man as the subject in which they dwell and operate, otherwise they would be mere abstract principles; wherefore by Jacob are here signified those who are in the doctrine of natural truth. They who abide merely in the sense of the letter of the Word, believe that by Jacob is meant all that people which was derived from Jacob, and therefore they apply to that people all those things which were spoken both historically and prophetically concerning Jacob; but the Word is Divine, principally in this, that all and singular the things contained therein do not respect one nation, or one people, but the universal human race, viz. that which is, which was, and which shall be; and what is still more universal, viz. the Lord's kingdom in the heavens, and in a supreme sense the Lord Himself: it is in consequence of this universal respect, that the Word is Divine: if it only had respect to one nation, it would then be human, and would have nothing more of a Divine Principle in it, than there was of holy worship subsisting amongst that nation; that such holy worship did not subsist with the people, which is called Jacob, may be known to every one: hence also it is evident, that by Jacob in the Word is not meant Jacob, nor by Israel, Israel, (for in almost every part of the prophetic Word, where Jacob is spoken of, mention is made also of Israel) and no one can know what is specifically understood by the one, and what by the other, unless by virtue of that sense which lies concealed under the letter, and contains in it the arcana of heaven. That by Jacob therefore is signified, in the internal sense, the doctrine of natural truth, or what is the same thing, those who are principled in that doctrine, of whatever nation they be, and that in a supreme sense the Lord is understood, may appear from the following passages, "The angel said unto Mary, thou shalt conceive in the womb, and shalt bring forth a son, and shalt call his name Jesus; He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His Father David, so that He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ages, and of His kingdom there shall be no end," Luke i. 31, 32, 33; that in this passage by the house of Jacob is not here meant the Jewish nation or people, every one sees plainly, for the Lord's kingdom was not over that people, but over all the universe who are principled in faith in Him, and by virtue of faith in charity; hence it is manifest, that by Jacob, whom the angel mentions, is not meant the people of

Jacob, consequently neither is the people of Jacob to be understood as spoken of in other parts of the Word, where mention is made of the seed of Jacob, of the sons of Jacob, of the land of Jacob, of the inheritance of Jacob, of the king of Jacob, and of the God of Jacob, which expressions so frequently occur in the Word of the Old Testament: the case is the same in respect to Israel as may appear from the following passage in Matthew, "The angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph in a dream, saying, arise and take the young child, and his mother, and flee into Egypt, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, out of Egypt have I called my son," ii. 13, 14, 15; in the prophet it is thus written, "~~When~~ Israel was a child then I loved him, and out of Egypt have I called my son." Hosea xi. 1; that Israel here means the Lord, is manifest; and yet from the sense of the letter it cannot be known, but that by the child Israel are meant the first descendants of Jacob, who came into Egypt and were thence called forth: the case is the same in other passages where mention is made of Jacob and Israel, although it does not appear from the sense of the letter; as in Isaiah, "Hear, O Jacob My servant, and Israel whom I have chosen, thus saith Jehovah thy Maker, and He that formed thee from the womb, who helpeth thee, Fear not My servant Jacob and Jeshurun whom I have chosen, because I will pour waters upon him that is thirsty, and rivers upon the dry; I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thy sons; this shall say I am Jehovah's and this shall call himself by the name of Jacob, and this shall write with his hand to Jehovah, and shall surname himself by the name of Israel," xlv. 1, 2, 3, 5: where Jacob and Israel manifestly denote the Lord, and the seed and sons of Jacob denote those who are principled in faith in Him. So in the prophetic declaration concerning the sons of Israel in Moses, "Joseph shall sit in the strength of his bow, and the arms of his hand shall be strengthened by the hands of the mighty Jacob, thence the shepherd the stone of Israel," Gen. xlix. 24; where the mighty Jacob and the stone of Israel manifestly denote the Lord: so in Isaiah, "My glory will I not give to another, attend to me O Jacob, and Israel called by Me, I am the same, I am the first, also I am the last," xlviii. 11, 12; where Jacob and Israel likewise denote the Lord. So in Ezechiel, "I will take the wood of Joseph, ~~which is~~ in the hand of Ephraim, and of the tribes of Israel his companions, and will add them upon him with the wood of Judah, and will make them into one wood, that they may be one in my hand: I will take the sons of Israel from amongst the nations whither they have departed, and I will gather them together from the places round about, and will bring them upon their own land, and will make them into one nation in the land, in the mountains of Israel, and one king shall be to them all for a king, and they shall no longer be two nations, and shall no longer be divided again into two kingdoms: my servant David shall be a king over them, and they shall all have one shepherd: then they shall dwell upon the land which I have given to my servant Jacob, wherein your fathers dwelt; they shall dwell upon it, they and their sons, and their sons sons, even to eternity; David my servant shall be a prince to them for ever: I will establish with them a covenant of peace, a covenant of eternity shall be with them; I will give them, and I will multiply them, and will place my sanctuary in the midst of them for ever; thus shall my habitation be with them, and I will be to them for a God, and they shall be to Me for a people, that the nations may know that I Jehovah sanctify Israel, and that my sanctuary is in the midst of them for ever," xxxvii. 19, 21, 22, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28: here again it appears manifestly, that by Joseph, by Ephraim, by Judah, by Israel, by Jacob, and by David, are not meant those persons, but that in a supreme sense they mean Divine Spiritual principles, which are in the Lord, and which are the Lord's in His kingdom and Church; that David was not to be their king and prince for ever, as it is said, must be obvious to every one, but that by David is meant the Lord, see n. 1888; it may also be known, that Israel shall not be gathered together from amongst the nations whither he was dispersed, and that they shall not be sanctified, and the sanctuary placed in the midst of them for ever, as it is said, but that this was to be the case with those, who are signified by Israel in a representative sense, and who, it is known, are all the faithful. So in Micah, "In collecting I will collect Jacob all of thee, in gathering I will gather together the remains of Israel, I will place him together as the sheep of Bozrah," ii. 12; where the signification is the same as above: so again in Isaiah, "Jacob shall cause them that come to take root, Israel shall blossom and bud, and the faces of the world shall be filled with produce," xxvii. 6; where the sense also is the same as above: so again, "Thus saith Jehovah to the house of Jacob, who redeemed Abraham, Jacob shall not any longer be ashamed, and his faces shall not any longer grow pale, because in seeing his children, the work of Mine hands, they shall sanctify My name in the midst of him, and they shall sanctify the holy one of Jacob, and shall fear the God of Israel, and they that erred in spirit shall know understanding," xxix. 22, 23, 24: again in the same prophet, "Jehovah saith to his anointed Cyrus, whose right hand I have taken hold of, to bring the nations into subjection before him, and I will loose the loins of kings, to open gates before him, and the doors shall not be shut: I will go before thee, and will make crooked things straight, I will break the gates of brass, and cut in sunder the bars of iron, I will give thee the treasures of concealed places, and hidden riches of secret places, that thou mayst know that I am Jehovah, who, called by thy name, am the God of Israel, for Jacob My servant's sake, and Israel Mine elect; I have called thee by thy name, I have surnamed thee when thou didst not know Me," xlv. 1, 2, 3, 4; where the subject treated of is manifestly concerning the Lord. So in Micah, "In the extremity of days the mountain of the house of Jehovah shall be established on the head of the mountains, and many nations shall go and say, come and let us go up to the mountain of Jehovah, and to the house of the God of Jacob, that He may teach us of His ways, and we will go in His paths, for out of Zion shall go forth doctrine, and the Word of Jehovah from out of Jerusalem," iv. 1, 2: and in David,* "Jehovah loveth the gates of Zion better than all the habitations of Jacob, glorious things shall be preached in thee O city of God," Psalm lxxxvii. 2, 3: and in Jeremiah, "They shall serve Jehovah their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up for them; and fear not thou my servant Jacob, and be not afraid O Israel, because behold I preserve thee from far," xxx. 9, 10. Again in Isaiah, "Attend O islands unto me, and hearken O people from afar, Jehovah hath called me from the womb, from the bowels of my mother he hath remembered my name, and hath said unto me, thou Israel art my servant, in whom I will be rendered glorious," xlv. 1, 3. Again, in the same prophet, "Then shalt thou be delighted upon Jehovah, and I will raise thee up into the high places of the earth, and will feed thee with the inheritance of Jacob," lviii. 14. Again, in the same prophet, "I will bring forth seed out of Jacob, and an heir of my mountains out of Judah, that mine elect may possess him, and my servants may dwell there," lxxv. 9. In all these passages by Jacob and Israel, in a supreme sense, is meant the Lord, and in a representative sense the Lord's spiritual kingdom, and the Church, which is the Church by virtue of the doctrine of truth and life of good, by Jacob those who are in the externals of that Church, and by Israel those who are in the internals. From the above and many other passages it may appear, that by Jacob, is no where meant Jacob, neither by Israel Israel, as neither by Isaac Isaac, nor by Abraham Abraham, where those names are mentioned, as in Matthew, "Many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven," viii. 11; and in Luke, "Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God," xiii. 28; and again, "Lazarus was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom," xvi. 22; for in heaven they know nothing of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and when those names are read by man, they have no perception of any thing but of the Lord as to His Divine [principle] and His Divine Human; so when man reads of sitting down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, they have a perception of being with the Lord; and when man reads of being in Abraham's bosom, they have a perception of being in the Lord; but it was thus expressed, because man at that time was so far removed from things internal, that he knew no other, neither was he willing to know any other, than that all things in the Word were according to the letter. And when the Lord spake with them according to the letter it was that they might receive faith, and also that there might be at the same time an internal sense within, by which there might be the conjunction of man with Himself. This being the case, it may plainly appear what is signified, in the Word of the Old Testament, by the God of Jacob, and by the Holy One of Israel, viz. the Lord Himself; that the God of Jacob, is the Lord, may be seen, 2 Sam. xxiii. 1; Isaiah ii. 3; chap. xli. 21; Micah iv. 2; Psalm xx. 1; xlv. 7; lxxv. 9; lxxvi. 6; lxxx. 1, 4; cxxxiv. 8; cxiv. 7; cxxxii. 2; cxlvi. 5. That the holy one of Israel is the Lord, may be seen, Isaiah i. 4; chap. v. 19, 24; chap. x. 20; chap. xii. 6; chap. xvii. 7; chap. xxix. 19; chap. xxx. 11, 12, 15; chap. xxxi. 1; chap. xxxvii. 23; chap. xli. 14, 16, 20; chap. xliii. 3, 14; chap. xlv. 11; chap. xlvii. 4; chap. xlviii. 17; chap. xlix. 7; chap. liv. 5; chap. lv. 5; chap. lx. 14; Jer. 1. 9; Ezech. xxxix. 7; Psalm lxxi. 22; lxxxix. 18.

3306. "And Isaac was a son of sixty years in her bearing them"—that hereby is signified the state of the rational principle at that time, may appear from what was said above concerning numbers, n. 3252, 3275; what is involved in the number sixty, may appear from the simple numbers of which, by multiplication, it is composed, viz. five and twelve, for five times twelve is sixty; what is signified by five may be seen, n. 649, 1686; what by 12, n. 3272; also from the simple numbers six and ten, for six times ten is sixty; what is signified by six, may be seen, n. 720, 737, 900; and what by ten, n. 576, 2284, 3107; likewise from the numbers two and thirty, for twice thirty is sixty; what two signifies, may be seen, n. 720, 900, 1335, 1686; and what thirty, n. 2276; the number sixty, as being composed of these numbers, involves the things signified thereby in their order, all which things are the state wherein the Lord's Divine Rational principle was at that time; these things are manifest before the angels in a clear light from the Lord, but before man, especially one who does not believe that numbers in the Word have a hidden signification, they cannot be explained, as well by reason of incredulity, as because so many contents cannot be reduced into a series adequate to man's comprehension.

3307. Verses 27, 28. And the boys grew up, and Esau was a man skilful in hunting, a man of the field; and Jacob was an entire man, (vir integer) inhabiting tents. And Isaac loved Esau, because hunting (what is acquired by hunting) was in his mouth; and Rebecca loved Jacob. The boys grew up, signifies the first state: and Esau was a man skilful in hunting, signifies good of life derived from truths sensual and scientific: a man of the field, signifies good of life derived from doctrinals: and Jacob was an entire man, signifies truth; dwelling in tents, signifies worship thence derived; and Isaac loved Esau, because hunting (what is acquired by hunting) was in his mouth, signifies that the Divine Good of the Lord's Divine Rational principle loved the good of truth: and Rebecca loved Jacob, signifies that the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational principle loved the doctrine of truth.

3308. "The boys grew up"—that hereby is signified the first state, viz. of the conjunction of good and truth, appears from the signification of growing up, when it is predicated of good and truth, in respect to birth and progress, as denoting the first state of the latter, viz. the first state of progress, concerning which more will be said presently; and from the signification of the boys, as denoting good and truth, for good is represented by the boy Esau, and truth by the boy Jacob, as was shewn above. In regard to good and truth, the case is the same as in regard to natural offsprings, in that they are conceived, are in the womb, are born, grow up, and also increase in age even to the last; in respect to conception, being in the womb, and being born, this appertains to the state of birth; but in respect to growing up, and increasing in age even to the last, this appertains to the state of progress; the state of progress succeeds from nativity, and is the state of the conjunction of good and truth, the first [beginning] of this state is what is here signified by growing up; this state commences instantly after nativity, and is continued even to the last state of life, and with those who are in good, after the life of the body to eternity; the angels thus are continually perfecting.

3309. "And Esau was a man skilful in hunting"—that hereby is signified the good of life derived from truths sensual and scientific, appears from the representation of Esau, as denoting the good of life, concerning which see above; and from the signification of a man skilful in hunting, as denoting those who are in the affection of truth, of which we shall speak presently; for a man skilful is predicated of the affection of truth, or of those who are in the affection of truth; whereas ~~hunting~~ signifies truths themselves, but truths appertaining to the natural man from which are derived goods; and inasmuch as the truths of the natural man are those which are called scientific truths, see n. 3293, and scientific truths are principally of two kinds, or of two degrees, viz. sensual and scientific, therefore each are here signified by hunting. Sensual truths are those in which children are principled, scientific are those in which the same children are principled when they grow up; for no one can be in scientific truths, unless he be first in sensual truths, inasmuch as the ideas of the former are procured from the latter; from these afterwards may be learned and comprehended truths still more interior which are called doctrinal truths, and which are signified by a man of the field, whereof we shall speak presently. The ground and reason why by hunting are signified truths sensual and scientific, in which they are instructed, and by which they are affected, who are in the good of life, is, because hunting, in an extended sense, denotes those things which are taken by hunting, as rams, kids, goats, and the like, and that these denote spiritual good, may be seen, n. 2188, 2830; and also because the arms used in hunting, which were quivers, bows, and darts, denote doctrinals of truth, see n. 2685, 2686, 2709. That such are the things which are signified by hunting, may appear from what is said to Esau, by his father Isaac, chap. xxvii. following, "Take I pray thine arms, thy quiver, and thy bow, and go forth into the field, and hunt me a hunting, and make me savoury meat, as I have loved," verses 3, 4; and to Jacob, who is there taken for Esau, in the same chapter, "Bring to me, that I may eat of my son's hunting, that my soul may bless thee," verse 25; whence it is manifest what is signified by hunting. Hence it is, that to hunt denotes to teach, and also to persuade, and this in each sense, viz. from the affection of what is true, and from the affection of what is false; from the affection of truth in Jeremiah, "I will bring them back upon their land which I have given to their fathers; behold I send to many fishers, and they shall fish them; and after this I will send to many hunters, and they shall hunt them, from above every mountain and from above every hill, and from the holes of the rocks," xvi. 15, 16; where fishers denote those who teach from sensual truths, see n. 40, 991; and hunters those who teach from scientific truths, and also from doctrinals; upon every mountain and upon every hill, denotes the teaching those who are in the affection of good and in the affection of truth; that mountain and hill have such a signification, may be seen, n. 795, 799, 1430; the like is implied by hunting in the field, as in Gen. xxvii. 3. That to hunt denotes also to teach and persuade from the affection of what is false, appears from the following passage in Ezechiel, "Behold I am against your pillows, where-~~with~~, there hunt souls to make them fly away, and I will tear off your coverings, and will deliver my people out of your hand, and they shall be no longer in your hand for hunting," xiii. 18, 19, 20, 21; concerning the signification of hunting in this sense, see n. 1178; but to this kind of hunting, nets are commonly attributed.

3310. That "a man of the field" signifies good of life derived from doctrinals, appears from the signification of field; in the Word frequent mention is made of earth (or land), of ground, and of field : and by earth when applied in a good sense, is signified the Lord's kingdom in the heavens and in the earths, consequently the Church, which is the Lord's kingdom in the earths ; the same is signified by ground, but in a more confined sense, see n. 566, 662, 1066, 1067, 1068, 1262, 1413, 1733, 1850, 2117, 2118, 2928 ; the same is also signified by field, but in a sense still more confined, see n. 368, 2971 ; and whereas the Church is not the Church by virtue of doctrinals, only so far as those doctrinals have respect to the good of life as to their end, or, what is the same thing, so far as those doctrinals are conjoined with the good of life, therefore by field is signified principally the good of life. In order that such good of life may be good constituent of the Church, there must be doctrinals derived from the Word, and implanted in that good ; without such doctrinals, it is indeed the good of life, but not as yet constituent of the Church, consequently not as yet truly spiritual, except only as to it's capacity of becoming so, as is the case with the good of life amongst the Gentiles, who have not the Word, and therefore are ignorant of the Lord. That field denotes the good of life, wherein are to be implanted the things appertaining to faith, that is, spiritual truths which are of the Church, may appear manifestly from the Lord's parable in Matthew concerning the sower, "A sower went out to sow his seed : and whilst he sowed, some fell upon the hard way, and the fowls came and devoured them up ; some fell upon stony places, where they had not much ground, and quickly they sprung up, because they had no deepness of earth ; and when the sun was up, they were scorched, and because they had no root, they withered away ; and some fell among thorns, and the thorns sprang up and choked them ; but others fell into good earth, and brought forth fruit, some an hundred fold, some sixty fold, some thirty fold : who hath an ear to hear, let him hear," xiii. 4 to 9 ; Mark iv. 3 to 9 ; Luke viii. 5 to 8 ; in this passage mention is made of four kinds of earth or ground in a field, that is, in the Church ; that the seed here spoken of is the Word of the Lord, consequently truth, which is said to be of faith, and that the good earth is the good which is of charity, is evident, for it is the good in man which receives the Word ; the hard way is the false principle ; the stony is truth which has not it's root in good ; thorns are evils. With respect to the good of life derived from doctrinals, which is signified by a man of the field, the case is this ; they who are regenerated, first do good from a ground of doctrinals, for of themselves they do not know what good is, but learn it from the doctrinals of love and charity, whereby they are taught Who the Lord is, who is their neighbour, what love is, and what is charity, consequently what good is. When they are in this state, they are in the affection of truth, and are called men of the field [virī agri] ; but afterwards, when they are regenerated, they do not do good from a ground of doctrinals, but from a principle of love and charity, for then they are in the very essential good which they have learnt by doctrinals, and in this case are called men of the field [homines agri]; this may be illustrated by the case of a person who by nature inclines to adulteries, to theft, and to murder, but who learns from the commandments of the Decalogue that such evils are of hell, and in consequence thereof abstains from them; in this state he is affected with the commandments because he is afraid of hell, and learns from the commandments, and in like manner from many other parts of the Word, how he ought to direct his life; in this case, when he does good, he does it from the commandments; but when he is in good, he begins then to be averse to the evils of adultery, theft, and murder, to which he was before inclined; and when he is in this latter state, he no longer does good from the commandments, but from a principle of good which then influences him. Such a person, in the former state, learns good from truth, in the latter state he teaches truth from good. This is the case also with spiritual truths, which are called doctrinals, and are still more interior commandments; for doctrinals are the interior truths which appertain to the natural man; the first truths are sensual, the next are scientific, the interior are doctrinals; these latter truths are founded upon scientific truths, insomuch that man can reform and retain no idea, notion, or conception of them except from scientifics; but scientific truths are founded upon sensual truths, for without sensual truths, scientific truths cannot be comprehended by man; these latter truths, viz. the scientific and sensual, are what are signified by a man skilful in hunting; but doctrinals are what are signified by a man of the field; thus they succeed in order with man; wherefore until man is in adult age, and by sensual and scientific truths is principled in doctrinals, he cannot be regenerated, inasmuch as he cannot be confirmed in the truths of doctrinals, except by ideas derived from things sensual and scientific; for there is nothing existing with man in his thought, even as to the most mysterious tenet of faith, which has not with it a natural and sensual idea, although man is in general ignorant of the nature and quality of such ideas; but in another life, if he desires it, it is presented to view ~~before~~ his understanding, and even before his sight, if he is very eager to see it, for in another life, howsoever incredible it may appear, such things may really be presented to ocular view.

3311. "And Jacob was an entire man"—that hereby is signified truth, appears from the representation of Jacob, as denoting the doctrine of natural truth, see n. 3305; and from the signification of entire, as predicated of those who are principled in truth, consequently as predicated of truth, see n. 612.

3312. "Inhabiting tents"—that hereby is signified worship thence derived, appears from the signification of tents, as denoting the holy principle of love, and consequently of worship, see n. 414, 1102, 2145, 2152. The ground and reason why tents signify the holy principle of worship, is, because in the most ancient time, the man of the Church, who was principled in love to the Lord, and thence in holy worship, dwelt in tents, and therein performed his holy worship; and whereas at that time the holy principle of love and of consequent worship began to be represented by tents, therefore it was commanded, that they should make a tent, according to the pattern shewn to Moses in Mount Sinai, and should therein perform their Divine Worship; hence also the feast of tabernacles, and their dwelling in tents on the occasion, was instituted by reason of the representation of holy worship appertaining to the man of the celestial Church; and hence it is evident, that by inhabiting tents is signified worship.

3313. "And Isaac loved Esau because hunting (what is acquired by hunting) was in his mouth"—that hereby is signified that the Divine Good of the Divine Rational principle loved the good of truth, appears from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Lord's Divine Rational principle as to Divine Good, see n. 3012, 3013, 3194, 3210; and from the representation of Esau, as denoting the Lord's Divine Natural principle as to good therein, see n. 3300, 3302, and what follows concerning Edom; and from the signification of hunting, as denoting the good of life derived from natural truths, see n. 3309; in his mouth, signifies that it was his natural affection; for in the Word, that is said to be in the heart which is interior and proceeds from good, and that to be in the mouth, which is exterior and proceeds from truth; and whereas the good of truth, which is here represented by Esau, and is signified by hunting, is exterior good, viz. in the natural affection proceeding from truth, therefore it is said to have been in Isaac's mouth.

3314. "And Rebecca loved Jacob"—that hereby is signified, that the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational principle loved the doctrine of truth, appears from the representation of Rebecca, as denoting the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational principle, see n. 3012, 3013, 3077, and the whole preceding chapter, where Rebecca is treated of; and from the representation of Jacob, as denoting the doctrine of natural ~~truth~~, and in a supreme sense the Lord's Divine Natural principle as to truth, see n. 3305. With respect to the Divine Good of the Divine Rational principle loving the good which appertained to the natural principle, and the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational principle loving the truth which appertained to the natural principle, the case is this; it is good and truth which constitutes the rational principle; and it also good and truth which constitutes the natural principle; the good of the rational principle flows in without truth, thus immediately, into the good of the natural principle, and also by truth, thus mediately; whereas the good of the rational principle flows in, through the truth of the rational principle, into the truth of the natural principle, thus mediately, and also through the good of the natural principle into the truth of the same principle, thus also mediately, hence it is, that the conjunction of the good of the rational principle with the good of the natural principle is closer than with the truth thereof, which conjunction is signified by Isaac's loving Esau; and that the conjunction of the truth of the rational principle with the truth of the natural principle is closer than with good thereof, which conjunction is signified by Rebecca's loving Jacob. These things indeed are of such a nature, as not to be apprehended without difficulty, especially on this account, because the world in general, and even the learned part of it, is in utter ignorance of the subject as to its most common and obvious propositions, as that the rational principle is distinct from the natural, and that it is good and truth which constitutes the rational principle, and which constitutes also the natural principle; still less is it known, that the rational principle flows into the natural, to the intent that man may be capable of thinking, and of willing accordingly; and as these propositions, which are most common and obvious, are unknown, the influx above spoken of must needs be of difficult apprehension; nevertheless these are things which the angels see in a clear light, and in which they perceive innumerable particulars, and this with delight, whensoever it is given them to think of the Lord's Divine [principle] and at the same time of His Divine Human [principle]: man also, who is in good, and in whom there is an angelic principle during his abode in the body, is gifted with some light from the Lord on these and similar subjects: but he, who is not in good, feels an irksomeness in thinking on such things, and the more so in proportion as he thinks of them in the way of application to the Divine [principle] appertaining to the Lord's Human [principle]; it is better therefore that persons of this latter description should turn their thoughts from such considerations, inasmuch as they do not comprehend them, yea, they reject them, saying in their hearts, what is this to me? It will neither promote my honour nor my gain.

~~3313.~~ Verses 29, 30. And Jacob boiled pulse, and Esau came from the field, and he was weary. And Esau said to Jacob, cause me to sup I pray of the red, this red, because I am weary; therefore he called his name Edom. Jacob boiled pulse, signifies a heap of doctrinals: and Esau came from the field, signifies application of the good of life: and he was weary, signifies a state of combat: and Esau said to Jacob, signifies the Lord's perception from the good of the natural principle: cause me to sup I pray of the red, signifies the desire of doctrinals: this red, signifies apparently good : because I am weary, signifies here, as before, a state of combat : therefore he called his name Edom, signifies his quality thence derived as to good, to which were adjoined the doctrinals of truth.

3316. "Jacob boiled pulse"—that hereby is signified an heap of doctrinals, appears from the representation of Jacob, as denoting the doctrine of natural truth, see n. 3305, consequently the doctrinals which are in the natural man, and from the signification of pulse, as denoting an heap of such things ; to boil denotes here to heap up, for the expression in the original tongue is proper to pulse, as if it had been said, he pulsed pulse, that is heaped it together. It is the first state of the conjunction of good and truth, which is described in this verse, and in the following, to the end of this chapter. The first state of man who is regenerated, or with whom truth is conjoined to good, is, that first of all in his natural man, or in its store-house, which is called the memory, there are heaped up together doctrinals of truth without any determinate order : the doctrinals, which are thus heaped up may be compared to any heap of materials indigested and uncompounded, and as it were to a kind of chaos ; but this is done to the end that they may be reduced to order, for whatsoever is to be reduced to order, is at first in this state of confusion, and this is what is signified by the pulse which Jacob boiled, that is, heaped together : these doctrinals are not of themselves reduced to order, but by the good which flows into them, and according to the quantity and quality of the good which acts upon them, such is the quantity and quality to which they are reduced ; when good first longs after and desires those doctrinals, to the end that it may conjoin them to itself, it appears under a species of affection of truth : these are the things which are signified by what Esau said to Jacob, "Cause me to sup I pray of the red, this red." This signification of these words appears indeed very remote from the sense of the letter, but still, when these words are read by man, and are apprehended by him according to the sense of the letter, the angels, who are then present with him, have no idea at all of pulse, or of Jacob, or of Esau, or of what is red, or of supping of what is red, but instead thereof have a spiritual idea, which is altogether different, and remote from such natural idea, and into this spiritual idea the above words are instantly ~~turned~~ : the case is the same with other passages in the Word ; as for example ; when the expression bread is read, the angels have no perception of bread, but instantly, instead of bread, they have a perception of celestial love, and of whatever appertains to celestial love, that is, love to the Lord ; and when the expression wine is read, they have no perception of wine, but instead of wine they have a perception of spiritual love, and of whatever appertains to such love, that is, charity towards their neighbour ; so when the expression pulse is read, they have no perception of pulse, but of doctrinals not yet conjoined to good, thus of an inordinate heap thereof: hence it may appear what, and of what quality, is the thought and perception of angels, and how remote it is from the thought and perception of man; if man thought in like manner, whilst he is in a principle of sanctity, as whilst he is at the holy supper, and instead of bread had a perception of love to the Lord, and instead of wine had a perception of love to his neighbour, he would then be in like thought and perception with angels, who would in such case approach nearer to him, till at length they might be able to consociate their thoughts, but this only so far as man was at the same time principled in good. That pulse signifies an heap of things inordinate, may also appear from what is said of the sons of the prophets, and of Elisha, in the Book of Kings, "Elisha returned to Gilgal, and there was a famine in the land, and the sons of the prophets were sitting before him; and he said to his boy, set on the great pot, and boil pulse for the sons of the prophets; and there went out one into the field to gather herbs, and he found a vine of the field and gathered from it wild gourds his garment full, and came and cut them in pieces into the pot of pulse, because they knew not, and poured out to the men to eat, and it came to pass, in eating of the pulse, they cried out, and said, there is death in the pot, O man of God, and they could not eat; and he said, take ye fine flour, and he put it into the pot, and said, pour out for the people, and they did eat, and there was no evil word in the pot," 2 Kings iv. 38; 39, 40, 41; these words, in the internal sense, have a signification altogether different from what appears in the sense of the letter; a famine in the land, according to the internal sense, denotes a scarcity of the knowledges of good and of truth, see n. 1460; the sons of the prophets denote those who teach, see n. 2534; pulse denotes an heap of scientifics ill-connected together; fine flour denotes truth which is derived from good, or what is spiritual derived from what is celestial, see n. 2177; thus by Elisha's putting fine flour in the pot, and there being then no evil in it, is signified, that that heap of ill-connected scientifics was amended by spiritual truth from the word of the Lord, for Elisha represented the Lord as to the Word, see n. 2762; without this ~~spiritual sense~~, the relation concerning pulse, and the change wrought by fine flour, would not have been worthy to be recorded in the most holy Word; it was for the sake of the things represented thereby, that this miracle was wrought, as also the rest of the miracles mentioned in the Word, all which involve in them things Divine.

3317. "And Esau came from the field" that hereby is signified studious application of the good of life, appears from the representation of Esau, as denoting the good of the life of natural truth, see n. 3300 ; and from the signification of coming from the field, as denoting the studious application of good ; for to meditate in the field, is to think in good, see n. 3196, for field denotes good which is of the Church, see n. 2971.

3318. "And he was weary"—that hereby is signified a state of combat, may appear from the signification of being weary, or of weariness, as denoting a state after combat, in the present case a state of combat, because the subject treated of is concerning the conjunction of good with truth in the natural man ; that being weary here signifies a state of combat, cannot appear except from the series of things treated of in the internal sense, and especially from this consideration, that good cannot be joined with truth in the natural man without combats, or, what is the same thing, without temptations : in order that it may be known how this case is, in respect to man, it may be expedient briefly to explain it. Man is nothing else but an organ, or vessel, which receives life from the Lord, for man does not live from himself, see n. 290, 2021, 2536, 2706, 1954, 2886 to 2889, 3001 ; the life, which flows in with man from the Lord, is from His Divine Love ; this love, or life thence derived, flows in and applies itself to the vessels which are in man's rational principle and in his natural [principle] ; these vessels with man are in a contrary situation in respect to the influent life in consequence of the hereditary evil to which man is born, and of the actual evil which he procures to himself ; but in proportion as the influent life can dispose the vessels to receive it, so far it does dispose them : these vessels in the rational man, and in the natural [principle] thereof, are those things which are called truths, which in themselves are nothing but perceptions of the variations of the forms of those vessels, and of the changes of state, according to which, in divers manners, the variations exist, which are effected in the most subtle substances, by methods inexpressible, see n. 2478 ; essential good, which has life from the Lord, or which is life, is what flows in and disposes to orderly arrangement : when therefore these vessels, which are variable as to forms, are in a contrary position and direction in respect to the influent life, as was said, it may be evident that they must be reduced to a position according to the influent life, or in compliance therewith ; this can in no wise be effected, so long as man is in that state in which he is born, and to which he has reduced himself, for in this case the vessels are not obedient, being obstinately repugnant, and opposing with all their might the heavenly order, according to which the influent life operates ; for the good which moves them, and with which they comply, is the good of self-love and the love of the world, which good, by reason of the crass principle of heat wherewith it is influenced, causes in them such a repugnant quality ; wherefore, before they can be rendered compliant, and be made meet to receive any thing of the life of the Lord's love, they must be softened; this softening is effected by no other means than by temptations; for temptations remove what appertains to self-love, and to contempt of others in comparison with ourselves, consequently whatever appertains to self-glory, and also to hatred and revenge thence arising; when therefore the vessels are somewhat tempered and subdued by temptations, then they begin to be yielding to, and compliant with the Life of the Lord's Love, which is continually flowing in with man; hence then it is, that good begins to be conjoined to truths, first in the rational man, and afterwards in the natural; for truths, as was observed, are nothing else but perceptions of the variations of the form according to states which are continually changing, and perceptions are from the life which flows in; this is the reason why man is regenerated, that is, is made new by temptations, or, what is the same thing, by spiritual combats, and that he is afterwards gifted with another temper or disposition, being made mild, humble, simple, and contrite in heart. From these considerations then it may appear what use temptations promote, viz. this, that good from the Lord may not only flow in, but may also dispose the vessels to obedience, and thus conjoin itself with them: that truths are vessels receptive of good, may be seen, n. 1496, 1832, 1900, 2063, 2261, 2269. In the present passage therefore, as the subject treated of is concerning the conjunction of good and of truth in the natural man, and as the first beginning of conjunction exists by combats, which are the combats of temptations, it may appear plain, that by the words, he was weary, is signified a state of combat. But as to what respects the Lord, of Whom this passage treats in the supreme sense, He, by the most grievous temptation-combats, reduced all things in Himself into Divine Order, insomuch, that there remained nothing at all of the human principle which He had derived from the mother, see n. 1444, 1573, 2159, 2574, 2649, 3036; so that He was not made new as another man, but altogether Divine, for man, who is made new by regeneration, still retains in himself an inclination to evil, yea is essential evil, but is withheld from evil by an influx of the Life of the Lord's Love, and this by exceedingly strong power; whereas the Lord entirely cast out every evil ~~which was hereditary to Him from the mother~~, and made Himself Divine, even as to the vessels, that is as to truths; this is what is called in the Word, Glorification.

3319. "And Esau said to Jacob"—that hereby is signified the Lord's perception from the good of the natural principle, appears from the signification of saying, as denoting to perceive, see n. 1791, 1815, 1819, 1822, 1898, 1919, 2080, 2862; and from the representation of Esau, as denoting the Lord, as to the good of the natural [principle], see n. 3300, 3302, and in what follows concerning Edom; and from the representation of Jacob, as denoting the truth of the natural [principle], see n. 3305, concerning which is the perception.

3320. "Cause me I pray to sup of the red"—that hereby is signified a desire of doctrinals; and that this red signifies what is apparently good, appears from the signification of supping, as denoting to be communicated and conjoined, see n. 3089; hence this expression, "Cause me to sup I pray," denotes to desire the conjunction of truth or of doctrinals with himself; and from the signification of red, as denoting good, see n. 3300, in the present case what is apparently good, because doctrinals howsoever arranged appear as good in the external form, although inwardly they are a confused heap, see n. 3316. The ground and reason why these things are mentioned, is, because hence Esau had the name Edom; for red in the original tongue is called Edom, and that for this purpose, that by Edom may be signified the good, to which are adjoined the doctrinals of truth.

3321. "Because I am weary"—that hereby is signified a state of combat, appears from the signification of being weary, or of weariness, as denoting a state of combat, see n. 3318; the reason why mention is here again made of being weary, is for the sake of confirmation, that the conjunction of good with truth in the natural principle, is effected by spiritual combats, that is, by temptations. In regard to [the conjunction of good with truth in the natural principle, the case in general is this, that man's rational principle receives truths before the natural principle, and this is to the intent, that the Lord's Life, which, as was observed, is the Life of Love, may flow in through the rational into the natural principle, and dispose this latter, and reduce it to obedience: for the rational principle is of a purer nature, and the natural more crass or gross, or what is the same thing, the former is interior and the latter exterior; and it is according to an order, which may be known, that the former is capable of flowing into the latter, but not the latter into the former; hence it is, that man's rational principle can be accommodated to truths, and receive them, before his natural principle, as may manifestly appear from this consideration, that the rational man, in the course of regeneration, combats much with the natural, or, what is the same thing, the internal man with the external; for the internal man, as is also known, can see truths, and also will them, whilst the external refuses assent and resists; for in the natural man there are scientifics which are in a great measure derived from the fallacies of the senses, and which, notwithstanding their being false he believes to be true; there are also things innumerable which the natural man does not comprehend, he being respectively in shade and darkness, and what he does not comprehend, he believes either not to exist, or not to be so : there are likewise many lusts, appertaining to self-love and the love of the world, and whatever things favour these lusts, he calls truths ; and when man yields up the dominion thereto, all things thence derived are contrary to spiritual truths : besides these things, there are in the natural man reasonings, grounded in false principles impressed from infancy : moreover, the things which are in the natural man are apprehended manifestly by the senses, but not so the things which are in the rational man until the putting off the material body ; this also operates as a reason, why he believes that to be all, which affects the natural senses, and that to be scarce any thing which does not affect them : such causes as these, and several others which might be mentioned, tend to produce this effect, that the natural man receives truths much later and with greater difficulty than the rational man ; hence arises combat, which continues for a considerable time, and does not cease until the vessels recipient of good in the natural man are softened by temptations, as was shewn above, n. 3317 ; for truths are nothing else but vessels receptive of good, see n. 1496, 1832, 1900, 2063, 2261, 2269, which vessels are harder in proportion as man is more fixedly confirmed in the things just now mentioned ; and the more fixedly he is confirmed therein, so much the more grievous is the combat, in case he is to be regenerated. This then being the case with the natural man, that the conjunction of truths with good therein is effected by temptation-combats, it is therefore here again said, “ I am weary.”

3322, “ Therefore he called his name Edom ”—that hereby is signified his quality thence derived as to good, to which are adjoined the doctrinals of truth, appears from the signification of calling a name, or of calling by name, as denoting quality, see n. 144, 145, 1754, 1896, 2009, 2724, 3006 ; and from the representation of Edom. In the Word throughout, mention is made of Esau, and also of Edom, and by Esau is signified the good of the natural principle, before the doctrinals of truth are so fully joined to that good, and also the good of life derived from influx out of the rational [principle] ; and by Edom is signified the good of the natural [principle] to which are adjoined the doctrinals of truth ; but in an opposite sense, Esau signifies the evil of self-love, before false principles are so fully adjoined to that evil ; and Edom signifies the evil of that love, when those false principles are adjoined to it. Several names in the Word have also an opposite sense, as has been often shewn above, by reason that what is good and true in the Church, in process of time, degenerates into what is evil and false by various adulterations. That such things are signified by Esau and Edom, may appear from the following passages, “ Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah, honourable in His apparel, walking in the multitude of His strength ? wherefore He is red as to His apparel, and His garments as of one that treadeth the wine-press; I have trodden the wine-press alone, and of the people there was no man with Me; I looked around but there was none to help, and I was amazed and there was none to support, and My own arm saved me," Isaiah lxiii. 1, 2, 3, 5; where it is very evident that Edom is the Lord: and that He is the Lord as to the Divine Good of the Divine Natural principle, is manifest, inasmuch as the subject treated of is concerning the conjunction of good and of truth in the Lord's Human [principle], and concerning the temptation-combats whereby He conjoined them. That garments, in this passage, are truths of the natural man, or truths of a respectively inferior order, may be seen n. 2576; and that red denotes the good of the natural [principle], n. 3300; that the Lord by his own proper power, through temptation-combats, conjoined truths to good in the natural principle, is described by His treading the wine-press alone, and by what is added, that of the people there was no man with Him, I looked around but there was none to help, I was amazed and none to support, and My own arm saved Me; that arm denotes power, see n. 878. So in the book of Judges, "Jehovah, when Thou wentest forth out of Seir, when Thou departedst out of the field of Edom, the earth trembled, the heavens also dropped, the clouds also dropped, the mountains melted down." v. 4, 5; to depart out of the field of Edom, has nearly the same signification as, in Isaiah, to come out of Edom: in like manner in Moses, "Jehovah came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them," Deut. xxxiii. 2: again, "I see him and not now, I behold him and he is not near; a star shall arise out of Jacob, and a sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and Edom shall be the inheritance, and Seir shall be the inheritance, of his enemies, and Israel shall cause strength, and shall have dominion over Jacob, and shall destroy the residue out of the city," Numb. xxiv. 17, 18, 19; speaking of the Lord's coming into the world, whose Human essence is called a star out of Jacob, and a sceptre out of Israel; Edom and Seir, which should be an inheritance, denote the Divine good of the Lord's Divine Natural principle; their being the inheritance of his enemies, denotes that Divine Good should succeed in the place of those things which were before in the natural principle; dominion in such case obtained over truths therein, is meant by having dominion over Jacob, and destroying the residue out of the city; that Jacob denotes truth of the natural principle, see n. 3305, and that city denotes doctrinals, n. 402, 2268, 2449, 2712, 2943, 3216; dominion is said to be had over these, when they are subordinate and subject to good, and before this they are called enemies, because they continually resist, as was shewn above, n. 3320: so in Amos, "In that day I will raise up again the tent of David that was fallen down, I will hedge up the breaches thereof, and will restore what was destroyed, and will build it up according to the days of eternity, that they may possess the remains of Edom, and all the nations upon whom My name is called, ix. 11, 12; where the tent of David denotes the Church and worship of the Lord; the remains of Edom denote those who are principled in good within the Church; the nations upon whom His name is called, denote those who are principled in good out of the Church; that the nations denote those who are principled in good, see n. 1259, 1260, 1416, 1849; so in the Psalms, “over Edom will I cast my shoe: who shall lead me to the city of security? who shall lead me even to Edom?” wilt not thou, O God? lx. 8, 9, 10; where Edom denotes the good of the natural principle, which is evident from the signification of shoe, as denoting the lowest natural principle, see n. 1748. So in Daniel, “In the time of the end the king of the south shall strive with him; therefore as a storm shall the king of the north rush upon him with a chariot, and shall overflow and penetrate; and when he shall come into the land of honourableness, many shall fall together; nevertheless these shall be snatched out of his hand, Edom and Moab, and the first-fruits of the sons of Ammon,” xi. 40, 41; speaking of the last state of the Church; the king of the north denotes false principles, or those who are in false principles, which is the same thing; Edom denotes those who are in simple good, which is a good appertaining to those who constitute the Lord’s external Church; in like manner Moab and the sons of Ammon, see n. 2468; and because both, viz. Edom and Moab, signify those who are principled in good, therefore in many passages both are named together, but the difference is, that Edom denotes the good of the natural principle, to which are adjoined the doctrinals of truth, whereas Moab denotes natural good, such as has place with those with whom the doctrinals of truth are not conjoined; the former and the latter appear alike in their external form, but not in their internal. Hence now it appears why it was said, “Thou shalt not abhor the Edomite, because he is a brother, nor the Egyptian, because thou wast a stranger in his land.” Deut. xxiii. 7; inasmuch as by the Edomite is signified the good of the natural principle, and by the Egyptian the truths thereof, which are scientifics, see n. 1164, 1165, 1186, 1462, therefore both ~~are mentioned~~ in a good sense. Hence also it is manifest, why Jehovah said unto Moses, “that they should not mix hands with the sons of Esau, and there should not be given of their land, even to the treading of the sole of the foot, to the sons of Jacob,” Deut. ii. 4, 5, 6. But in an opposite sense, by Esau and Edom are represented those who turn away from good, in that they altogether despise truth, and are unwilling that any thing of the truth of faith should be adjoined, which is owing principally to self-love, wherefore, in an opposite sense, by Esau and Edom such persons are signified; which was also represented by this circumstance, that the king of Edom went forth with a numerous people and a strong hand, and refused to permit Israel to pass through their border, Numb. xx. 14 to 22; this evil, viz. of self-love, which is of such a nature as not to admit the truths of faith, consequently neither the doctrinals of truth, is described in various passages of the Word by Esau and Edom, and at the same time is described the state of the Church when it becomes of such a nature; as in Jeremiah, "Against Edom, is there no longer wisdom in Teman? Hath counsel perished from the intelligent? Is their wisdom become of an ill savour? Flee ye; they have turned themselves away, they have gone into the deep to inhabit, O inhabitants of Dedan, because I will bring the calamity of Esau upon him, I will make Esau bare, I will reveal his hidden things, and he may not be hid; his seed is wasted, and his brethren, and his neighbours: leave thy orphans, I will make alive, and thy widows, let them confide on me; Edom shall be for a wasteness, every one that passeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss upon all the plagues thereof," xlix. 7, 8, 10, 11, 17, and the following verses: so in David, "They say, let not the name of Israel be mentioned any more, because they consult together with one heart, the tents of Edom, and the Ishmaelites, and Moab, and the Hagarenes are confederate upon thee," Psalm lxxxiii. 4, 5, 6. So in Obadiah, "Thus saith the Lord Jehovah to Edom, behold I have given thee a little one in the nations; thou art greatly despised, the pride of thy own heart hath deceived thee, dwelling in the clefts of the rock, the height of thy habitation, who sayest in thine heart, who shall pull me down to the earth? Though thou hast exalted thyself as an eagle, and though thou hast set thy nest among the stars, I will pull thee down thence; how are Esau searched out, their hidden things discovered! shall I not, in that day, destroy the wise out of Edom, and the intelligent from the mount of Esau? for the violence of thy brother Jacob shame shall cover thee, and thou shalt be cut off for ever, the house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Esau for stubble, and they shall kindle them, and shall consume them, and there shall not be any remaining to the house of Esau and they of the south shall inherit the mount of Esau," i. 2, 6, 8, 9, 10, 18, 19, 21; in this passage Esau and Edom denote evil in the natural man originating in self-love, which despises and rejects all truth, whence comes the devastation thereof; so in Ezechiel, "Son of man set thy faces against Mount Seir, and prophecy against it, and say unto it, thus saith the Lord Jehovah, I am against thee, O Mount Seir, and I will stretch forth My hand against thee; and I will give thee a wasting and devastation, because thou hast eternal enmity, and causest the sons of Israel to flow upon the hands of the sword, in the time of their destruction, in the time of the iniquity of the end, because thou hast said of two nations, and of two lands, they are mine, and we will inherit it, and Jehovah is there; and thou shalt know that I Jehovah have heard all thy reproaches, which thou hast spoken against the mountains of Israel; Mount Seir shall be a waste, and all Edom wholly," xxxv. 2, 3, 4, 8, 9, 10, 12, 15; where it is very manifest, that Edom, in an opposite sense, denotes those who despise, reject, and vilify spiritual goods and truths, which are the mountains of Israel. Again, in the same prophet, "Thus saith the Lord Jehovah, if I have not spoken in the fire of My zeal upon the remains of the nations, and upon whole Edom, who hath given my land themselves for an inheritance, with the joy of every heart, with contempt of soul," xxxvi. 5; where the sense is the same as above; to give the land to themselves for an inheritance, denotes to vastate the Church, that is to vastate good and truth, which are of the Church. So in Malachi, "The Word of Jehovah against Israel, I have loved you, saith Jehovah, and ye say, wherein hast thou loved us? Is not Esau brother to Jacob, and I love Jacob and hate Esau, and I place his mountain a wasteness," i. 1, 2, 3; in this passage Esau denotes evil of the natural principle, which does not admit spiritual truth, or Israel, n. 3305, and the doctrinal of truth, which is Jacob, n. 3305; and on this account he is vastated, which is signified by being hated; that this is the signification of being hated, appears from what was adduced above out of the Word, concerning Esau and Edom in a good sense: but when truth does not suffer itself to be adjoined to good, then it is said of Jacob contrariwise, as in Hosea, "To visit upon Jacob his ways, according to his works he will recompense him, in the womb he supplanted his brother," xii. 2, 3.

3323. Verses 31, 32, 33. And Jacob said, sell me as to-day thy birthright. And Esau said, behold I am going to die, and for what is this birthright to me? and Jacob said, swear to me as to-day, and he sware to him, and sold his birthright to Jacob. Jacob said, signifies the doctrine of truth; sell as to-day the birthright to me, signifies that as to time the doctrine of truth was apparently prior; and Esau said, behold I am going to die, signifies that he would afterwards rise again: and for what is this birthright to me, signifies that in such case he had no need of priority; and Jacob said, signifies the doctrine of truth: swear to me as to-day, and he sware to him, signifies confirmation; and sold his birthright to Jacob, signifies that in the mean while priority was granted.

3324. "Jacob said"—that hereby is signified the doctrine of truth, appears from the representation of Jacob, as denoting the doctrine of natural truth, see n. 3305, or what is the same thing, those who are principled in the doctrine of truth. The subject treated of in these verses even to the end of this chapter is concerning the right of priority, whether it be of truth or of good; or, what is the same thing, whether it be of the doctrine of truth, or of the life of good, or, what is still the same thing, whether it be of faith so far as this is truth of doctrine, or whether it be of charity so far as this is good of life. When man concludes from natural perception, he believes that faith, so far as it is truth of doctrine, is prior to charity so far as this is good of life, because he perceives how truth enters which appertains to doctrine, but not how the good, which appertains to life, enters, for the former enters by an external way, viz. that of the senses, whereas the latter enters by an internal way; also because he cannot know otherwise than that truth, inasmuch as it teaches what is good, is prior to good; and further, because the reformation of man is effected by truth and also according to truth, insomuch that man is perfected as to good in proportion to the quantity of truth which can be conjoined to it, consequently good is perfected by truth; and still more, because man may be principled in truth, and think and speak under its influence, and this with apparent zeal, and yet not at the same time be principled in good; yea, he may even, by virtue of truth, be in confidence of salvation. These, and several other such considerations lead man to suppose, when judging from the sensual and natural principle, that truth, which appertains to faith, is prior to good which appertains to charity; but all these are reasonings grounded in fallacies, because it appears so to the sensual and natural man. Essential good which is of life is prior, such good being the very ground in which truths are to be inseminated, and such as the ground is, such is the reception of the seeds, that is, of the truths of faith; truths may indeed be first stored up in the memory, like seeds in a granary, or in the little bag in the throats of small birds, but they do not appertain to the man, unless the ground be prepared, and such as the ground is, that is, such as the good is, such is their germination and fructification: but see on this subject what has been frequently shewn above, which we shall here adduce under particular articles, in order that it may be known what good is, and what is truth, and that priority belongs to good and not to truth: the particulars are as follow, why a distinct idea is not formed of the difference between good and truth, n. 2597: That good flows in by an internal way unknown to man, whereas truth is procured by an external way known to man, 3030, 3098. That truths are vessels recipient of good, n. 1496, 1832, 1900, 2063, 2261, 2269, 3068, 3318. That good acknowledges its own truth, to which it may be conjoined, n. 3101, 3202, 3318; and that most exquisite examination is made, and caution taken, lest what is false should be conjoined to good, and what is true to evil, n. 3033, 3101, 3102. That good makes to itself the truth to which it may be conjoined, because it does not acknowledge anything as truth, but what agrees with it, n. 3161. That truth is nothing else but what is derived from good, n. 2434. That truth is the form of good, n. 3049. That truth has in itself an image of good, and in good the very effigy of itself, from which it exists, n. 3180. That the seed, which is truth, is rooted in the good which is of charity, n. 880. That faith cannot possibly exist but in its life, that is, in love and charity, n. 379, 389, 654, 724, 1608, 2343, 2349. That from love and charity man may look at or have respect to truths, which appertain to doctrinals of faith, but not vice versâ, n. 2454. That to look from faith, and not from love and charity, is to look behind one's self, and to return back, n. 2454. That truth is made alive according to the good of every one, consequently according to the state of innocence and charity with man, n. 1776, 3111. That the truths of faith can be received only by those who are principled in good, n. 2343, 2349. Who they are that can come into the knowledges of truth and into faith, and who cannot, n. 2689. That the Church is not a Church, unless the truth of doctrinals is implanted in the good of life, n. 3310. That doctrinals do not constitute a Church, but that charity does, n. 809, 916, 1798, 1799, 1834, 1844. That the doctrinals of a Church are nothing unless men live according to them, n. 1515. That the doctrine of faith is the doctrine of charity, n. 2571. That the Church exists by virtue of charity, and not by faith separate from charity, n. 916. That every one may know from charity, whether he has the internal principle of worship, n. 1102, 1151, 1153. That the Lord's Church throughout the earth is every where various as to truths, but that it is one by charity, n. 3267. That the Church would be one if all had charity, although they might differ as to rituals and doctrinals, n. 1809, 1285, 1316, 1798, 1799, 1834, 1844. That out of many would be made one Church, if all accounted charity and not faith essential to the Church, n. 2982. That there are two kinds of doctrinals, doctrinals of charity, and doctrinals of faith, and that in the ancient Church there were doctrinals of charity, which at this day are lost, n. 2417. In what ignorance of truth they are, who are not principled in doctrinals of charity, n. 2435. And whereas at this day, faith is made essential to the Church, the things which the Lord has spoken concerning love and charity are not even seen or attended to, n. 1017, 2373. That good, appertaining to love to the Lord and to charity towards our neighbour, is superior and prior to truth appertaining to faith, n. 363, 364.

3325. "Sell as to-day thy birthright to me"—that hereby is signified that as to time the doctrine of truth was apparently prior, appears from the signification of selling, as denoting to claim one's self; and from the signification of to-day as denoting as to time; to-day, in the internal sense of the Word, signifying what is perpetual and eternal, n. 2838; to prevent this being perpetual and eternal, it is said as to-day, and thus by as is denoted, that it is apparently; and from the signification of birth-right, as denoting to be prior, viz. the doctrine of truth which is represented by Jacob, n. 3305. By prior, or priority, which is birthright [primogeniture], is meant not only priority of time, but also priority of degree, viz. which should have the dominion, good or truth; for truth, before it is conjoined to good, or, what is the same thing, they who are in truth, before they are regenerate, are always such, that they believe truth to be both prior and superior to good, and so likewise it appears at that time: but when truth is conjoined to good in them, that is when they are regenerated, then they see and perceive that truth is posterior and inferior, and in this case good has the dominion over truth in them, which is signified by what Isaac the father said to Esau in these words, "Behold thy dwelling shall be of the fatnesses of the earth, and of the dew of heaven from above; and on thy sword shalt thou live, and shalt serve thy brother; and it shall come to pass, when thou hast the dominion, thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck," Gen. xxviii. 39, 40. But whereas within the Church there are more who are not regenerated, than who are regenerated; and whereas they who are not regenerated conclude from appearance; therefore there has been dispute, and this from ancient times, concerning the priority, whether it be of truth or of good. With those who were not regenerated, and also with those who were not fully regenerated, the opinion prevailed that truth is prior, for as yet they had no perception of good, and so long as there is no perception of good, the mind must needs be in shade, or in ignorance on things of this nature; but they who are regenerated, inasmuch as they are principled in essential good, they are enabled to perceive, by virtue of intelligence and wisdom thence derived, what good is, and that it is from the Lord, and that it flows in through the internal man into the external, and this continually, man being altogether ignorant thereof, and that it adjoins itself to the truths of doctrinals which are in the memory, consequently that good in itself is prior, although it did not before appear so. Hence then came the dispute about the priority and superiority of the one principle over the other, which was represented by Esau and Jacob, and also by Phares and Zarah the sons of Judah, by Tamar, Gen. xxxviii. 28, 29, 30; afterwards also by Ephraim and Manasseh the sons of Joseph, Gen. xlviii. 13, 14, 17, 18, 19, 20; and this because the spiritual Church is such, that it must be introduced by truth into good, and in this case be without perception of good, unless according to the quantity and quality which lies concealed in the affection of truth, at which time it cannot be distinguished from the delight of self-love and the love of the world, which is together in that affection, and is believed to be good. But that good is the first-born, that is, the good of love to the Lord, and of love towards our neighbour, (for there is no other good but what is grounded in this love) may appear from this consideration, that in good there is life, but not in truth, except so far as it has life from good, and that good flows into truths, and causes them to live, as may plainly enough appear from what was said and shewn above concerning good and truth, n. 3324; wherefore all are called first-born, who are principled in love to the Lord, and in charity towards their neighbour, and these are also represented by the first-born in the Jewish Church, that is, are understood in a respective sense, because the Lord is the First-born, and they are in His likenesses and images. That the Lord, as to the Divine Human [principle], is the First-born, appears from David in these words, "He shall call Me, Thou art My Father, My God, and the rock of My salvation, also I will give him the first-born, high above the kings of the earth, My mercy will I keep for Him for evermore, and my covenant shall be fast to Him, His seed also will I place for ever, and His throne as the days of ages," Psalm lxxxix, 26, 27, 28, 29; speaking of the Lord: and in the Apocalypse, "From Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness, the first-born of mortals, and the prince of the kings of the earth," chap. i. 5. That the things which are written and represented concerning Him, might also be fulfilled, He was likewise by birth the first-born, Luke ii. 7, 22, 23. That they are also called the first-born (or first begotten) of the Lord, who are principled in love to Him, and in charity towards their neighbour, as being likenesses and images of Him, is evident from these words in the Apocalypse, "An hundred forty and four thousands, bought from the earth; these are they who were not defiled with women, for they are virgins; these are they who follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth; these were bought from amongst men, the first fruits (first begotten) to God and the Lamb; and in their mouth was found no guile, for they are without spot before the throne of God," chap. xiv. 4, 5; an hundred forty and four, or twelve times twelve, denote those who are principled in the faith of charity, see n. 3272; thousands denote innumerable or all those, n. 2575; virgins denote the good of love to the Lord and of charity towards our neighbour, n. 2362, 3081, consequently those who are in innocence, which is also signified by following the Lamb, for the Lord is called Lamb from innocence; hence they are said to be first fruits or first-begotten. From the above passages it is evident that the Lord, as to the Divine Human [principle], was represented in the Jewish Church by what was first-born

(or first-begotten) and also they who are principled in love to Him, for these are in the Lord; but what is first-born (or first-begotten) has in the Word a two-fold representation, representing the Lord as to Divine celestial love, and as to Divine spiritual love; the Divine celestial love of the Lord is respective to the celestial Church, or to those who are of that Church, who are called celestial by virtue of love to the Lord; the Divine spiritual love of the Lord is respective to the spiritual Church, or to those who are of that Church, who are called spiritual by virtue of love towards their neighbour; the Divine Love of the Lord is towards all, but inasmuch as it is variously received by men, in one way by the celestial man, and in another by the spiritual man, therefore it is said to be respective. Concerning the first-born (or first begotten) which represented the Lord as to Divine celestial love, and also those respectively who were of the celestial Church, it is thus written in Moses, "The first-born of thy sons thou shalt give unto Me, so shalt thou do to thy herd and to thy flock; seven days it shall be with its dam, on the eighth thou shalt give it unto Me; and ye shall be to me men of holiness," Exod. xxii. 28, 29, 30: the reason why it should be seven days with the dam was, because the seventh day signified the celestial man, see n. 84, 85, 86, 87, and because seven thence signified what is holy, n. 395, 433, 716, 881; the reason why it should be given to Jehovah on the eighth day was, because the eighth day signified what was continuous from a new beginning, viz. the continuous principle of love, see n. 2044. So again, "The first-born (or first-begotten), which is given to Jehovah for a first-born in cattle, a man shall not sanctify it, whether it be an ox, or cattle, it is Jehovah's," Levit. xxvii. 26, 27: again, "The first fruits of all that is in the earth, which they shall bring to Jehovah, shall be for thee (Aaron): every opening of the womb, as to all flesh, which they shall offer to Jehovah, in man and in beast, shall be for thee: nevertheless thou shalt redeem the first-born (or first-begotten) of man; and the first-born of an unclean beast thou shalt redeem: the first-born of an ox, or the first-born of a sheep, or the first-born of a goat, thou shalt not redeem, they are an holy thing, their blood shalt thou sprinkle upon the altar and their fat shalt thou burn, it is an offering of fire for an odour of rest to Jehovah," Numb. xviii. 12, 13, 15, 17: again, "All the first-born, which shall be born in thine herd, and in thy flock, a male, thou shalt sanctify to Jehovah thy God, thou shalt not do any work by the first-born of thine ox; and thou shalt not shear the first-born of thy flock; if there be any spot therein, lame, or blind, whatsoever evil spot, thou shalt not sacrifice it to Jehovah thy God," Deut. xv. 19, 20, 21, 22. Inasmuch as the first-born represented the Lord, and those who are the Lord's by virtue of love to Him, therefore the tribe of Levi was accepted instead of every first-born, ~~and~~

this by reason that Levi represented the Lord as to love; Levi also signified love, for Levi denotes adhesion and conjunction, and adhesion and conjunction in an internal sense is love, on which subject by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, more will be said in the explication of chap. xxix. 34. Concerning the Levites, it is thus written in Moses, "Jehovah spake to Moses, saying, behold I will accept the Levites out of the midst of the sons of Israel instead of all the first-born, the opening of the womb, of the sons of Israel, and they shall be Levites unto Me; because every first-born thing is for Me, in the day I smote every first-born thing in the land of Egypt, I sanctified to Myself every first-born thing in Israel, from man even to beast, they shall be for Me," Numb. iii. 11, 12, 13: again, "Jehovah said unto Moses, number every first-born male to the sons of Israel, from the son of a month and upwards, and take the number of their names, and accept the Levites for Me, I am Jehovah, instead of every first-born in the sons of Israel, and the beast of the Levites instead of every first-born in the beast of the sons of Israel," Numb. iii. 40, 41, and the subsequent verses; also chap. viii. 14, 16, 17, 18; and it is said, verse 19, that the Levites were given to Aaron, because Aaron represented the Lord as to the priesthood, that is, as to the Divine Love; that the priesthood represented the Divine Love of the Lord, may be seen, n. 1728, 2015: but concerning the first-born which represented the Lord as to Divine Spiritual Love, and also those respectively who are of the spiritual Church, it is thus written in Jeremiah, "In weeping shall they come, and in prayers will I bring them, I will lead them to fountains of waters, in the way of what is right, they shall not stumble therein, and I will be to Israel for a father, and Ephraim he shall be My first-born," xxxi. 9; speaking of a new spiritual Church, where Israel denotes spiritual good, Ephraim spiritual truth, who is called the first-born because the subject treated of is concerning a Church to be planted, in which the intellectual principle appertaining to truth is apparently the first-born; for Ephraim succeeded in the place of Reuben, and was made the first-born, Gen. xlviii. 5, 20; 1 Chron. v. 1; and this, because by Joseph, whose sons were Ephraim and Manasseh, was represented the Lord as to Divine Spiritual Love: but that Israel is essentially the first-born, that is, spiritual good, is plain from Moses, "Jehovah said to Moses, thou shalt say unto Pharaoh, thus saith Jehovah, Israel is My first born son, and I say unto thee, send My son, that he may serve me, and thou hast refused to send him, behold I will kill thy first-born son," Exod. iv. 22, 23; where Israel in a supreme sense is the Lord as to Divine Spiritual Love, but in a respective sense denotes those who are principled in spiritual love, that is, in charity towards their neighbour. In the spiritual Church, in the beginning, or when it is about to be planted, the doctrine of truth with the external Church is the first-born, and the truth of doctrine is the first-born with the internal Church, or what is the same thing, the doctrine of faith is the first-born with the external Church, and faith itself with the internal; but when the Church is planted, or where the Church actually exists, the good of charity is the first-born with the external Church, and charity itself with the internal; but when the Church does not suffer itself to be planted, which is the case when the man of the Church can no longer be regenerated, it then recedes successively from charity, and turns away to faith, being no longer studious of life but of doctrine, and when this the case, it casts itself into shades, and falls into false principles and evils, and thus becomes no Church, and is of itself extinguished; this was represented by Cain, in that he slew his brother Abel; that Cain is faith separate from charity, and that Abel is charity which he extinguished, may be seen, n. 340, 342, 357, 362; it was afterwards represented by Ham and his son Canaan, in that he mocked at his father Noah, see n. 1060, 1063, 1076, 1140, 1141, 1162, 1179; afterwards by Reuben the first-born of Jacob, in that he defiled his father's bed, Gen xxxv. 22; and lastly by Pharaoh and the Egyptians, in that they treated ill the sons of Israel; that all these were cursed, is evident from the Word; that Cain was cursed, appears from these words, "Jehovah said, what hast thou done, the voice of thy brother's bloods crying to me out of the ground; and now thou art cursed from off the ground, which hath opened its mouth, receiving the bloods of thy brother from thy hand," Gen. iv. 10, 11: that Ham and Canaan were cursed, appears from these words, "Ham the father of Canaan saw the nakedness of his father, and told his two brethren, and Noah awakening out of his wine, said, cursed is Canaan, a servant of servants shall he be to his brethren," Gen. ix. 22, 24, 25; and that Reuben was cursed, appears from these words, "Reuben my first-born, thou art my strength, and the beginning of my power, excelling in honour, and excelling in virtue; light as water, thou mayest not excel, because thou hast ascended thy father's bed, then thou pollutedst my couch," Gen. xlix. 3, 4; therefore he was deprived of the birthright (primogeniture), 1 Chron. v. 1; that the same was represented by Pharaoh and the Egyptians, and that therefore their first-born and first-born things were slain, appears from their representation, as denoting scientifics, see n. 1164, 1165, 1186, by which when man enters into the mysteries of faith, he no longer believes any thing but what he can apprehend sensually and scientifically, in which case he perverts and extinguishes the things appertaining to the doctrine of faith, and especially whatever relates to charity; this is what is represented in the internal sense by the first-born and first-born things of Egypt being slain, concerning which it is thus written in Moses, "I will pass through the land of Egypt this night, and I will smite all the first-born in the land of Egypt, from man even to beast, and on all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgments, I am Jehovah, and the blood shall be for a sign upon your houses, where ye are, and when I shall see the blood, I will pass besides you, and the plague shall not be to you for a destroyer in smiting the land of Egypt," Exod. xii. 12; the first-born of Egypt is the doctrinal of faith and of charity, which is perverted, as was said, by scientifics; the gods of Egypt, on whom judgments were to be executed, are false principles; by no plague being as a destroyer where blood was upon the house, is signified, in a supreme sense, where the Lord is as to Divine Spiritual Love, and in a respective sense, where spiritual love is, that is, charity towards our neighbour, n. 1001; moreover concerning Pharaoh and the Egyptians, it is thus written, "Moses said, thus saith Jehovah, in the middle of the night, I will go forth into the midst of Egypt, and all the first-born in the land of Egypt shall die, from the first-born of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne, to the first-born of the maid-servant who is behind the mills, and all the first-born of the beast; and to all the sons of Israel a dog shall not move his tongue, from a man even to a beast," Exod. xi. 4, 5, 6, 7. And again, "It came to pass in the middle of the night, and Jehovah smote all the first-born in the land of Egypt, from the first-born of Pharaoh that sat upon his throne, even to the first-born of the captive, who was in the prison-house, and all the first-born of the beast," Exod. xii. 29; the reason why this was done in the middle of the night was, because night signified the last state of the Church, when there is no longer any faith, because there is no charity, n. 221, 709, 1712, 2353: so in David, "He smote all the first-born in Egypt, the beginning of powers in the tents of Ham," Psalm lxxviii. 51: again, "Then came Israel into Egypt, and Jacob became a stranger in the land of Ham, God smote all the first-born in their land, the beginning of all their powers," Psalm cv. 23, 36; the worship of the Egyptians grounded in principles of what is false, arising from truth separate from good, or, what is the same thing, from faith separate from charity, is called the tents of Ham; that tents denote worship, see n. 414, 1102, 1566, 2145, 2152, 3312; and that Ham is faith separate from charity, may be seen, n. 1062, 1063, 1076, 1140, 1141, 1162, 1179; hence is further confirmed what is signified by the first-born of Egypt being slain; and whereas all the first-born was slain, but still the first-born represented the Lord as to Divine Spiritual Love, and at the same time those who are principled in that love, therefore it was commanded, at the instant of their departure, that all the first-born should be sanctified, as it is thus written, "Jehovah spake to Moses, saying, sanctify to Me all the first-born, the opening of every womb, in the sons of Israel; in man and in beast let them be Mine; thou shalt cause to pass every opening of the womb to Jehovah, and every opening of the fatus of a beast, which are to thee, males, to Jehovah. And every opening of an ass, thou shalt redeem in cattle, if thou shalt not redeem it, thou shalt break it's neck; and every first-born in thy sons thou shalt redeem. And it shall come to pass, that thy son shall ask thee to-morrow, saying, what is this? and thou shalt say to him, in a strong hand hath Jehovah brought us forth out of Egypt, out of the house of servants, and it came to pass, that Pharaoh hardened himself to send us away, and Jehovah slew all the first-born in the land of Egypt, from the first-born of man even to the first-born of beast; therefore I sacrifice to Jehovah every opening of the womb, the males, and every first-born of my sons I redeem," Exod. xiii. 2, 12, 13, 14, 15; chap. xxxiv. 19, 20; Numb. xxxiii. 3, 4. Hence then it may appear, what is signified in the spiritual sense by birthright (or primogeniture).

3326. "And Esau said, behold I am going to die"—that hereby is signified that he should afterwards rise again, appears from the representation of Esau, as denoting good of the natural principle, see n. 3302, 3322; and from the signification of dying, as denoting the last of a state, when any thing ceases to be, see n. 2908, 2912, 2917, 2923; and whereas the end of a former state is the beginning of a subsequent one, by going to die is here signified to rise again afterwards, in like manner as is signified by being buried; that to be buried denotes to rise again, see n. 2916, 2917, 3256. By rising again afterwards is to be understood, that good would obtain the priority or dominion over truth, after that truth, as to time, had held priority apparently, on which subject see above.

3327. "And for what is this birthright to me?"—that hereby is signified that in such case he had no need of priority, may appear without explication.

3328. "And Jacob said"—that hereby is signified the doctrine of truth, appears from the representation of Jacob, as denoting the doctrine of truth, see above n. 3324.

3329. "Swear to me as to-day, and he sware to him"—that hereby is signified confirmation, appears from the signification of swearing, as denoting to confirm, see n. 2824; and whereas confirmation was as to time, it is not said to-day, but as to-day, see n. 3325.

why truth in the beginning has dominion in the spiritual man, is, because in his first state there are delights of self-love and the love of the world, which he believes to be good, and which apply themselves to his truths, and cause in a very great measure the affection of truth in him; for he thinks at that time, that truths may be serviceable to him, either in promoting his honour or gain, or reputation in the world, or his merit in another life; all these things excite the affection of truth in him, and also enkindle it, which yet are not good, but evil; nevertheless the Lord permits that such things should influence him during this first period of regeneration, because otherwise he could not be regenerated; intelligence and wisdom come in their proper time; in the mean while by these truths he is introduced to good, that is, into charity, and when he is in charity, then first he perceives what is good, and acts from what is good, and then judges, and concludes concerning truths by virtue of such good, and those truths which do not accord with such good, he calls falses, and rejects them; thus he rules over truth, as a master over his servants.

3331. Verse 34. And Jacob gave unto Esau bread and pottage of pulse, and he eat, and drank, and rose up, and went, and Esau despised the birthright. Jacob gave to Esau bread and pottage of pulse, signifies the good of life gifted with the good of truth and the good of doctrinals: and he eat and drank, signifies appropriation: and rose up, signifies elevation thence derived: and went, signifies life: and Esau despised the birthright, signifies that the good of life in the mean while made no account of priority.

3332. "Jacob gave to Esau bread and pottage of pulse"—that hereby is signified the good of life gifted with the good of truth and the good of doctrinals, appears from the representation of Esau, as denoting the good of life, see n. 3300, 3322; and from the signification of bread, as denoting the good of love in general, as well celestial as spiritual, see n. 276, 680, 2165, 2177; consequently also the good of truth, for this is spiritual good; and from the signification of pottage of pulse, as denoting the good of doctrinals, for pottage signifies a heap of doctrinals, n. 3316, and pulse, the good thereof; by Jacob's giving them to Esau is signified, in the internal sense, that those things are good by the doctrine of truth, which is represented by Jacob, see n. 3305. In this last verse, by these words, and by those which follow, is described the progress as to truth and good, how it is with the spiritual man in the course of regeneration, viz. that he first learns the doctrinals of truth; next, that he is affected thereby, which is the good of doctrinals; afterwards that by looking into doctrinals he is affected with the truths which are therein, which is the good of truth; lastly, that he is willing to live according to them, which is the good of life; thus the spiritual man, in the course of regeneration, proceeds from the doctrine of truth to the good of life: but when he is in the good of life, then the order is inverted, and from that good he respects the good of truth, from this the good of doctrinals, and from this the doctrinals of truth: hence it may be known how man from sensual becomes spiritual, and what his nature and quality is when he becomes spiritual. That these goods, viz. the good of life, the good of truth, and the good of doctrinals, are distinct from each other, may appear to those who consider the matter well with themselves; the good of life is what flows from the will, the good of truth what flows from the understanding, but the good of doctrinals what flows from science; a doctrinal is that wherein these things are contained. That pulse signifies the good of doctrinals, appears from this consideration, that wheat, barley, beans, pulse, millet, fitches, are such things as signify bread, but with a difference in the species thereof; that bread in general denotes good, is evident from what was said and shewn, n. 276, 680, 2165, 2177; thus different species of good are signified by the things named, more noble species of good by wheat and barley, but less noble by beans and pulse, as is also manifest from what is written in Ezechiel, "Take to thyself wheat and barley, and beans and pulse, and millet and fitches, and put them into one vessel, and make them into bread for thyself," iv. 9, 12, 13.

3333. "And he eat and drank"—that hereby is signified appropriation, appears from the signification of eating, as denoting the appropriation of good, see n. 2187, 2343, 3168; and from the signification of drinking, as denoting the appropriation of truth, see n. 3069, 3089, 3168.

3334. "And rose up"—that hereby is signified elevation, appears from the signification of rising up, as denoting elevation wheresoever it occurs, see n. 2401, 2785, 2912, 2927; and from this consideration, that man is said to be elevated, when he is perfected as to things spiritual and celestial, that is, as to truth which is of faith, and as to good which is of love and charity, see n. 3171.

3335. "And went"—that hereby is signified life, appears from the signification of going, as denoting to advance into those things which appertain to good, that is, which appertain to the life, for all good is of life; in like manner nearly as is signified by departing, sojourning, and making a progress, see n. 1293, 1457.

3336. "And Esau despised the birthright"—that hereby is signified that the good of life in the mean while made no account of priority, appears from the signification of despising, as denoting to make no account of; and from the representation of Esau, as denoting the good of life, see n. 3300, 3322; and from the signification of birthright (primogeniture), as denoting priority, see n. 3325 ; that it is in the mean while, or as to time, may be seen, n. 3324, 3325, 3330 ; hence it is plain, that by Esau despising the birthright is signified that the good of life in the mean while made no account of priority. In order that the circumstances related in this chapter concerning Esau and Jacob may be apprehended as to what they signify in the internal sense, the thoughts must be removed entirely from the historicals, consequently from the persons of Esau and Jacob, and instead thereof must be substituted the things thereby represented, viz. the good of the natural principle and it's truth, or, what is the same thing, the spiritual man who is regenerated by truth and good : for names, in the internal sense of the Word, signify nothing else but things ; when the good of the natural principle and it's truth are apprehended instead of Esau and Jacob, it then appears evident how the case is with respect to man's regeneration by truth and good, viz. that in the beginning truth apparently has the priority and also superiority with him, although good in reality is prior and superior. In order to make it still more evident how the case is in regard to this priority and superiority, it may be expedient briefly to explain it further. It may be known to every one, that nothing can possibly enter into man's memory and remain there, unless there be a certain affection or love to introduce it ; if there be no affection, or, what is the same thing, no love, there would not be any perception ; it is this affection or love with which the thing that enters connects itself, and remains connected ; as may appear from this consideration, that when a similar affection or love returns, that thing returns, and is exhibited present with several things besides, which had before entered from a similar affection or love, and this in a series ; hence comes man's thought, and from thought his speech ; in like manner also, when the thing returns, if this is effected by objects of the senses, or by objects of the thought, or by the discourse of another person, the affection also is reproduced with which the thing had entered ; this experience teaches, and every one, if he reflects, may be confirmed herein ; doctrinals of truth enter also in like manner into the memory, and the things which at first introduce them there are affections of various loves, as was said above, n. 3330 ; the genuine affection, which is that of the good of charity, is not at that time perceived, but still it is present, and so far as it can be present, it is adjoined to doctrinals of truth from the Lord, and so far also they remain adjoined ; when therefore the time comes that man is capable of being regenerated, then the Lord inspires the affection of good, and thereby excites the things which were adjoined to that affection by Him, which things are called in the Word remains, and then by this affection, viz. the affection of good, He removes the affections of other loves successively, consequently also the things which were connected with them ; and thus the affection of good, or, what is the same thing, the good of life, begins to have dominion: it also had dominion before, but this could not appear to the man, for in proportion as man is in self-love and the love of the world, in the same proportion the good which is of genuine love does not appear. Hence then may be manifest what is signified in the internal sense by the things here historically related concerning Esau and Jacob.

A CONTINUATION OF THE SUBJECT CONCERNING REPRESENTATIONS AND CORRESPONDENCIES.

3337. WHAT correspondencies are, and what representations, may appear from what has been said and shewn above, viz. that between the things which are of the light of heaven and those which are of the light of the world, there exist correspondencies, and that the correspondencies which exist in those things, which are of the light of the world, are representations, n. 3225: but what the light of heaven is, and what is its nature and quality, cannot so well be known to man, because man is in those things which are of the light of the world; and in proportion as he is in these things, in the same proportion those things, which are in the light of heaven, appear to him as darkness, and as nothing: these two lights are what make all the intelligence of man whilst life enters by influx: the imagination of man consists solely of forms and species of such things as have been admitted by bodily vision, wonderfully varied, and if I may use the expression, modified; but his interior imagination, or his thinking principle, consists solely of forms and species of such things as have been admitted by the mind's vision, still more wonderfully varied, and if I may use the expression, modified; the things which thence exist, are in themselves inanimate, but they become animated by an influx of life from the Lord.

3338. Besides these lights, there are also heats, which likewise proceed from two fountains, the heat of heaven from the sun thereof, which is the Lord, and the heat of the world from the sun thereof which is the luminary seen by our eyes; the heat of heaven manifests itself to the internal man by spiritual loves and affections, whereas the heat of the world manifests itself to the external man by natural loves and affections; the former heat causes the life of the internal man, but the latter the life of the external man; for without love and affection man cannot live at all: these heats become loves and affections by influx of life from the Lord, and hence they appear to man as if they were not heats, but still they are; for unless man derived heat thence, both as to the internal and external man, he would fall down dead in an instant: this may be evident to any one from this consideration, that in proportion as man is inflamed by love, in the same proportion he grows warm, and in proportion as love cools, in the same proportion he grows torpid: it is this heat, by virtue whereof the will of man lives, and it is the light just now spoken of, by virtue whereof he has understanding.

3339. In another life these lights, and also these heats, appear livingly: the angels live in the light of heaven, and also in the heat above mentioned; from the light they have intelligence, and from the heat they have the affection of good; for the lights, which appear before their external sight, are in their origin from the Divine Wisdom of the Lord, and the heats, which are also perceived by them, are from the Divine Love of the Lord; wherefore in proportion as spirits and angels are in the intelligence of truth, and in the affection of good, in the same proportion they are nearer to the Lord.

3340. The above light has it's opposite darkness, and the above heat has it's opposite cold; therein the infernals live; their darkness arises from the false principles in which they are, and their cold is from evils; and the more remote they are from truths, so much greater is their darkness, and the more remote they are from good, so much greater is their cold: when it is given to look into the hells, where such infernals are, there appears a dark mist with which they are encompassed; and when any exhalation issues forth thence, there are perceived infatuations exhaling from false principles, and hatreds from evils. There is also granted them at times somewhat luminous [lumen], but it is like the luminous principle derived from an ignis fatuus, and even this is extinguished, and becomes darkness, as soon as they look into the light of truth; there is also granted them at times a warmth, but it is like the warmth of a filthy bath, and even this is changed into cold, as soon as they perceive any thing of good. A certain spirit was let into that dark mist, where the infernals are, in order that he might become acquainted with their state, and how it fared with them; but he was protected of the Lord by angels; discoursing with me from that place, he said, that there was in it such a rage of insanity against goodness and truth, and especially against the Lord, that he was amazed how it could possibly be resisted, for that the infernals therein breathed nothing else but hatreds, revenges, and murders, with such violence, as to be desirous of destroying all in the universe; wherefore unless this rage was continually repelled by the Lord, the whole human race would perish.

3341. Inasmuch as representations in another life cannot exist but by discriminations of light and shade, it is to be observed, that all light, consequently all intelligence and wisdom, is from the Lord; and that all shade, consequently all insanity and folly is from the proprium (proper life of self) appertaining to man, to spirit, and to angel; from these two origins flow forth and are derived all variegations which are of light and shade in another life.

3342. All the discourse of spirits and of angels is also effected by representatives; for they exhibit, by wonderful variations of light and shade, whatever is the object of their thoughts, in a living manner, before the internal, and at the same time the external sight of him with whom they discourse, and insinuate it by suitable changes of the state of the affections. The representations, which exist in such discourse, are not similar to those spoken of above, but are quick and instantaneous, together with the ideas which are the ideas of their discourse: they resemble the description of somewhat in a long series, whilst at the same time it is exhibited in a visible image to the sight; for, what is wonderful, spiritual things themselves, of whatsoever kind, may be representatively exhibited by species of images, which are incomprehensible to man, containing inwardly in them such things as appertain to the perception of truth, and still more interiorly such things as appertain to the perception of good. Such things are also in man, for man is a spirit clothed with a body; as may appear from this consideration, that all discourse perceived by the ear, when it ascends towards the interiors, passes into ideas not unlike the ideas of sight, and from these into intellectual ideas, and thus becomes a perception of the sense of the expressions. Whosoever rightly reflects upon this circumstance, may thence know that there is in himself a spirit, which is his internal man, and also that he has such speech or discourse after the separation of the body, because he is in the same during his life in the world, although it does not appear that he is in it, by reason of the obscurity, yea, the darkness occasioned by terrestrial, corporeal, and worldly things.

3343. The discourse with the angels of the interior heaven is still more beautifully and pleasantly representative, but the ideas, which are representatively exhibited, are not expressible by words, and in case they were to be expressed by any, they would exceed not only the apprehension, but also the belief; spiritual things, appertaining to truth, are expressed by modifications of heavenly light, in which are affections, which are wonderfully varied by methods indefinite; and celestial things, appertaining to good, are expressed by variations of celestial flame or heat; thus they move all the affections. Into this interior discourse man also comes after the separation of the body, but only such an one as is principled in spiritual good, that is, in the good of faith, or, what is the same thing, in charity towards his neighbour, during his life in the world; for inwardly he has such discourse in himself, although he is ignorant of it.

3344. But the discourse of the angels of the still interior or third heaven, though it be also representative, is yet such, as to be inconceivable by any idea, consequently to be undescribable. Nevertheless this idea is also inwardly in man, but in him only who is principled in celestial love, that is, in love to the Lord, and after the separation of the body he comes into it, as if born into it, although nothing of it could be comprehended by him under any idea, as was said, during his life in the body. In short, by representatives adjoined to ideas, discourse becomes as it were alive, least of all with man, because he is in the discourse of words; but more so with the angels of the first heaven; and still more so with the angels of the second heaven; and most of all with the angels of the third heaven, for these are most highly graduated in the life of the Lord, and whatsoever is from the Lord is in itself alive.

3345. Hence it may appear, that there are interior orders of speech or discourse, but still of such a nature, that one exists from another in order, and that one is in another by order; the speech or discourse of man is known, and also his thinking principle from which his speech or discourse flows, the analytical contents of which are such, that it is impossible they should ever be explored. The speech or discourse of good spirits or angels of the first heaven, and the thought from which it flows, is of an interior order, and contains in it things still more wonderful and inexorable. The speech or discourse of the angels of the second heaven, and the thought from which it again flows, is of an order still interior, containing in it things still more perfect and more ineffable: but the speech or discourse of the angels of the third heaven, and the thought from which it again flows, is inmost of all, containing in it things altogether ineffable: and although all these kinds of speech or discourse are such, that they appear as different from each other, nevertheless they are one, inasmuch as one forms another, and one is in another, but what exists in an exterior is representative of an interior. Man cannot believe this, because his thoughts are confined to worldly and corporeal things, and therefore he supposes that the interior things appertaining to him are nothing, when yet they are every thing, and exterior things, that is, worldly and corporeal things, which he imagines to be every thing, are respectively scarce any thing.

3346. In order that I might know these things, and be convinced thereof, it has been granted me, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, now for several years, almost continually to discourse with spirits and angels, and with spirits or angels of the first heaven, in their own proper speech; also at times with the angels of the second heaven in their proper speech; but the speech of the angels of the third heaven has only appeared to me as a radiation of light, in which there was perception derived from the flame of good that was in it.

3347. I have heard the angels discoursing concerning human minds, and concerning their thinking principle, and the speech or discourse thence derived; they compared them to the external form of man, which exists and subsists from the innumerable forms which are within, as from the brains, the marrows, the lungs, the heart, the liver, the pancreas, the spleen, the stomach, and the intestines, besides several other forms, as those which appertain to generation in both sexes; and from the innumerable muscles encompassing these organs, and lastly from their integuments; and that all these are compounded of vessels and fibres in close texture, and indeed of vessels and fibres within vessels and fibres, from which are ducts and lesser forms; thus existing and subsisting from things innumerable; all which nevertheless conspire, each in it's manner and measure, to the composition of the external form, in which nothing appears of the things that are within. To this form, viz. the external, they compared human minds, and the thoughts thereof, and the speech or discourse thence derived; whereas they compared angelic minds to those things which are within, which are respectively indefinite, and also incomprehensible: they compared also the faculty of thinking to the faculty of the viscera of acting according to the form of the fibres, saying, that the faculty was not of the fibres, but of the principle of life in the fibres, as the faculty of thinking is not of the mind, but of life from the Lord flowing into it. Such comparisons, when made by the angels, are also at the same time exhibited by representatives, whereby the interior forms above spoken of are presented visibly and intellectually, as to the smallest incomprehensible parts, and this in an instant; but comparisons by things spiritual and celestial, such as are made amongst the celestial angels, immensely exceed in beauty of wisdom the comparisons made by things natural.

3348. There were spirits from another earth attendant upon me for a considerable time; when I related to them the nature of that wisdom which is distinguished on our globe, how amongst the sciences (a skill in which is reckoned a proof of erudition) there are also analytical principles established, as a means of exploring the things appertaining to the mind and it's thoughts, and that these principles are called metaphysics and logic, but that in their exploration they have advanced little further than the use of terms, and the application of certain versatile rules; and that these terms themselves are a ground of litigation, it being disputed what is meant by a form, what by a substance, what by mind, and what by soul; and that those common versatile rules are often applied in sharp contention about truths; it was instantly perceived by communication with those spirits, that such analytical principles take away all sense and understanding of a thing, whensoever the mind is confined thereby to mere terms, and thinks on such subjects by artificial rules. They said, that such analytical principles were in this case mere black specks, which darkened the intellectual sight, and that they tend to draw down the understanding into dust; they added that with them it is not so, but that they have clearer ideas in consequence of being unacquainted with such principles. It was also given to see how wise they were; they represented the human mind in a surprising manner, as a celestial form, and it's affections as spheres of activity agreeable thereto, and this so skilfully that they were commended by the angels: they represented also in what manner the Lord bends those affections, which in themselves are not delightful, into such as are delightful. Some of the learned of our earth were present, nor could they in the least comprehend these representations, although they had discoursed much and philosophically on such subjects, whilst they were in the body: the above spirits, when they perceived the thoughts of these learned ones, and how they confined themselves to terms, and were inclined to dispute on every point whether it was so or not, called such analytical principles feculent froth (spumas fœculentas).

3349. From what has been said above, it may appear what correspondencies are, and what representations; but besides what has been said and shewn at the end of the preceding chapters, n. 2987 to 3003, and n. 3213 to 3227, see also what has been said upon the subject in other places, viz. that all things in the literal sense of the Word are representative and significative of the things contained in the internal sense, n. 1404, 1408, 1409, 2763. That the Word written by Moses and the prophets was written by representatives and significatives, and that it could not be written in any other style, to have an internal sense, whereby there might be a communication of heaven and earth, n. 2899. That the Lord therefore spake also by representatives, because He spake also from the essential Divine [principle], n. 2900. Whence the representatives and significatives, which are in the Word and in rituals, are derived, n. 2179. That representatives had rise from the significatives of the ancient Church, and these from the perceptives of the most ancient Church, n. 920, 1409, 2896, 2897. That the most ancient people had their representatives also from dreams, n. 1977. That by Enoch are denoted those, who collected the perceptives of the most ancient people, n. 2896. That in heaven there are continually representatives of the Lord and of His kingdom, n. 1619. That the heavens are full of representatives, n. 1521, 1532. That the ideas of the angels are changed into various representatives in the world of spirits, n. 1971, 1980, 1981. The representatives by which infants are introduced into intelligence, n. 2299. That representatives in nature are from an influx of the Lord, n. 1632, 1881. That in universal nature there are representatives of the Lord's kingdom, n. 2750. That in the external man there are things which correspond, and things which do not correspond, with the internal man, n. 1563, 1568.

3350. In order to shew more plainly the nature of representatives, it is permitted to adduce one further instance: on a time I heard several angels of the interior heaven, who together or in consort formed a representative; the spirits about me could not perceive it, except by a certain influx of interior affection; it was a choir, in which several of them together thought the same thing, and spake the same thing; by representations they formed a golden crown with diamonds around the head of the Lord; which was effected at the same time by quick series of representations, such as are those of thought and speech spoken of above, n. 3342, 3343, 3344 : and what is wonderful, although there were several of them, still they all thought and spake as one, thus they all represented as one, and this because none was desirous to act at all from himself, still less to preside over the rest, and lead the choir, for whosoever does this, is of himself dissociated instantly ; but they suffered themselves to be led mutually by each other, thus all in particular and in general to be led by the Lord. All the good, who come into another life, are brought into such harmonious agreements. Afterwards were heard several choirs, which exhibited various things representatively, and although there were several choirs, and several in each choir, still they acted as one, for from the form of varieties together there resulted a one, containing in it what was beautifully celestial. Thus the universal heaven, which consists of myriads of myriads, can act as one, in consequence of being principled in mutual love, for thus they suffer themselves to be led of the Lord ; and what is wonderful, the greater their numbers are, that is, the greater the number of the myriads which constitute heaven, so much the more distinctly and perfectly they all and singular become one : this is the case also, as the angels are of a more interior heaven, for all perfection increases towards interiors.

3351. They who formed the choirs on this occasion, were of the province of the lungs, consequently of the Lord's spiritual kingdom ; for they flowed gently into the respiration ; but the choirs were distinct, some appertaining to voluntary respiration, and some to spontaneous.

GENESIS.

CHAPTER THE TWENTY-SIXTH.

3353. THE greatest part of mankind believe, that when the last judgment comes, all things are to be destroyed which are in the visible world, that the earth will be consumed by fire, the sun and the moon will be dissipated, and the stars will vanish away ; and that a new heaven and a new earth will afterwards spring forth. This opinion they have conceived from prophetic

Revelations, wherein mention is made of such things coming to pass ; but that the real case is otherwise, may appear from what was shewn above concerning the last judgment, n. 900, 931, 1850, 2117 to 2133 ; hence it is evident, that the last judgment is nothing else but the end of the Church with one nation, and its beginning with another ; which end and which beginning then have place, when there is no longer any acknowledgment of the Lord, or what is the same thing, when there is no faith ; and there is no acknowledgment of the Lord, and no faith, when there is no charity, for faith cannot possibly exist but with those who are in charity. That in such case there is an end of the Church, and a translation thereof to others, appears manifest from all those particulars, which the Lord Himself taught and foretold in the Evangelists, concerning that last day, or concerning the consummation of the age, viz. in Matthew, chap. xxiv ; in Mark, chap. xiii. ; and in Luke, chap. xxi : but inasmuch as these particulars cannot be comprehended by any one without a key, which is their internal sense, it is permitted to unfold them in the order in which they stand, according to that sense : we shall begin with these words in Matthew, "The disciples came to Jesus, saying, tell us when these things shall be, and what is the sign of thy coming, and of the consummation of the age : and Jesus answering, said unto them, see that no one seduce you ; for many shall come in My name, saying, I am Christ, and shall seduce many : but ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars ; see that ye be not disturbed ; for all these things must needs be, but the end is not yet. For nation shall be stirred up against nation, and kingdom against kingdom ; and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes. But all these things are the beginning of sorrows." xxiv. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. They who abide in the sense of the letter, cannot know whether these, and the particulars which follow in this chapter, were spoken concerning the destruction of Jerusalem and the dispersion of the Jewish nation, or concerning the end of days, which is called the last judgment ; but they who are in the internal sense, see clearly, that the subject here treated of is concerning the end of the Church, which end, in this and other passages, is what is called the coming of the Lord, and the consummation of the age ; and inasmuch as this end is here understood, it may be known that all the above particulars signify things appertaining to the Church ; but what they signify, may appear from each particular in the internal sense ; as for example : when it is said, many shall come in My name, saying, I am Christ and shall seduce many, by name here is not signified name, nor by Christ Christ, but name signifies that by which the Lord is worshiped, see n. 2724, 3006 ; and Christ signifies essential truth, n. 3009, 3010 ; thus it is signified, that there would come those who would assert, that this or that is an article of faith, or that this or that is true, when yet it is neither an article of faith, nor true, but false: by hearing of wars and rumours of wars, is signified, that there would exist disputes and litigations concerning truths, which are wars in the spiritual sense: by nation being stirred up against nation, and kingdom against kingdom, is signified, that evil would combat with evil and what is false with what is false; that nation denotes good, but in an opposite sense evil, may be seen, n. 1259, 1260, 1416, 1849, and that kingdom denotes truth, but in an opposite sense what is false, n. 1672, 2547: and by there being famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places, is signified that there would be no longer any knowledges of good and of truth, and thus that the state of the Church would be changed, which is an earthquake (motion of the earth).

3354. From these particulars it is evident, what is meant by these words of the Lord, viz. that they denote the first state of the Church's perversion, which comes to pass, when men begin no longer to know what is good and what is true, but dispute with each other on such subjects, whence come falsities: inasmuch as this is the first state, it is said, that the end is not yet, and that these things are the beginning of sorrows, and this state is called earthquakes in divers places, whereby is signified in the internal sense, a change of the state of the Church in part, or at first. By these things being said to the disciples, is signified, that they are said to all who are of the Church, for the twelve disciples represented all such, see n. 2089, 2129, 2130; wherefore it is said, see that no one seduce you; also ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars, see that ye be not disturbed.

3355. That earthquake, (motion of the earth) in the internal sense, denotes a change in the state of the Church, appears from the signification of earth, as denoting the Church, see n. 566, 662, 1066, 1067, 1262, 1733, 1850, 2117, 2118, 2928; and from the signification of motion, as denoting change of state, in the present case as to things appertaining to the Church, viz. as to good and truth; it is also manifest from other passages in the Word, as in Isaiah, "It shall come to pass, he that fleeth from the voice of fear shall fall into the pit, and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in a snare, because the cataracts from the deep are open, and the foundations of the earth are shaken, by breaking the earth is broken, by moving the earth is moved, by reeling the earth reeleth, as a drunkard, it staggereth as a cottage, and the transgression thereof is heavy upon it, and it shall fall, and shall not rise again: and it shall come to pass in that day, Jehovah will visit upon the host of height in height, and upon the kings of the ground upon the ground," xxiv. 18, 19, 20. In this passage, that earth denotes the Church, is very evident, for the subject treated of is concerning the Church, whose foundations are said to be shaken, and itself to be broken and moved, to reel and stagger, when good and truth are no longer known ;* the kings of the ground denote truths, in the present case falses, upon which will be visitation ; that kings denote truths, and in an opposite sense falses, see n. 1672, 2015 ; and that ground like earth denotes the Church, but with a difference, n. 566, 1068. Again, in the same prophet, " I will render a man more rare than pure gold, and a man than the gold of Ophir ; therefore I will shake the heaven, and the earth shall be shaken (or moved) out of its place ; in the indignation of Jehovah of Sabaoth, and in the day of the heating of his anger," xiii. 12, 13 ; speaking of a day of judgment ; in which passage also earth manifestly denotes the Church, which is said to be shaken (or moved) out of its place, when it is changed as to state : that place denotes state, may be seen, n. 1273, 1274, 1275, 1377, 2625, 2837. Again, in the same prophet, " Is this the man that shaketh (or moveth) the earth, that shaketh (or moveth) kingdoms, that maketh the world a desert, and destroyeth the cities thereof ?" xiv. 16, 17 ; speaking of Lucifer ; where earth denotes the Church, which he is then said to shake (or move), when he claims to himself all things thereto appertaining ; that kingdoms denote truths of the Church may be seen, n. 1672, 2547. So in Ezechiel, " It shall come to pass in that day, when Gog cometh upon the land of Israel, My heat in Mine anger and in My zeal shall rise up, in the fire of My indignation I will speak, if not in that day there shall be a great earthquake (motion of the earth) upon the ground of Israel," xxxviii. 18, 19, 20 ; where God denotes external worship separate from internal, and thereby rendered idolatrous, see n. 1151 ; earth and the ground of Israel denote the spiritual Church ; earthquake (motion of the earth) denotes a change of its state. So, in Joel, " Before Him the earth was moved, the heavens trembled, the sun and the moon were darkened, and the stars withdrew their brightness," ii. 10 ; speaking also of the day of a last judgment, where the earth being moved denotes a changed state of the Church ; the sun and moon denote the good of love and the truth thereof, see n. 1529, 1530, 2441, 2495, which are said to be darkened, when goods and truths are no longer acknowledged : stars denote the knowledges of good and of truth, n. 2495, 2849. So in David, " The earth was shaken and was moved, and the foundations of the mountains trembled and were shaken, because he was wroth," Psalm xviii. 7 ; where the earth shaken and moved denotes the state of the Church rendered perverse. So in the Apocalypse, " I saw further, when he opened the sixth seal, and lo, there was made a great earthquake, (motion of the earth) and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the whole moon became as blood, and the stars of heaven fell upon the earth," vi. 12, 13 ; where the earthquake, the sun, the moon, and the stars signify the same as above in Joel: and again, "In that hour was made a great earthquake, and a tenth part of the city fell, and in the earthquake, there fell the names of men seven thousand," Apoc. xi. 13. From all these passages it is evident that an earthquake is nothing else but a change of the state of the Church, and that earth, in the internal sense is nothing else but the Church; and inasmuch as earth is the Church, it is manifest by the new heaven and new earth, which was to succeed instead of the former, as mentioned in Isaiah lxxv. 17; chap. lxxvi. 22; Apoc. xxi. 1, nothing else is signified but a New Church internal and external, see n. 1733, 1850, 2117, 2118.

3356. The ground and reason why motion denotes change of state, is because motion is effected in space and in time; and in another life there is no idea of space and of time, but instead thereof there is an idea of state; in another life, indeed all things appear as in space, and succeed each other as in time, but in themselves they are changes of state, inasmuch as space and time are thence derived; this circumstance is perfectly well known to every spirit, even to the wicked, who by changes of state induced in others cause them to appear in another place, when yet they are not there; it may also be known to man from this consideration, that in proportion as he is in a state of affections, and of consequent joy, and in proportion as he is in a state of thoughts and consequent absence from the body, in the same proportion he is not in time, for several hours in such case appear to him scarce as one; and this by reason that the internal man, or the spirit, has states, to which spaces and times in the external man correspond; motion therefore, as being successive progression in space and time, is in the internal sense change of state.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1. AND there was a famine in the land, besides the former famine, which was in the days of Abraham; and Isaac went to Abimelech king of the Philistines, to Gerar.

2. And Jehovah appeared to him, and said, go not down into Egypt, reside in the land, which I say to thee.

3. Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and I will bless thee, because I will give all these lands to thee and to thy seed, and I will establish the oath which I sware to thy father Abraham.

4. And I will make thy seed to be multiplied, as the stars of the heavens, and I will give to thy seed all these lands, and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed.

5. Because that Abraham hearkened to my voice, and observed my ordinances, my precepts, my statutes, and my laws.

6. And Isaac dwelt in Gerar.

7. And the men of the place asked him respecting his woman; and he said, she is my sister, because he feared to say, she is my woman, lest perhaps the men of the place may slay me for the sake of Rebecca, because she is good to look upon.

8. And it came to pass, because the days were there prolonged to him, that Abimelech king of the Philistines looked out through a window, and saw, and behold Isaac was laughing with Rebecca, his woman.

9. And Abimelech called Isaac, and said, but behold she is thy woman, and how saidst thou, she is my sister: and Isaac said unto him, because I said, perhaps I may die because of her.

10. And Abimelech said, what is this that thou hast done unto us, that one of the people might lightly have lain with thy woman, and thou wouldst have brought guilt upon us?

11. And Abimelech charged all his people saying, he that toucheth this man and his woman, dying shall die.

12. And Isaac sowed in that land, and found in that year an hundred measures, and JEHOVAH blessed him.

13. And the man increased, and went going and increasing until he became very great.

14. And he had acquisition of flock, and acquisition of herd, and much service, and the Philistines envied him.

15. And all the wells, which his father's servants digged, in the days of his father Abraham, the Philistines stopped them up, and filled them with dust.

16. And Abimelech said to Isaac, go from being with us, because thou prevailest exceedingly above us.

17. And Isaac departed thence, and pitched his camp in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there.

18. And Isaac returned, and digged again the wells of waters, which they digged in the days of Abraham his father, and the Philistines stopped them after the death of Abraham; and he called their names, according to the names which his father called them.

19. And the servants of Isaac digged in the valley, and they found there a well of living waters.

20. And the shepherds of Gerar disputed with the shepherds of Isaac, saying, we have the waters, and he called the name of the well Esek, because they contended with him.

21. And they digged another well, and disputed also over it, and he called the name thereof Sitnah.

22. And he removed thence, and digged another well, and they did not dispute over it, and he called the name thereof Rehoboth, and he said, because now JEHOVAH hath made us to be dilated, and we shall be fruitful in the earth.

23. And he went up thence to Beersheba.

24. And JEHOVAH appeared to him in that night, and said, I am the God of thy father Abraham. Fear not, because I am with thee, and I will bless thee, and will make thy seed to be multiplied for the sake of Abraham my servant.

25. And he built there an altar, and called on the name of JEHOVAH, and stretched out his tent there, and the servants of Isaac digged a well there.

26. And Abimelech went to him from Gerar, and Ahusath his companion, and Phicol the chief captain of his army.

27. And Isaac said unto them, wherefore are ye come to me, and ye have hated me, and have sent me away from you.

28. And they said, seeing we have seen that JEHOVAH was with thee, and we said, let there be I pray a sacrament between us, between us and between thee, and let us make a covenant with thee.

29. If thou shalt do evil with us, as we have not touched thee, and as we have done with thee nothing but good, and have sent thee in peace: thou art now the blessed of JEHOVAH.

30. And he made them a feast, and they did eat and drink.

31. And in the morning they arose early, and sware a man to his brother; and Isaac sent them away, and they went from being with him in peace.

32. And it came to pass in that day, and the servants of Isaac came, and told him concerning the reasons of the well which they digged, and they said unto him, we have found waters.

33. And he called it Shebah; therefore the name of the city is Beersheba even to this day.

* * * * *

34. And Esau was a son of forty years, and he took a woman Jehudith, the daughter of Beeri, the Hittite, and Basemath, the daughter of Elon, the Hittite.

35. And they were bitterness of spirit to Isaac and to Rebecca.

CONTENTS.

3357. THE subject treated of in this chapter, in the internal sense, is concerning appearances of truth of a threefold degree, how they were adjoined to Truth Divine, in order that truths and the doctrinals thereof might be received, and a Church might exist.

3358. The subject treated of, verses 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, is concerning appearances of truth of a superior degree which are in the internal sense of the Word, in which appearances the angels are, and in which are Divine Truth and Good. And that Divine Good and Truth cannot be comprehended, consequently cannot be received, unless they are in appearances, verses 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

3359. The appearances of truth of an inferior degree are also treated of, which are in the interior sense of the Word, in which appearances men may be, who are of the internal Church, verses 14, 15, 16, 17.

3360. Afterwards appearances of truth, of a still inferior degree, are treated of, which are those of the literal sense of the Word, in which appearances men may be, who are of the external Church, verses 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25; and by these may still be effected conjunction with the Lord, verses 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33.

3361. Concerning scientific truths adjoined to good therein, verses 34, 35.

THE INTERNAL SENSE.

3362. THE subject treated of in chapter xxi. was concerning Abimelech, in that he made a covenant with Abraham, and that on this occasion Abraham reproved him concerning a well of waters, which his servants had seized upon. A circumstance nearly similar to this here again occurs between Abimelech and Isaac, alike too in this particular, that as Abraham had said that his wife was his sister, so also does Isaac; from which considerations it is evident that some divine arcanum is contained in these circumstances, otherwise they would never have happened a second time, and been again related, neither would mention have been made of wells on each occasion, concerning which wells information could be of no importance, unless somewhat divine was concealed therein. The internal sense teaches what this divine somewhat is, shewing, that the subject treated of is concerning the Lord's conjunction with those who are in His kingdom, in the heavens and in the earths, by truths, and indeed by appearances of truth of a superior degree with the angels, and by appearances of truth of an inferior degree with men, consequently by the Word, in the internal and external sense whereof, are contained those appearances; for essential Truths Divine are such, that they cannot in any sort be comprehended by any angel, still less by any man, inasmuch as they exceed every faculty of the understanding both of men and angels; in order therefore that they may have conjunction with the Lord, Truths Divine flow in with them in appearances, and when Truths Divine are in such appearances, they can both be received and acknowledged. This is effected in a manner adequate to the comprehension of every one, wherefore appearances of truth, that is, truths angelic and human, are of a three-fold degree. These are the Divine arcana which are contained in the internal sense, in what was done and related above concerning Abimelech and Abraham, and in what is here done and related concerning Abimelech and Isaac.

3363. Verse 1. And there was a famine in the land, besides the former famine which was in the days of Abraham; and Isaac went to Abimelech king of the Philistines, to Gerar. There was a famine in the land besides the former famine which was in the days of Abraham, signifies a deficiency of the knowledges of faith: and Isaac went to Abimelech king of the Philistines, to Gerar, signifies the doctrinals of faith; Abimelech is the doctrine of faith respecting things rational: king of the Philistines, denotes doctrinals; Gerar is faith.

3364. "There was a famine in the land besides the former famine which was in the days of Abraham"—that hereby is signified a deficiency of the knowledges of faith, appears from the signification of famine, as denoting a deficiency of knowledges, see n. 1460; that the knowledges of faith are meant, appears from what presently follows, viz. from the representation of Abimelech, and from the signification of Gerar, as denoting the things which are of faith. The famine in the days of Abraham, which is mentioned chap. xii. 10, and treated of, n. 1460, was a deficiency of the knowledges appertaining to the natural man, but the famine here spoken of is a deficiency of the knowledges appertaining to the rational man, wherefore it is said, that there was a famine in the land besides the former famine which was in the days of Abraham. The subject here treated of, in the internal sense, is concerning the Lord, shewing that from His Divine [principle] are derived all the doctrinals of faith; for there is not given a single doctrinal, nor the smallest part of one, which is not from the Lord, inasmuch as the Lord is essential doctrine itself; hence it is that the Lord is called the Word, because the Word is doctrine; but inasmuch as whatever is from the Lord is Divine, and what is Divine cannot be comprehended by any created [subject or being], therefore the doctrinals which are from the Lord, so far as they appear before created [subjects or beings], are not Truths purely Divine, but are appearances of truth; nevertheless in such appearances are contained Truths Divine, and this being the case, the appearances also have the name of truths; the subject treated of in this chapter is concerning these appearances.

3365. "And Isaac went to Abimelech king of the Philistines, to Gerar"—that hereby are signified the doctrinals of faith, appears from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Lord as to the Divine Rational [principle], see n. 1893, 2066, 2072, 2083, 2630; that Isaac is the Lord's Divine Rational [principle]

as to Divine Good, see n. 3012, 3194, 3210, and also as to Divine Truth, which is represented by the marriage of Isaac with Rebecca, see n. 3012, 3013, 3077, thus by Isaac is here represented the Lord as to Divine Truth conjoined to Divine Good of the Rational [principle], for Rebecca was with Isaac, and was called sister; and from the representation of Abimelech, as denoting the doctrine of faith which has respect to things rational, see n. 2504, 2509, 2510, 2530; and from the signification of king of the Philistines, as denoting doctrinals; that king in the internal sense is truth appertaining to doctrinals, see n. 1672, 2015, 2069, and that the Philistines denote the science of knowledges, which also appertains to doctrinals, see n. 1197, 1198; and from the signification of Gerar, as denoting faith, see n. 1209, 2504; hence it is evident what is signified by Isaac's going to Abimelech king of the Philistines, to Gerar, viz. the doctrine of faith derived from the Lord, and having respect to things rational, or, what is the same thing, having respect to the doctrinals of faith. All those things are called doctrinals which appertain to doctrine, which so far as they can be received and acknowledged in heaven by angels, and in earth by men, are said to have respect to things rational, for it is the rational principle which receives and acknowledges them; but the rational principle is such, that it can in no wise comprehend things Divine, inasmuch as it is finite, and what is finite cannot comprehend the things which are infinite, therefore Truths Divine from the Lord are presented before the rational principle by appearances; hence it is, that doctrinals are nothing else but appearances of Truth Divine, or nothing else but celestial and spiritual vessels, for the containing of what is Divine; and inasmuch as what is Divine, that is, the Lord, is in them, therefore they affect, and hence the Lord has conjunction with angels and men.

3366. Verses 2, 3. And Jehovah appeared to him, and said, go not down into Egypt, reside in the land which I say to thee. Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee, because to thee and thy seed will I give all these lands, and I will establish the oath which I sware to Abraham thy father. Jehovah appeared to him, and said, signifies thought from the Divine [principle]; go not down into Egypt, reside in the land which I say to thee, signifies that he should not look to scientifics, but to rationals, which being illustrated by the Divine [principle] are appearances of truth: sojourn in this land, signifies instruction; and I will be with thee, signifies the Divine [principle]: and will bless thee, signifies that thus would be increase: because to thee, signifies the principle of good: and to thy seed, signifies the principle of truth: will I give these lands, signifies things spiritual: and I will establish the oath which I sware to Abraham thy father, signifies confirmation thereby.

3367. "Jehovah appeared to him and said"—that hereby is signified throughout from the Divine [principle], appears from the signification of appearing, when it is spoken of the Lord, who is Jehovah, as denoting the Essential Divine [principle] which was in Himself; that Jehovah was in the Lord, and that the Lord Himself is Jehovah, has been shewn above in many places, see n. 1343, 1725, 1729, 1733, 1736, 1794, 1815, 1819, 1822, 1902, 1921, 1999, 2004, 2005, 2018, 2025, 2156, 2329, 2447, 2921, 3023, 3035, 3061; and that the Lord, so far as He had united the Human essence to the Divine, so far spake with Jehovah as with Himself, n. 1745, 1999; thus by Jehovah appearing to Him, in the internal sense, is signified that it was from the Divine [principle]; that thought is signified, appears from the signification of saying, as denoting to perceive, and also to think, according to what has been frequently shewn above.

3368. "Go not down into Egypt, reside in the land which I say to thee"—that hereby is signified that he should not look to scientifics but to rationals, which being illustrated by the Divine [principle] are appearances of truth, appears from the signification of Egypt, as denoting scientifics, see n. 1164, 1165, 1462; and from the signification of land (earth), as here denoting things rational, which illustrated by the Divine [principle] are appearances of truth, for the land (earth), which is here meant, is Gerar, where Abimelech, king of the Philistines, was; and by Gerar is signified faith, and by Abimelech, the doctrine of faith which has respect to things rational, and by king of the Philistines, doctrinals, see n. 3363, 3365; therefore by the land, viz. Gerar, where Abimelech was, nothing else is signified in the internal sense; for the signification of land (or earth) is various, see n. 620, 636, 1067, and signifies the quality of the nation of which it is predicated, n. 1262; but in a proper sense it signifies the Church, see n. 3355, and as signifying the Church, it signifies also those things which appertain to the Church, that is, those things appertaining to man which constitute the Church, consequently the doctrinals of charity and faith; thus also rationals, which illustrated by the Divine [principle], are appearances of truth, for that these appearances are the truths of the Church, consequently it's doctrinals, may be seen above, n. 3364, 3365; whether we speak of rationals illustrated by the Divine [principle], or of appearances of truth, or of truths celestial and spiritual, such as are in the Lord's kingdom in the heavens or in heaven, and such as are in the Lord's kingdom in the earths or in earth, it is the same thing; the same are also called doctrinals, but this from the truths which are in them; the angelic and human rational [principle] is and is called rational by virtue of the appearances of truth illustrated by the Divine [principle], and without these it is not rational; thus things rational are these appearances of truth so illustrated.

The reason why it is here said that he should not go down to Egypt, that is, should not look to scientifics, is, because scientifics were before treated of, inasmuch as Abraham's sojourning in Egypt represented the Lord's instruction in scientifics, when He was a child, see n. 1502. With respect to this arcanum, that he should not go down into Egypt, but should sojourn in the land of Gerar, that is, that he should not look to scientifics but to rationals, the case is this; all appearances of truth, in which is the Divine [principle], appertain to the rational principle, insomuch that rational truths, and appearances of truth are the same thing; whereas scientifics appertain to the natural principle, insomuch that natural truths and scientific truths are the same thing. Rational truths, or appearances of truth, can never be and exist, except from an influx of the Divine into the rational principle, and through things rational into the scientifics appertaining to the natural principle; the things in this case effected in the rational principle appear in the natural, as an image of many things together in a mirror; and thus they are exhibited before man, and also before an angel; nevertheless before an angel they are not exhibited so evidently in the natural principle, but with such as are in the world of spirits, and are in a spiritual-natural principle, and hence they have representatives of truth. The case is the same with every individual man, for, as was before observed, he who is in good is a little heaven, or, what is the same thing, is an image of the greatest heaven, and whereas Divine Truth cannot flow immediately into scientifics, which appertain to the natural man, but must flow thereinto through things rational, therefore it is here said that he should not go down into Egypt, but should reside in the land of Gerar. Nevertheless no clear idea can be formed on this subject, unless the nature and quality of influx, and also the nature and quality of ideas, be first known, wherefore by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, we shall take occasion to speak concerning these things at the close of the chapters, where mention is made of particular experiences.

3369. "Sojourn in this land"—that hereby is signified instruction, appears from the signification of sojourning, as denoting to instruct, see n. 1463, 2025; and from the signification of land in the present case, as denoting things rational, which illustrated by the Divine [principle] are appearances of truth, see above, n. 3368; thus by sojourning in this land is signified to be instructed in those things.

3370. "And I will be with thee"—that hereby is signified the Divine [principle], may appear from this consideration, that it is Jehovah Who speaks, consequently the Divine [principle] itself, by Whom when it is said, I will be with thee, it signifies in the series, that thus the Divine [principle] would be in the things spoken of.

3373. "And to thy seed"—that hereby is signified truth, appears from the signification of seed, as denoting truth, see n. 29, 255, 1025, 1447, 1610, 1940, 2848, 3310; thus denoting truth which is from the Lord's Divine [principle], which is thy seed. They who apprehend the Word only according to the sense of the letter, cannot know otherwise, than that seed denotes posterity, consequently in the present case the posterity of Isaac descended from Esau and Jacob, but principally from Jacob, because in that nation the Word was, in which are extant so many historical relations concerning those of whom the nation consisted; but in the internal sense is not meant any posterity descended from Isaac, but all those who are the sons of the Lord, thus the sons of His kingdom, or, what is the same thing, who are principled in good and truth which is from the Lord; and whereas these are seed, it follows that essential good and truth from the Lord is seed, for hence are sons, wherefore also essential truths which are from the Lord are called sons of the kingdom in Matthew, "He who soweth good seed is the Son of Man; the field is the world, the seed are the sons of the kingdom," xiii. 37, 38; hence also in general by sons are signified truths, see n. 489, 491, 533, 1147, 2623. Every one may know, who thinks somewhat deeper or more interiorly than common, that by the seed of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, which is so often mentioned in the Divine Word, and of which it is so frequently said that it should be blessed, and this above all other nations and people in the globe, cannot be signified their posterity, for these in respect to other nations, were least of all principled in the good of love to the Lord and of charity towards their neighbour, yea, neither were they principled in any truth of faith; for what the Lord was, what His kingdom, thus what heaven was, and what a life after death, they were altogether ignorant, as well because they were not willing to know, as because had they known, they would in their hearts have totally denied such knowledge, and would thereby have profaned interior goods and truths, as they profaned exterior by their so often becoming open idolaters; which is the reason why interior truths are so rarely extant in the literal sense of the Word of the Old Testament. It was in consequence of their being such a people, that the Lord said of them out of Isaiah, "He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart, lest they should see with their eyes, and understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them," John xii. 40; and when they said, "We are Abraham's seed; Abraham is our father, Jesus said unto them, if ye were the sons of Abraham, ye would do the works of Abraham; ye are of your father the devil, and the desires of your father ye wish to do," John viii. 33, 39, 44; by Abraham here is also meant the Lord, as in every other passage in the Word. That the Jews were not His seed, or sons, but of the devil, is said expressly: hence it is very evident, that by the seed of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, in the historical and prophetic Word, are by no means meant the Jews, inasmuch as the Word throughout is Divine, but all those who are the Lord's seed, that is, who are principled in good and the truth of faith in Him: that from the Lord alone is heavenly seed, that is, all good and truth, may be seen, n. 1438, 1614, 2016, 2803, 2882, 2883, 2891, 2892, 2904, 3195.

3374. "I will give all these lands"—that hereby are signified things spiritual, appears from the signification of lands, as here denoting things rational, which illustrated by the Divine [principle] are appearances of truth, see above, n. 3368; which appearances, that they are truths, was also shewn above, n. 3364, 3365, consequently denoting things spiritual, for these are nothing else but truths derived from the Divine [principle], as may appear from what has been frequently said above concerning the signification of things spiritual. By what is spiritual in a genuine sense, is meant the essential light of truth which is from the Lord, as by what is celestial is meant all the flame of good from the Lord. Hence it may appear, that inasmuch as this light flows in from the Lord, both into man's rational principle and into his natural. Spirituality is predicated of each, and that it is the Divine [principle] as to truth which flows in. From these observations it may be known what is signified by spiritual in a genuine sense, and that there is a spiritual rational principle and a spiritual natural.

3375. "And I will establish the oath which I swore to Abraham thy father"—that hereby is signified confirmation, appears from the signification of oath, or of swearing, as denoting confirmation, see n. 2842; it is not here said, I will establish the covenant which I made with Abraham, but the oath, by reason that covenant is predicated of what is celestial, or of good, whereas oath is predicated of what is spiritual or of truths, see n. 3037, which are here treated of; wherefore also in what follows it is not said of Isaac, that he made a covenant with Abimelech, but that he swore a man to his brother, verse 31; whereas it is said of Abraham, that he and Abimelech made a covenant,

Gen. xxi. 32. See Psalm cv. 8, 9, 10. By confirmation here, which is signified by oath, is meant the Lord's conjunction with those who are in His kingdom, for an oath is the confirmation of a covenant, and by covenant is signified conjunction, see n. 665, 666, 1023, 1038, 1864, 1996, 2003, 2021.

3376. The internal sense of these two verses, is, that the Divine Truth, when it flows in by things rational, presents appearances of truth, and thus fructifies and multiplies itself as to good and truth, by which the Lord conjoins Himself with angels and men: that this is the sense of these verses, cannot be seen from the first exposition, where things appear scattered, as for instance, from what was said, n. 3366, that there was thought from the Divine [principle], not to look to scientifics but to things rational, which illustrated by the Divine [principle] are appearances of truth, and that hence would be instruction from the Divine [principle], and increase thus good and truth, which are things spiritual, whereby the Lord has conjunction with the things which are in His Word. These things however, which appear scattered before man are still in their internal sense conjoined together in the most orderly arrangement, and before the angels, or in heaven, appear and are perceived in a most beautiful series, yea, with angelic representatives in a celestial form, and this with a variety inexpressible. Such is the Word throughout in its internal sense.

3377. Verses 4, 5. And I will make thy seed to be multiplied as the stars of the heavens, and I will give to thy seed all these lands, and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. Because that Abraham hearkened to my voice, and observed my ordinances, my precepts, my statutes, and my laws. I will make thy seed to be multiplied as the stars of the heavens, signifies the truths and knowledges of faith; and I will give to thy seed all these lands, signifies Churches thence derived: and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed, signifies all those who are principled in good as well within as without the Church; because that Abraham hearkened to my voice, signifies the union of the Divine Essence of the Lord with the Human essence by temptations; and has observed my ordinances, my precepts, my statutes, and my laws, signifies by continual revelations from Himself.

3378. "I will make thy seed to be multiplied as the stars of the heavens"—that hereby are signified the truths and knowledges of faith, appears from the signification of seed, as denoting truths, see above, n. 3373; and from the signification of stars, as denoting the knowledges of faith, see n. 2495, 2845.

3379. "And I will give to thy seed all these lands"—that hereby are signified Churches thence derived, appears from the signification of seed, as denoting truths, consequently those who are principled in truths, and are thence called sons of the kingdom, see above, n. 3373; and from the signification of lands, as here denoting things rational, which illustrated by the Divine [principle] are appearances of truth, see also above, n. 3368, consequently denoting those who are principled in things rational illustrated by the Divine [principle], or, what is the same thing, who are in heavenly light; and inasmuch as they only are in such light, who are in the Lord's kingdom in the heavens, that is, who are in heaven, and who are in the Lord's kingdom in the earths, that is, who are in the Lord's Churches, it is therefore evident that by these lands (or earths) are signified Churches; for Churches are not Churches in consequence of being so called, and of professing the name of the Lord, but in consequence of being principled in the good and truth of faith; it is the essential good and truth of faith which constitutes the Church, yea, which is the Church, for in the good and truth of faith is the Lord, and where the Lord is there is the Church.

3380. "And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed"—that hereby are signified all who are principled in good as well within as without the Church, appears from the signification of being blessed, as denoting to be made fruitful in good and to be multiplied in truths, see above, n. 1731, 981, 1422, 2486, 3140; and from the signification of seed, as denoting goods and truths which are from the Lord, see above, n. 3373; and from the signification of the nations of the earth, as denoting all who are principled in good, see n. 1259, 1260, 1416, 1849; thus by all the nations of the earth being blessed in thy seed, is signified, that by good and truth which are from the Lord all are saved who live in mutual charity, whether they be within the Church or without it; that the Gentile (nations), who are without the Church, and who are principled in good, are saved alike with those who are within the Church, may be seen, n. 593, 932, 1032, 1059, 1327, 1328, 2049, 2051, 2284, 2589 to 2604, 2861, 2986, 3263.

3381. "Because that Abraham hearkened to My voice"—that hereby is signified the union of the Divine Essence of the Lord with the human essence by temptations, appears from the representation of Abraham, as denoting the Lord even as to the Divine Human [principle], see n. 2833, 2836, 3251; and from the signification of hearkening to My voice, when it is predicated of the Lord, as denoting to unite the Divine Essence to the human by temptations, for it is in relation to temptations that obedience is predicated of the Lord in the Word; what is here said has respect to what is related concerning Abraham, chap. xxii. viz. that God tempted him, and said unto him, that he should take his son, and offer him for a burnt-offering, verses 1, 2; and when he hearkened to this voice, it is said, "Now I know that thou fearest God, and hast not withheld thine only son from Me; in Myself have I sworn, saith Jehovah, because thou hast done this Word, and hast not withheld thine only son, that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heavens," verses 12, 16, 17; that by not withholding thine only son from Me, which was hearkening to the voice, is signified the union of the Human with the Divine [principle] by the last state of temptation, may be seen, n. 2827, 2844. That this is meant by hearkening to the voice of Jehovah or the Father, is evident also from the Lord's words in Gethsemane, "My Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from Me, nevertheless not as I will but as thou wilt;" again a second time, "My Father if this cup may not pass from Me, except I drink it, Thy will be done, Matt. xxvi. 39, 42; Mark xiv. 36; Luke xxii. 42; but whereas Jehovah or the Father was in Him, or He in the Father, and the Father in Him, John xiv. 10, 11; by hearkening to the voice of Jehovah is meant, that the Lord united the Divine [principle] to the Human by temptations, through His own proper power, which is also evident from the Lord's own words in John, "As the Father knoweth Me, and I know the Father, and I lay down My soul for the sheep, for this My Father loveth Me, because I lay down My soul, that I may take it again; I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again; this commandment have I received of My Father," x. 15, 17, 18. That the Lord, by His own proper power, united His Divine Essence to His Human essence by temptations, may be seen, n. 1663, 1668, 1690, 1691; 1725, 1729, 1733, 1737, 1787, 1789, 1812, 1820, 2776, 3318.

3382. "And hath observed My ordinances, My precepts, My statutes, and My laws"—that hereby is signified by continual revelations from Himself, viz. that by temptations so also by those [revelations] He united the Divine Essence to the Human, may appear from this consideration, that to observe ordinances, precepts, statutes, and laws, involves all things appertaining to the Word, viz. ordinances, all things thereof in general; precepts, the internal things thereof; statutes, the external things; and laws, all things thereof in particular: inasmuch as these things are predicated of the Lord, Who from eternity was the Word, and from Whom all those things are, in the internal sense it cannot be signified that He observed those things, but that He revealed them to Himself, when He was in a state of union of the Human [principle] with the Divine. These things indeed, at first view, appear rather remote from the sense of the letter, yea, even from the proximate internal sense, but still when the words are read by man, this is the sense thereof in heaven; for, as has been occasionally said above, and may be seen from examples, n. 1873, 1874, the sense of the letter in the ascent towards heaven is put off, and instead thereof another heavenly sense takes place, insomuch that this latter sense cannot be known to be from the former; for they who are in heaven, are in the idea that all things of the Word in the internal sense treat of the Lord, and also that all things of the Word are from the Lord; likewise that when He was in the world, He thought from the Divine [principle] and thus from Himself, and acquired to Himself all intelligence and wisdom by continual revelations from the Divine [principle]; therefore they have no other perception from the above words; for to observe ordinances, precepts, statutes, and laws, is not predicable of the Lord, inasmuch as He Himself was the Word, consequently He Himself was what was to be observed. He Himself was the precept, He Himself was the statute, and He Himself was the law; for all these things have respect to Him, as the First from Whom they are derived, and as the Last to Whom they tend; therefore by the above words, in a supreme sense, nothing else can be signified but the union of the Lord's Divine [principle] with the Human, by continual revelations from Himself; that the Lord thought from the Divine [principle], thus from Himself, otherwise than other men, may be seen n. 1904, 1914, 1935; and that He acquired to Himself intelligence and wisdom by continual revelations from the Divine [principle], n. 1616, 2500, 2523, 2632. That to observe ordinances, denotes all things of the Word in general, and that precepts denote the internal things of the Word, statutes the external things, and that laws denote all things of the Word in particular, in a genuine sense, may appear from many passages viewed in the internal sense, some of which we shall here adduce; thus in David, "Blessed are the upright in the way, walking in the law of Jehovah; blessed are they that keep His testimonies; O that my ways were directed to keep Thy statutes; I will keep Thy statutes; in my whole heart have I sought Thee, let me not err from Thy precepts: in my heart have I hid Thy Word, that I may not sin against Thee: blessed art Thou, Jehovah, teach me Thy statutes: with my lips have I told all the judgments of Thy mouth: in the way of Thy testimonies I am glad, I meditate in Thy commandments, and have respect unto Thy ways: in Thy statutes I delight; I do not forget Thy Word: recompence Thy servant, that I may live, and, keep Thy Word: open mine eyes that I may see wonderful things out of Thy law: hide not Thy precepts from me: vivify me according to Thy Word: teach me Thy statutes; make me to understand the way of Thy commandments. Psalm cxix. 1 to 27. The subject treated of throughout this whole Psalm is concerning the Word, and concerning the things appertaining to the Word, which, it is evident, are precepts, statutes, judgments, testimonies, commandments, and ways; but what is specifically signified by each of these expressions, cannot possibly be seen from the sense of the letter, in which sense they appear only as repetitions of the same thing; it may nevertheless be seen from the internal sense, in which sense things altogether different are signified by precepts, by statutes, by judgments, testimonies, commandments, and ways. Again, "The law of Jehovah is perfect, bringing back the soul; the testimony of Jehovah is sure, rendering the simple wise; the commandments of Jehovah are right, gladdening the heart; the precept of Jehovah is pure, enlightening the eyes: the fear of Jehovah is clean, standing to eternity; the judgments of Jehovah are truth," Psalm xix. 8, 9, 10: and in the book of Kings, "David said to Solomon, thou shalt observe the ordinance of thy God, to walk in His ways, to keep His statutes, and His precepts, and His judgments, and His testimonies, according to what is written in the law of Moses," 1 Kings ii. 3; to observe the ordinance, denotes all things of the Word in general, for it is mentioned in the first place, and has respect to what follows, as to what is less general; for to observe the ordinance is the same thing as to keep what is to be kept. So in Moses, "Thou shalt love Jehovah thy God, and shalt observe His ordinance, and His statutes, and judgments, and precepts, all days," Deut. xi. 1; where to observe what was ordained, or to keep what was to be kept, denotes in like manner all things of the Word in general; statutes denote the external things of the Word, such as rituals, and those things which are representative and significative of the internal sense; but precepts denote the internal things of the Word, such as are the things appertaining to life and doctrine, especially those which are of the internal sense; but concerning the signification of precepts and statutes, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord we shall speak elsewhere.

3383. Verses 6, 7. And Isaac dwelt in Gerar, and the men of the place asked him respecting his woman, and he said, she is my sister, because he feared to say, she is my woman, lest perhaps the men of the place may slay me for the sake of Rebecca, because she is good to look upon. Isaac dwelt in Gerar, signifies the Lord's state as to the things which are of faith in respect to things rational which were to be adjoined: and the men [viri] of the place asked him respecting his woman, signifies the disquisitions of men [homines] concerning Divine Truth: and he said, she is my sister, signifies truth rational: because he feared to say she is my woman, lest perhaps the men of the place slay me for the sake of Rebecca, signifies that he could not open essential Divine Truths, for thus Divine Good would not be received: because she is good to look upon, signifies that it may easily be received from this circumstance, that it is called Divine.

3384. "Isaac dwelt in Gerar"—that hereby is signified the Lord's state as to the things of faith in respect to things rational which were to be adjoined, appears from the signification of dwelling in Gerar, as denoting to be principled in the things which are of faith, consequently a state as to those things; for to dwell signifies to live, see n. 1293; and Gerar denotes the things which are of faith, see n. 1209, 2504, 3365; and from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Lord as to the Divine Rational principle, see n. 1893, 2066, 2072, 2083, 2630; that it is in respect to things rational which were to be adjoined, appears from what goes before, and from what follows, for the subject treated of in this chapter throughout is concerning those things, viz. things rational, which being illustrated by the Divine [principle] are appearances of truth. That to dwell denotes to be and to live, consequently that it denotes a state, appears from many passages in the Word, as in David, "I will dwell in the house of Jehovah for length of days," Psalm xxiii. 6: again, "One thing have I sought of Jehovah, this I will require, that I may dwell in the house of Jehovah all the days of my life," Psalm xxvii. 4: again, "He that doth deceit shall not dwell in the midst of My house," Psalm ci. 7; where to dwell in the house of Jehovah denotes to be and to live in the good of love, for this is the house of Jehovah. So in Isaiah, "They that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, on them hath light shined," ix. 2; where by dwelling in the land of the shadow of death is denoted the state of those who are in ignorance of good and of truth: again, "Babel shall not be inhabited for ever," xiii. 20; denoting the state of the damnation of those who are Babel: again, "Jehovah the God of Israel inhabiting the cherubim," xxxvii. 16: "O Shepherd of Israel inhabiting the cherubim, shine forth," Psalm lxxx. 1; inhabiting the cherubim denotes the Lord as to a state of providence, in preventing any one entering into the holy things of love and faith unless he be prepared of the Lord, see n. 308; so in David, "I lay me down in peace and sleep, for thou Jehovah alone causest me to dwell secure," Psalm iv. 8; to cause to dwell secure denotes a state of peace: so in Jeremiah, "Who dwellest upon many waters, great in treasures, thy end is come, the measure of thy gain; li. 13, speaking of Babel; where to dwell upon many waters denotes being in knowledges concerning truth; so in Daniel, "God Himself revealeth deep and hidden things, He knoweth what is in the darkness, and light dwelleth with Him," ii. 22; where to dwell denotes to be; again, in the same prophet, "Under that tree the beasts of the field had shade, and the fowls of heaven dwelt in it's branches," iv. 12; and in Ezechiel, "Under it's branches every beast of the field brought forth, and in it's shade dwelt all great nations," xxxi. 6; where to dwell denotes to be and to live; so in Hosea, "The floor of the wine-press shall not feed them, and the new wine shall lie to her, they shall not dwell in the land of Jehovah, and Ephraim shall return to Egypt," ix. 2, 3; where not to dwell in the land of Jehovah denotes not to be in a state of the good of love, consequently not in the Lord's kingdom.

3385. "And the men of the place asked him respecting his woman"—that hereby are signified the disquisitions of men concerning Divine Truth, appears from the signification of asking, as denoting to enter into disquisition; and from the signification of the men of the place, viz. Gerar, as denoting those who are principled in the doctrinals of faith; that Gerar denotes the things of faith, see n. 1209, 2504; thus the men of the place denote men of such a state; and from the signification of the woman, who is here Rebecca, as denoting the Divine Truth of the Lord's Divine Rational principle, see n. 3012, 3013, 3077. The subject treated of in the preceding verses is concerning the appearances of truth, in that they exist by Divine Influx from the Lord into man's rationals; the subject here treated of is concerning the reception of those appearances, and this first by those who are principled in the doctrinals of faith, and who are understood by the men of the place or Gerar, and are of the first class of those who are called spiritual; for these, inasmuch as they have not perception, like the celestial, and are respectively in an obscure principle, see n. 1043, 2088, 2669, 2078, 2715, 2718, 2831, 3235, 3241, 3246, enter into disquisitions whether a thing be true or not, and also whether it be Divine Truth; and inasmuch as they have not perception respecting it, there is given them such as appears like truth, and this according to their rational principle, that is according to their apprehension, for thus it is received; it is permitted every one to believe truths as he apprehends them; unless this was the case, there would be no reception, because there would be no acknowledgement: this is the subject now treated of.

3386. "And he said, she is my sister"—that hereby is signified truth rational, appears from the signification of sister, as denoting truth rational, see n. 1495, 2508, 2524, 2556; by truth rational is meant that which appears as true according to the apprehension, or before the rational principle, as was just now said. Isaac's saying that Rebecca was his sister, as Abraham had before said that Sarah was his sister, first in Egypt, Gen. xii. 11, 12, 13, 19; and afterwards in Gerar, Gen. xx. 2, 5, 12; involves a like arcanum, as may be seen from the explication of those passages; and inasmuch as the like happened three times, and is also three times recorded in the Word, it is evident that it is an arcanum of the greatest moment, which cannot be known to any one but from the internal sense; but what the arcanum is, appears from what follows.

3387. "Because he feared to say she is my woman, lest perhaps the men of the place slay me for the sake of Rebecca"—that hereby is signified that he could not open essential Divine Truths, because thus Divine Good would not be received, appears from the signification of fearing to say, as denoting not to be able to open ; and from the signification of woman, who is here Rebecca, as denoting the Lord's Divine Rational principle as to Divine Truth, see n. 3012, 3013, 3077 ; and from the signification of slaying me, as denoting that good is not received, for by Isaac, who here is me, is represented the Divine Good of the Lord's Rational principle, see n. 3012, 3194, 3210 ; for good is then said to be slain or to perish, when it is not received, for in such case it becomes none ; and from the signification of the men of the place, as denoting those who are principled in the doctrinals of faith, see n. 3385 ; hence then it is evident what is the internal sense of these words, viz. that if essential Divine Truths were to be opened, they would not be received by those who are principled in the doctrinals of faith, because they exceed all their belief, and consequently nothing of good from the Lord could flow in, inasmuch as good from the Lord, or Divine Good, cannot flow in except into truths, truths being the vessels of good, as has been abundantly shewn above. Truths or appearances of truth are given man to this intent, that Divine Good may form his intellectual principle, and thereby may form the man himself, for truths are to the end that good may flow in, inasmuch as good, without vessels or recipients, does not find place, because it does not find a state corresponding to itself, wherefore where there are not truths, or where they are not received, there is neither rational or human good, consequently the man has not any spiritual life ; nevertheless, in order that man may have truths, and thence have spiritual life, there are appearances of truth given, and this to every one according to his apprehension, which appearances are acknowledged as truths because they are such that Divine things may be in them. For the better understanding what appearances are, and that they are such things as serve man instead of Truths Divine, the following case may be adduced in the way of illustration ; if it should be said that in heaven there is no idea of place, consequently none of distance, but that instead thereof the angels have ideas of state, this could in no wise be apprehended by man ; for he would thus be led to conceive that in heaven there was nothing distinct, but all confused, viz. all in one or together, when nevertheless all things therein are so distinct that nothing can be more so ; that places, distances, and spaces, which exist in nature, are states in heaven, may be seen, n. 3356 : hence it is evident that whatever is said in the Word concerning places and spaces, and from them and by them, is an appearance of truth, and unless it was spoken by such appearance, it would in no wise be received, consequently it would scarce be accounted of any reality, for the idea of space and of time is in almost all and singular the things of man's thought during his abode in the world, that is, so long as he is in space and time ; that in the Word it is spoken according to appearances of space, is manifest from almost all and singular the things contained therein, as in Matthew, "Jesus said, how saith David, the Lord to my Lord, sit on my right-hand, until I make thy foes thy footstool," xxii. 43, 44; where to sit on the right-hand is spoken from the idea of place, thus according to appearance, when nevertheless it is a state of the Divine Power of the Lord which is thus described: so again, "Jesus said, hereafter shall ye see the son of Man sitting on the right-hand of power, and coming on the clouds of heaven," xxvi. 64; where to sit on the right-hand, and also to come upon the clouds, are in like manner expressions grounded in the idea of place with men, but in the idea of the Lord's power with the angels; so in Mark, "The sons of Zebedee said to Jesus, grant unto us that we may sit one on Thy right-hand, and the other on Thy left, in Thy glory; Jesus answered, to sit on My right-hand, and on My left, is not Mine to give, but to those for whom it is prepared," x. 37, 40; from these words it is manifest what sort of an idea the disciples had concerning the Lord's kingdom, viz. that it was to sit on the right-hand and on the left; and inasmuch as they had such an idea, the Lord also answered them according to their apprehension, thus according to what appeared to them. So in David, "He is as a bridegroom coming forth from his closet, he rejoiceth as an hero to run the way, from the end of the heavens is his coming forth, and his circuit to the ends thereof," xix. 5, 6; speaking of the Lord, whose state of Divine Power is described by such things as relate to space. So in Isaiah, "How hast thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning, thou hast said in thine heart, I will ascend into the heavens, I will exalt my throne above the stars of heaven, I will ascend above the heights of the clouds," xiv. 12, 13, 14; where to fall from heaven, to ascend the heavens, to exalt the throne above the stars of heaven, are all expressions grounded in the idea of space or place, whereby self-love profaning holy things is described. •Inasmuch as things celestial and spiritual are presented before man by such things as appear, and according to such things, therefore heaven is also described as being on high, when yet it is not on high, but within, or in an internal principle, see n. 450, 1380, 2148.

3388. "Because she is good to look upon"—that hereby is signified that it might be easily received, from this circumstance that it is called Divine, appears from the signification of good to look upon, as denoting that which pleases by it's form, thus what is easily received; the subject treated of is concerning those who are principled in the doctrinals of faith, and have no perception of truth from good, but have only a conscience of what is true grounded in this, that they have been taught so by their parents and masters; these are they who are called the men of the place, or of Gerar, n. 3385, 3387; with such persons, the first principle of the confirmation of truth is, that it is called Divine, for in this case they have instantly an idea of what is holy, which gives an universal confirmation to all and singular the things which are declared, and this, notwithstanding they do not comprehend such things; but still the things declared must be adequate to their apprehension; for it is not sufficient that a man knows a thing to be so, but he is also desirous to know what it is, and what is its quality, in order that some confirmation may thence accrue to his intellectual principle, and may be reflected back from that principle: if this be not the case, a thing may indeed be introduced to the memory, but it remains there only as a dead thing, or as a mere sound, and unless some confirming proofs infix it, from whatever source they are derived, it is dissipated like the remembrance only of somewhat that made a tinkling noise.

3389. Verses 8, 9. And it came to pass, because days were there prolonged to him, that Abimelech, king of the Philistines, looked out through a window, and saw, and behold Isaac was laughing with Rebecca his woman. And Abimelech called Isaac, and said, but behold she is thy woman, and how saidst thou she is my sister? and Isaac said unto him, because I said, perhaps I may die because of her. It came to pass because days were there prolonged to him, signifies a state of reception. Abimelech, king of the Philistines, looked out through a window, and saw, signifies the doctrine of faith having respect to things rational in knowledges: and behold Isaac was laughing with Rebecca his woman, signifies that Divine Good was present in Divine Truth: and Abimelech called Isaac and said, signifies the Lord's perception from doctrine; but behold she is thy woman, and how saidst thou she is my sister? signifies if Divine Truth, it was not also rational: and Isaac said unto him, because I said, perhaps I may die because of her, signifies that he would not be received.

3390. "It came to pass because days were prolonged to him"—that hereby is signified a state of reception, appears from the signification of prolonging there to him, viz. to Isaac, as denoting, that when the Divine Good, which is represented by Isaac, was there for some time, Divine Truth was received, for the subject treated of, in the internal sense, is concerning the reception of truth by the spiritual; and from the signification of days, as denoting states, see n. 23, 487, 488, 493, 893, 2788.

3391. "And Abimelech, king of the Philistines, looked out through a window, and saw"—that hereby is signified the doctrine of faith having respect to things rational in knowledges, appears from the representation of Abimelech, as denoting the doctrine of faith having respect to things rational, see n. 2504, 2509, 2510, 2533; and from the signification of king of the Philistines, as denoting doctrinals, see n. 3365; and from the signification of window, as denoting the intellectual principle, see n. 655, 658; consequently denoting the internal sight, for this formerly was signified by windows: thus to look out through a window is to perceive those things which appear by the internal sight, which things in general are knowledges, such as appertain to the external man; things rational, or, what is the same, appearances of truth, that is, truths spiritual, are not knowledges, but are in knowledges, for they appertain to the rational principle, thus to the internal man, and it is the internal man which has respect to the things of the external, thus to truths in knowledges; for knowledges, inasmuch as they appertain to the natural man, are vessels recipient of things rational; that Truths Divine flow into the rational principle, and through this into the natural, and in this latter are presented as an image of many things in a mirror, may be seen, n. 3368; that windows are such things as appertain to the internal sight, that is, to the intellect, which in one word are called things intellectual, appears from those passages of the Word which were adduced, n. 655, and still further from the following, "They shall run to and fro in the city, they shall run on the wall, they shall climb up into the houses, they shall enter in by the windows as a thief," Joel ii. 9; speaking of the evils and falses of the last days of the Church; to climb up into the houses, denotes the destroying the good things appertaining to the will principle: that house denotes such things, see n. 710, 2233, 2234; and to enter in by the windows, denotes the destroying truths and the knowledges thereof appertaining to the understanding. So in Zephaniah, "Jehovah will stretch out His hand over the north, and will destroy Ashur, troops shall lie down in the midst thereof, every wild beast of it's nation, the cormorant and bittern shall pass the night in the chapiters of it, a voice shall sing in the window, dryness shall be in the threshold, because He hath made bare the cedar," ii. 13, 14; speaking of the destruction of the truths of faith by ratiocinations, which are Ashur, see n. 119, 1186; by a voice singing in the window, is denoted the desolation of truth, thus the desolation of the intellectual faculty as to truth. So in the book of Judges, "The mother of Sisera looked out through a window, and cried through the lattice, why is his chariot so long in coming?" v. 28. This is part of the prophetic declaration of Deborah and Barak, concerning the resuscitation (raising up again) of a spiritual Church; by looking out through a window, are denoted the reasonings of those who deny truths, and thereby destroy the things which appertain to the Church, for such reasonings are things intellectual in an opposite sense. So in Jeremiah, "Wo to him that buildeth his house without justice, and his chambers without judgment; who saith, I will build for myself an house of measures and spacious chambers; and he cutteth out for himself windows, and things ceiled with cedar, and he painteth it with vermillion," xxii. 13, 14. To build a house without justice, and chambers without judgment, denotes religious principles and worship grounded in what is not good and true; that justice and judgment signify good and truth, may be seen, n. 2235; to cut out for himself windows and things ceiled with cedar, and to paint with vermillion, denotes the falsification of intellectual and spiritual truths. The windows of the temple at Jerusalem represented nothing else but what appertains to things intellectual, consequently to things spiritual. The same is signified by the windows of the new temple, as mentioned in Ezechiel, chap. xl. 16, 22, 25, 33, 36; chap. xli. 16, 26; for that the new temple, the new Jerusalem, and the new earth, as described in that prophet, are nothing else but the Lord's kingdom, every one may see, consequently the things mentioned in regard thereto must be such things as appertain to His kingdom.

3392. "And behold Isaac laughing with Rebecca his woman"—that hereby is signified that Divine Good was present in Divine Truth, or that Divine Good was adjoined to Divine Truth, appears from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Divine Good of the Lord's rational principle, see n. 3012, 3194, 3210; and from the signification of laughing, as denoting love or the affection of truth, see n. 2072, 2216; and from the representation of Rebecca, as denoting the Divine Truth of the Lord's rational principle, see n. 3012, 3013, 3077; hence it is evident, that by Isaac laughing with Rebecca his woman is signified, that Divine Good was present with Divine Truth: the sense of the above words in the series is, that truth spiritual is received at first for this reason, because it is called Divine, afterwards because the Divine [principle] is in it, which is clearly seen by those who are regenerated, and who become men of the spiritual Church; these are they who are meant by Abimelech, that is, they who are principled in the doctrines of faith, and have respect to truths in knowledges, concerning whom, see above, n. 3391.

3393. "And Abimelech called Isaac and said"—that hereby is signified the Lord's perception from doctrine, appears from the representation of Abimelech, as denoting doctrine that has respect to things rational, see n. 2504, 2509, 2510, 2533, 3391; and from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Lord's Divine Rational principle, concerning which see above, and from the signification of saying, as denoting to perceive, see n. 1898, 1919, 2080, 2862; and whereas Abimelech signifies that doctrine, in which now the Divine [principle] was perceived, therefore also by Abimelech is represented the Lord as to that doctrine; for all and singular the things contained in the Word, in a supreme sense, have relation to the Lord; and the Lord is essential doctrine, that is, the Word, not only as to the supreme sense therein, but also as to the internal sense, and even as to the literal sense, for this sense is representative and significative of the internal sense, as the internal sense is representative and significative of the supreme sense; and that which in the Word is representative and significative, is in it's essence that which is represented and signified, consequently it is the Divine [principle] of the Lord; for a representative is nothing else but an image of what is represented, and in the image is the [being] himself who is presented to view; this may appear from man's speech and also from his gestures, these being only images of the things which exist within in man, in his thought and will, so that speech and gesture are thought and will in a form; for if you take away thought and will thence, the remainder would be a mere inanimate somewhat, in which would be nothing human; hence it may appear how the case is with the Word, even in it's letter, viz. that it is Divine.

3394. "But behold she is thy woman, and how saidst thou she is my sister"—that hereby is signified if Divine Truth, it was not also rational, appears from the signification of woman, who is here Rebecca, as denoting the Divine Truth of the Lord's Divine Rational principle, see n. 3012, 3013, 3077; and from the signification of sister, as denoting truth rational, see n. 3386; thus by these words, "behold she is thy woman, and how saidst thou she is my sister," is signified that truth, as being Divine, cannot be rational. With respect to this arcanum, the case is as follows: the spiritual, inasmuch as they have not perception like the celestial, do not know that Divine Truth becomes rational truth with man when he is regenerated, they say indeed that all good and truth is from the Lord, but still, when good and truth exist in their rational principle, they suppose it to be their own, and thus as it were to be from themselves, so they cannot be separated from their proprium, [propriety, or own proper life of self,] which is willing so to think; with the celestial however, the case is this; they perceive Divine Good and Truth in the rational principle, that is, in things rational, which being illustrated by the Lord's Divine [principle] are appearances of truth, n. 3368, even in the natural principle, that is, in scientifics and things of sense, and inasmuch as they are in such a state, they can acknowledge that all good and truth flows in from the Lord, and also that there is a perceptive [faculty or principle] of good and truth, which is communicated and appropriated to them from the Lord, and causes their delight, blessedness, and happiness; hence it was that the most ancient people, who were celestial men, in all and singular the objects which they saw with their eyes, perceived nothing but things celestial and spiritual, see n. 1409: inasmuch as the subject here treated of is concerning the spiritual man regenerated, who by regeneration from the Lord receives Divine Good in a new will, and Divine Truth in a new understanding, and inasmuch as such persons are in no other perception, than that if truth be rational it cannot be Divine, as was said above, consequently that if it be Divine it has nothing common with what is rational, therefore it is here said, if Divine Truth, it was not also rational; this likewise is the reason why such persons are desirous that the things of faith should be believed simply, without being viewed from any rational ground, not being aware, that no article of faith, not even the most mysterious, is comprehended by any man without some rational idea, and also a natural one, the nature and quality of which idea he is nevertheless unacquainted with, see n. 3310; hereby indeed they may secure themselves against these, who reason from a negative principle concerning all and singular things of faith, whether they be true or not, see n. 2568, 2588; but to those who are in an affirmative principle concerning the Word, viz. that it is to be believed, such a position is hurtful, inasmuch as the freedom of thinking may thus be taken away, which every one enjoys, and the conscience may be bound even to the most heretical tenets, and thus dominion established over man's internal and external principles: these are the things signified by Abimelech saying to Isaac, "behold she is thy woman, and how saidst thou she is my sister."

3395. "And Isaac said unto him, because I said, perhaps I may die because of her"—that hereby is signified that he would not be received, appears from what was said above, n. 3387, at those words, "Because he feared to say, she is my woman, lest perhaps the men of the place may slay me for the sake of Rebecca." That to say, signifies to perceive and to think, appears more manifestly in this passage than in any other.

3396. Verses 10, 11. And Abimelech said, what is this that thou hast done to us, that one of the people might lightly have lain with thy woman, and thou wouldst have brought guilt upon us? And Abimelech charged all the people, saying, he that toucheth the man and his woman, dying shall die. Abimelech said, what is this that thou hast done to us, signifies indignation: that one of the people might lightly have lain with thy woman, and thou wouldst have brought guilt upon us, signifies that truth might have been adulterated and thereby profaned: and Abimelech charged all the people, saying, signifies a decree from the Lord in the spiritual Church: he that touches the man and his woman, dying shall die, signifies that Divine Truth and Divine Good are not to be opened, and are not to be acceded to by faith, through danger of eternal damnation if they should be profaned.

3398. "That one of the people might lightly have lain with thy woman, and thou wouldst have brought guilt upon us"—that hereby is signified that truth might have been adulterated and thereby profaned, appears from the signification of lying with, as denoting to be perverted or adulterated; and from the signification of one of the people, as denoting some one of the Church, viz. the spiritual Church, see n. 2928; and from the signification of woman, who is here Rebecca, as denoting Divine Truth, concerning which see above; and from the signification of guilt, as denoting the blame of the profanation of truth; hence it is evident, that by these words, "One of the people might lightly have lain with thy woman, and thou wouldst have brought guilt upon us," is denoted, that some one of the Church might easily have adulterated Divine Truth, and thereby have brought upon himself the blame of profanation. It was said above, n. 3386, that inasmuch as Abraham on two occasions called his wife Sarah his sister, first in Egypt, and afterwards in Gerar with Abimelech, and that Isaac in like manner called his woman Rebecca his sister, when he also was with Abimelech, and inasmuch as these three cases are likewise recorded in the Word, there must be some most mysterious reason for all this. The real mystery appears evidently from the internal sense, and is this, that since by sister is signified rational truth, and by woman Divine Truth, therefore this latter was called rational, that is, sister, lest Divine Truth, which is woman, and which is here Rebecca, should be adulterated, and thereby profaned. In regard to the profanation of truth, the case is this; Divine Truth can in nowise be profaned, except by those who have first acknowledged it; for such, having first entered into truth by acknowledgment and belief, and having thus been initiated into it, when they afterwards recede from it, there continually remains with them some traces or footsteps thereof inwardly impressed, which are recalled whensoever what is false and evil is present, and hence the truth, by reason of it's adhering thereto, is profaned. Such persons therefore, with whom this is the case, have continually in themselves what condemns them, consequently their own hell; for the infernals, when they approach towards the sphere where good and truth is, instantly are made sensible of their own hell, inasmuch as they come into that which they account hateful, consequently into torment; whosoever therefore have profaned truth, dwell continually with that which torments them, and this according to the degree of profanation. It is on this account, that the Lord is most especially provident, to prevent the profanation of Divine Good and Truth; and His providence herein operates principally in this way of prevention, that man, who is of such a nature that he cannot do otherwise but profane, is withheld as far as possible from the acknowledgment and belief of what is true and good, for, as was observed, no one can profane, but he who has before acknowledged and believed: this was the reason why internal truths were not discovered to the posterity of Jacob, the Israelites and Jews, nor was it even openly declared to them, that there was any internal principle in man, consequently that there was any internal worship, and scarce anything was openly said concerning a life after death, and concerning the heavenly kingdom of the Lord, or of the Messiah whom they expected. The reason was, because they were a people of such a nature, that it was foreseen, in case such things had been discovered to them, they could not have done otherwise than profane them, inasmuch as they had no will or inclination for anything but what was terrestrial; and being such a generation in old time, and also being such at present, it is likewise still permitted that they should remain altogether in a state of unbelief; for if they had once acknowledged the truth, and afterwards receded from it, they must needs have occasioned to themselves the most grievous of all hells. This was also the reason, why the Lord did not come into the world, and reveal the internal things of the Word, until there was not any good remaining with them, not even natural good, for in this case they could no longer receive any truth to a degree of internal acknowledgment, inasmuch as it is good which so receives, consequently they could not profane it; this state was what is meant by the fulness of time, and by the consummation of the age, and also by the last day so much spoken of by the prophets. It is for this same reason, that the arcana of the internal sense of the Word are now revealed, inasmuch as at this day there is scarce any faith, because there is not any charity, consequently because it is the consummation of the age, and when this takes place, then the arcana of the internal sense of the Word may be revealed without danger of profanation, because they are not interiorly acknowledged. It is on account of this arcanum, that it is recorded in the Word concerning Abraham and Isaac, that, when in Gerar with Abimelech, they called their wives sisters. See further what was said and shewn above on this subject, viz. that they may profane truth, who acknowledge it, but not they who do not acknowledge it, and still less they who do not know it, n. 593, 1008, 1010, 1059. What is the danger arising from a profanation of holy things and of the Word, n. 571, 582. That they who are within the Church may profane holy things, but not they who are without the Church, n. 2051. That it is provided of the Lord that there be no profanation, n. 1001, 2426. That worship becomes external to prevent the profanation of internal, n. 1327, 1328. That men are kept in ignorance, to prevent the profanation of the truths of faith, n. 301, 302, 303.

3399. That lying with the woman in the internal sense denotes to pervert and adulterate truth, in the present case Truth

Divine, because by the woman or Rebecca is represented Divine Truth, as was shewn above, may appear from this consideration, that by lying with, by adultery, and by prostitution, in the Word, nothing else is signified but perversions of good, and falsifications of truth, as was shewn, n. 2466, 2729; and this by reason that adulteries are altogether contrary to conjugal love, so as to be destructive thereof, and conjugal love is derived from the marriage of good and truth, see n. 2508, 2618, 2727 to 2759, 3132; therefore those things which are contrary to good and truth, or which destroy them, are in the Word called adulteries. But it is to be observed, that they who are of the spiritual Church cannot adulterate good as to profane it, by reason that they cannot receive good, so as to have a perception of it, like the celestial: they are capable however of profaning truth, because this they can acknowledge: but in the last time of the Church, they cannot acknowledge truth, inasmuch as at that time unbelief prevails with them universally concerning the Lord, concerning a life after death, and concerning the internal man; and unbelief, which prevails universally, has this effect, that the truths of faith do not penetrate interiorly; an universal principle of unbelief, prevailing with any one, limits and prevents the interior admission of such truths, though the man be ignorant of it, and though he even fancies that he believes them. But they who are capable of profaning good, are of the celestial Church, for these can receive good even to a degree of perception; this was the case with the antediluvians, who were therefore separated from all others, and confined in a hell separate from the hells of others, see n. 1265 to 1272; and the prevention of any further profanation of good is signified by what is written, when the man was cast out of Eden, that "Jehovah caused to dwell on the east at the garden of Eden, cherubs, and the flame of a sword turning itself, to keep the way of the tree of lives;" Gen. iii. 24; on which subject, see n. 308, 310.

3400. That guilt is the blame or imputation of sin and pervariation against good and truth, may appear from the following passages of the Word where guilt is mentioned, and also described, as in Isaiah, "It pleased Jehovah to bruise him, and he made him weak: if thou shalt make guilt his soul, he shall see seed, he shall prolong days, and the will of Jehovah shall prosper by his hand," liii. 10; speaking of the Lord, where to make guilt His soul denotes sin imputed to Him, consequently blame by those who hated Him; not that in Himself He contracted any thing of sin, that He should take it away. So in Ezechiel, "By the blood which thou hast shed, thou hast had guilt, and by thine idols which thou hast made, thou hast been polluted," xxii. 4; where to shed blood denotes violence offered to good, see n. 374, 376, 1005, whence comes guilt. So in

David, "The haters of what is just shall have guilt, Jehovah redeemeth the soul of His servants; all that trust in Him shall not have guilt," Psalm xxxiv. 21, 22; thus guilt denotes all sin, which remains; its separation by good derived from the Lord is redemption, which was also represented by the expiation (or atonement) made by the priest, when they offered the sacrifice of guilt, see Levit. v. 1 to 26; chap. vii. 1 to 10; chap. xix. 20, 21, 22; Numb. v. 1 to 8; where also the kinds of guilt are enumerated, which are these, the hearing the voice of cursing and not declaring it: the touching any thing unclean: the swearing to do evil: the sinning by mistake concerning the holy things of Jehovah: the doing any of those things which are forbidden by the commandments: the refusing to a neighbour what was delivered to be kept: the finding what was lost, and denying it and swearing falsely; the lying with a woman that is a bondmaid betrothed to a man, not redeemed, neither made free; the doing of all sins against man by committing trespass against Jehovah.

3401. "And Abimelech commanded all his people, saying"—that hereby is signified a decree from the Lord in the spiritual Church, appears from the signification of commanding, as denoting to make a decree; and from the representation of Abimelech, as denoting those who are in the doctrine of faith, see n. 3392, and in a supreme sense denoting the Lord, see n. 3393; and from the signification of people as denoting those who are of the spiritual Church, see n. 3398; hence it is evident, that by Abimelech's commanding all the people is signified a decree from the Lord in the spiritual Church; the decree itself is what follows, viz. that Divine Truth and Divine Good are not to be opened, and not to be acceded to from a principle of faith, for fear of eternal damnation in case they should be profaned; this is the subject next treated of.

3402. "He that toucheth this man and his woman, dying shall die"—that hereby is signified that Divine Truth and Divine Good are not to be opened, and not to be acceded to from a principle of faith, for fear of eternal damnation in case they should be profaned, appears from the signification of touching this man and this woman, as denoting to accede to Divine Truth and Divine Good, which are represented by Isaac and Rebecca; truth is here mentioned in the first place, and good in the second, because the subject treated of is concerning those who are in the spiritual Church, who are capable of adulterating, yea, of profaning truth, but not good, and it is for this reason also that they are called man (vir) and woman, see n. 915, 2517; and from the signification of dying to die, as denoting eternal damnation, which is spiritual death, in the present case arising from profanation, which is the subject here treated of. That it is of the Lord's providence, that no one be admitted into good and truth, that is, into the acknowledgment and affection thereof, any further than he can remain steadfast therein through danger of eternal damnation, may be seen, n. 3398. The case with good and truth, as has been said and shewn above, is, that they betake themselves to an inner place in man, in proportion as he is in evil and in what is false, consequently the angels, who are attendant upon him from heaven, retire in the same proportion, and diabolical spirits from hell in the same proportion come near. The removal of good and truth, consequently of angels from man, who is principled in what is evil and false, does not appear to him, because in such case he is in a persuasion that evil is good, and that what is false is truth, and this by reason of the affection and consequent delight thereof, and when he is in this state, it is impossible for him to know that good and truth are removed from him. Good and truth, or the angels, are then said to be removed from man, when he is not affected with them, that is, when they no longer delight him, being affected contrariwise with the things appertaining to self-love and the love of the world, that is, being delighted solely with such things. To know what is good and true, or to have them in the memory, and to talk about them, is not to possess them, but to be affected with them from the heart, this is to possess them; neither can he be said to possess good and truth, who is affected with them for the sake of gaining thereby reputation and wealth, for in such case he is not affected with good and truth, but with honour and gain, and he makes the former only means of obtaining the latter; with such in another life there is a removal of the goods and truths which they had known, and which they had even preached, during their life in the body, whereas self-love and the love of the world, which were the ruling principles of their lives, remain. From these considerations, it may appear how the case is in regard to good and truth, viz. that no one is allowed to accede thereto with affection and faith, unless he be such, that he can continue steadfast therein to his life's end; but they who profane, cannot possibly be withheld thence.

3403. Verses 12, 13, 14. And Isaac sowed in that land, and found in that year an hundred measures, and Jehovah blessed him. And the man increased, and went in going and increasing, insomuch that he became exceeding great. And he had acquisition of flock, and acquisition of herd, and much service; and the Philistines envied him. Isaac sowed in that land, signifies interior truths, which are from the Lord, appearing to the rational principle: and he found in that year an hundred measures, signifies abundance: and Jehovah blessed him, signifies as to the good of love therein: and the man increased, and went in going and increasing, insomuch that he became exceeding great, signifies increases: and he had acquisition of flock and acquisition of herd, signifies as to good interior, and as to good exterior : and much service, signifies truth thence derived : and the Philistines envied him, signifies that they who were principled only in the science of knowledges did not comprehend.

they derive their thoughts from the states of things as to esse and existere. From these few considerations it may appear what is the nature of the appearances of truth here treated of, and which are of a superior degree. In what follows, the appearances of truth of an inferior degree are treated of, such as are also adequate to man's apprehension.

3405. "And he found in that year an hundred measures"—that hereby is signified abundance, appears from the signification of year, as denoting the entire state here treated of, see n. 487, 488, 493, 893; and from the signification of hundred, as denoting much and full, see n. 2636; and from the signification of measure, as denoting the state of a thing as to truth, see n. 3104; these things collected into one signify abundance of truth. The subject treated of in this, as in other parts of the Word, in a supreme sense, is concerning the Lord, viz. that He also was in the appearances of truth, when in the maternal human [principle], but that as He put off this human [principle], He put off those appearances also, and put on the essential Divine [principle] infinite and eternal: but the subject treated of, in the internal or respective sense, is concerning appearances of a superior degree with the angels, the abundance whereof is signified by the finding in that year an hundred measures. With respect to appearances of truth, or to truths which are from the Divine [principle], the case is this, that such as are of a superior degree, immensely exceed those which are in an inferior degree, both in abundance and in perfection, for myriads, yea, myriads of myriads of things, which are distinctly perceived by those who are in a superior degree, appear only as one with those who are in an inferior degree, inasmuch as things inferior are nothing but composites of things superior; as may be concluded from the memories appertaining to man, the interior of which, as being in a superior degree, so immensely excels the exterior which is in an inferior degree, see n. 2473, 2474. Hence it may appear, in what wisdom the angels are principled in comparison of man, the angels of the third heaven being even in the fourth degree above man, concerning which wisdom therefore, when described to man, nothing can be predicated but that it is incomprehensible, yea, ineffable.

3407. "And the man increased, and went in going and increasing, until he became exceeding great"—that hereby are signified increments [increasings], appears from the signification of increasing, of going, and of becoming exceeding great, as denoting increments of good in their order, viz. from truth to good, and from good to truth.

3408. "And he had acquisition of flock and acquisition of herd"—that hereby is signified as to good interior and as to good exterior, that is, as to good rational and as to good natural, appears from the signification of flock, as denoting interior or rational good, see n. 343, 2566; and from the signification of herd, as denoting exterior or natural good, see n. 2566. Good natural, which is signified by herd, is not that which is connate with man, but that which is procured by knowledges of truth joined to affection of good; for good natural, which is connate, is in itself a mere animal principle, having place also with the animals, whereas good natural, which is procured, or with which man is gifted of the Lord, contains in it a spiritual principle, so that it is spiritual good in natural; this latter good is the essential natural human good, whereas the former, viz. that which is connate, although it appears as good, may still not be good, yea, it may be evil, for it may receive even false principles, and believe that to be good which is evil; such natural good is found to exist amongst nations of the worst principles both as to life and faith.

3409. "And much service"—that hereby is signified truth thence derived, appears from the signification of service, as denoting all that which is beneath, which is subordinate and which obeys, see n. 1713, 2541, 3012, 3020, consequently denoting truth, as being derived from good, and ministering to good; on which subject much has been said above.

3410. "And the Philistines envied him"—that hereby is signified that they who were principled only in the science of knowledges, did not comprehend, appears from the signification of envying, as here denoting not to comprehend, as appears from what follows: and from the signification of Philistinaea, as denoting the science of knowledges, consequently by Philistines are denoted those who are principled in the science of knowledges, see n. 1197, 1198.

3411. Verses 15, 16, 17. And all the wells, which his father's servants digged, in the days of Abraham his father, the Philistines stopped them up, and filled them with dust. And Abimelech said unto Isaac, go from being with us, because thou prevailest exceedingly above us. And Isaac departed thence, and pitched his camp in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there. All the wells, which his father's servants digged, in the days of Abraham his father, the Philistines stopped them up, signifies that they who were principled in the science of knowledges were not willing to know interior truths which are from the Divine [principle], and thus obliterated them: and filled them with dust, signifies by things terrestrial: and Abimelech said unto Isaac, signifies the Lord's perception concerning that doctrine: go from being with us, because thou prevailest exceedingly above us, signifies that they could not endure those truths by reason of the Divine [principle] which was in them; and Isaac departed thence, signifies that the Lord left interior doctrinals: and pitched his camp in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there, signifies that he betook himself to inferior rational things, or from interior appearances to exterior.

3412. "All the wells which his father's servants digged in the days of Abraham his father, the Philistines stopped them up"—that hereby is signified that they, who were principled in the science of knowledges, were not willing to know interior truths, which are from the Divine [principle], and thus obliterated them, appears from the signification of wells, as denoting truths; see n. 2702, 3096; in the present case interior truths, which are from the Divine [principle], inasmuch as the wells, by which truths are signified, are said to be digged by his father's servants, in the days of Abraham his father, for by Abraham is represented the Lord's essential Divine [principle], see n. 2011, 2833, 2836, 3251, 3305; and from the signification of stopping up, as denoting not to be willing to know, and thus to obliterate; and from the representation of the Philistines, as denoting those who are principled solely in the science of knowledges, see n. 1197, 1198. The subject now treated of is concerning appearances of truth of an inferior degree, in which they may be principled who are in the science of knowledges, and who are here meant by Philistines. With respect to interior truths which are from the Divine [principle], and are obliterated by those who are called Philistines, the case is this; in the ancient Church, and afterwards, they were called Philistines, who applied little to life but much to doctrine, and who in process of time even rejected the things appertaining to life, and acknowledged as essentials of the Church the things appertaining to faith, which they separated from life; consequently who made light of the doctrinals of charity, which in the ancient Church were the all of doctrine, and thus obliterated them, and instead thereof professed and taught the doctrinals of faith, and placed the whole of religion therein; and inasmuch as they receded hereby from the life which is of charity, or from charity which is of life, they were particularly called the uncircumcised; for by the uncircumcised were signified all who were not principled in charity, howsoever they might be principled in doctrinals, see n. 2049: such, who receded from charity, removed themselves also from wisdom and intelligence; for no one can be wise and intelligent so as to understand what truth is, unless he be principled in good, that is, in charity, inasmuch as all truth is from good, and has respect to good; thus they who are without good cannot understand truth, and do not even desire to know it. With such, in another life, when they are far from heaven, there sometimes appears a snowy light, but this light is like the light of winter, which, being void of heat, causes no fructification; wherefore also, when such approach towards heaven, their light is turned into mere darkness, and their minds into like darkness, that is into stupor. From these considerations then it may appear, that they who were principled solely in the science of knowledges, were not willing to know interior truths, which are from the Divine [principle], and thus obliterated them.

3413. "And filled them with dust"—that hereby is signified by things terrestrial, that is by the love of self and of gain, appears from the signification of dust, as denoting such love, see n. 242; the meaning is, that they who are called Philistines, that is, who are not principled in life, but in doctrine, obliterate interior truths by terrestrial loves, which are the loves of self and of gain; in consequence of these loves they were called the uncircumcised, see n. 2039, 2044, 2056, 2632; for they who are in these loves cannot possibly do otherwise than fill the wells of Abraham with dust, that is obliterate the interior truths of the Word by things terrestrial; for from those loves they can in no wise see things spiritual, that is, the things which are of the light of truth from the Lord, inasmuch as those loves cause darkness, and darkness extinguishes the light of truth, since as was said above, n. 3412, on the approach of the light of truth from the Lord, they who are principled in doctrine only, and not in life, are altogether darkened and confused, yea, become so affected as to be angry, and to desire to dissipate truths by every method possible: for the love of self and of gain is of such a nature, that it cannot endure anything of truth from the Divine [principle] to come near unto it; still, however, persons under the influence of such love can glory and pride themselves in this, that they know truths, yea, they can preach them from a kind of zeal, but then it is the fire of those loves which kindles and excites them herein, and their zeal is merely a warmth thence derived; as may appear plain from this consideration, that they can preach against their own essential life with a like zeal or fervour. These are the terrestrial things, with which the very Word itself, which is the fountain of all truth, is obstructed.

3414. "And Abimelech said unto Isaac"—that hereby is signified the Lord's perception concerning that doctrine, appears from the signification of saying, as denoting to perceive, concerning which see above in many places; and from the representation of Abimelech, who is here king of the Philistines, as denoting that doctrine, see n. 3365, 3391 ; and from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Lord as to the Divine Rational principle.

3415. "Go from being with us because thou prevailest over us exceedingly"—that hereby is signified that they could not endure interior truths by reason of the Divine [principle] therein, may appear from the signification of the expression, go from being with us, as denoting not to endure presence ; and from the signification of prevailing exceedingly, as denoting by reason of opulence, in the present case by reason of the Divine [principle], which was in interior truths ; that they who are called Philistines, cannot endure the presence of good, consequently cannot endure the presence of the Divine [principle], may be seen above, n. 3413.

3416. "And Isaac departed thence"—that hereby is signified that the Lord left interior truths, appears from the signification of departing thence, as denoting to leave, in the present case to leave interior truths, because these are here treated of ; and from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Lord as to the Divine Rational principle. By the Lord's leaving interior truths is signified, that He does not open them to persons of such a character, for there are in the Word throughout internal truths, but such persons, who are principled in the science of knowledges, and not at the same time in life, when they read the Word, do not even see those truths ; as may appear from this consideration, that they who make the essential of salvation to consist in faith, do not even attend to those things which the Lord so frequently spake concerning love and charity, see n. 1017, 2373 ; and they who do attend, call those things the fruits of faith, which fruits they thus distinguish, yea, separate from charity, being ignorant of its true nature and quality ; thus the posterior things of the Word appear to them, but not the anterior things, that is, the exterior things, but not the interior ; and to see things posterior or exterior, without seeing anterior or interior things, is to see nothing of what is Divine : this is what is meant by the Lord's leaving interior truths, which is signified by Isaac's departing thence ; not that the Lord leaves any, but that they remove themselves from the Lord, inasmuch as they remove themselves from those things which appertain to life.

3417. "And he pitched (or measured out) his camp in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there"—that hereby is signified that he betook himself to inferior rational things, or from interior appearances to exterior, appears from the signification of pitching (or measuring out) a camp, as denoting to arrange in order ; and from the signification of the valley of Gerar, as denoting inferior rational things, or the exterior appearances of truth, for valley signifies inferior things, or, what is the same, exterior things, see n. 1723, and Gerar denotes things appertaining to faith, consequently the things appertaining to truth, see n. 1209, 2504, 3365, 3384, 3385; and from the signification of dwelling (or inhabiting), as denoting to be and to live, see n. 3384; hence it is evident, that by pitching his camp in the valley of Gerar and dwelling there, is signified, that the Lord arranged truths in such order that they might be adequate also to the comprehension and genius of those who are not principled in life, but in the doctrinals of faith; as may appear from the Word, where also truths are thus adapted. For example; they who are principled in doctrinals and not so much in life, know no other than that the kingdom of heaven is similar to kingdoms on earth in this respect, that authority over others therein constitutes greatness, the delight arising from such authority being the only delight with which they are acquainted, wherefore the Lord spake also according to this appearance, as in Matthew, "Whosoever doeth and teacheth, he shall be called great in the kingdom of the heavens," v. 19; and in David, "I have said, ye are gods, and ye are all the sons of the Highest," lxxxii. 6; John x. 34, 35; and inasmuch as the disciples themselves had at first no other sentiments respecting the kingdom of heaven, than such as were grounded in earthly greatness and pre-eminence, as appears from Matt. chap. xviii. 1; Mark ix. 34; Luke ix. 46; and also had an idea of sitting on the right-hand and the left of a king, Matt. xx. 20, 21, 24; Mark x. 37; therefore also the Lord replied according to their apprehension and idea saying, (when they disputed which of them should be greatest) "Ye shall eat and drink on My table in My kingdom, and shall sit on thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel," Luke xxii. 24, 30; Matt. xix. 28; for at this time they did not know that heavenly delight was not a delight grounded in greatness and pre-eminence, but a delight grounded in humiliation and the affection of serving others, consequently in a desire of being the least and not the greatest, as the Lord teaches in Luke, "Whosoever is least among you all, he shall be great," ix. 48. Thus they who are principled in the science of knowledges, and not in the life of charity, cannot know that there exists any delight but what results from pre-eminence; and inasmuch as this is the only delight of which they have any idea, therefore they are altogether ignorant of heavenly delight resulting from humiliation and an affection of being serviceable to others, that is the delight of love to the Lord and of charity towards their neighbour, consequently of the blessedness and happiness thence derived; this is the reason why the Lord spake in the way of application to their infirmity, that so they might be excited and introduced to good, both to learn, and to teach, and to practise it; nevertheless He teaches what greatness and pre-eminence in heaven is,

Matt. xix. 30; chap. xx. 16, 25, 27, 28; Mark x. 31, 42, 43, 44, 45; Luke ix. 48; chap. xiii. 30; chap. xxii. 25, 26, 27, 28: these and such like are the appearances of truth of an inferior degree; it being true in a respective sense, that in heaven all become great, pre-eminent, powerful, and of authority, for one angel has greater power than myriads of infernal spirits, yet not of himself, but from the Lord: and only so far from the Lord, as he believes that he has no power self-derived, and thus that he is least; and this he may believe, so far as he is in humiliation, and the affection of being serviceable to others, that is, so far as he is principled in the good of love to the Lord, and of charity towards his neighbour.

3418. Verse 18. And Isaac returned, and digged again the wells of waters, which they digged in the days of Abraham his father, and the Philistines stopped them up after the death of Abraham; and he called their names, according to the names which his father called them. Isaac returned and digged again the wells of waters, which they digged in the days of Abraham his father, signifies that the Lord opened those truths which were known and received amongst the ancients: and the Philistines stopped them up after the death of Abraham, signifies that they who were principled in the science of knowledges only, denied those truths: and he called their names, signifies their quality: according to the names which his father called them, signifies significatives of truth.

3419. "Isaac returned and digged again the wells of waters which they digged in the days of Abraham his father"—that hereby is signified that the Lord opened those truths which were known and received among the ancients, appears from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Lord as to the Divine Rational principle, concerning which see above; and from the signification of returning and digging again, as denoting to open again; and from the signification of wells of waters, as denoting truths of knowledges; that wells are truths, see n. 2702, 3096, and that waters are knowledges, see n. 28, 2702, 3058; and from the signification of the days of Abraham his father, as denoting time and state antecedent as to truths, which truths are signified by the words, Which they digged at that time, consequently which were known and received amongst the ancients; that days denote time and state, see n. 23, 487, 488, 493, 893: when days denote state, then by Abraham the father is represented the essential Divine [principle] of the Lord, before that He adjoined to it the human [principle], see n. 2833, 2836, 3251; when they denote time, then by Abraham the father are signified the goods and truths which were derived from the Lord's Divine [principle] before He adjoined to it the Human [principle], thus the goods and truths which were known and received amongst the ancients. The truths which were known and received amongst the ancients, are at this day obliterated, inso-much that it is scarce known to any one that they ever existed, and that they could be any other than what are taught at this day; nevertheless they were totally different: the ancients had representatives and significatives of things celestial and spiritual appertaining to the Lord's kingdom, consequently to the Lord Himself, and they who understood such representatives and significatives, were called wise; and in reality they were wise, for hereby they were enabled to discourse with spirits and angels, inasmuch as angelic discourse, which is incomprehensible to man, as being spiritual and celestial, when it is conveyed down to man who is in a natural sphere, falls into representatives and significatives such as exist in the Word, and hence it is that the Word is a holy code or volume; for what is Divine cannot be presented or exhibited otherwise before the natural man, so as that a full correspondence may exist. And inasmuch as the ancients were principled in representatives and significatives of the Lord's kingdom, in which kingdom nothing prevails but celestial and spiritual love, therefore they had also doctrinals which treated solely concerning love to God and charity towards their neighbour, by virtue of which doctrinals they were also called wise; from these doctrinals they knew that the Lord would come into the world, and that Jehovah was in Him, and that He would make the human [principle] in Himself Divine, and would thereby save the human race; from the same doctrinals they knew also what charity is, viz. that it is an affection of being serviceable to others without having respect to any recompense; and also what is meant by the neighbour towards whom charity is to be exercised, viz. that it means all in the universe, but still each with discrimination; these doctrinals are at this day utterly lost, and instead thereof the doctrinals of faith are adopted, which the ancients accounted as nothing respectively; those doctrinals, viz. of love to the Lord and of charity towards one's neighbour, are rejected at this day, partly by those who in the Word are called Babylonians and Chaldeans, and partly by those who are called Philistines and also Egyptians, and they are so destroyed, that there scarce remains any trace or vestige thereof; for who knows at this day what that charity is, which is void of all self-respect, and is averse to every thing that merely regards self: and who knows what is meant by neighbour, viz. that it means every individual person with discrimination according to the quantity and quality of good appertaining to each, thus it means good itself, consequently in a supreme sense the Lord Himself, because He is in all good, and all good is from Him, and the good which is not from Him is not good, howsoever it may appear to be so; and inasmuch as it is not known what charity is, and what neighbour, it is not known also who they are that in the Word are signified by the poor, by the miserable, by the needy, by the sick, by the hungry and thirsty, by the oppressed, by widows, by orphans, by captives, by the naked, by sojourners, by the blind, by the deaf, by the halt, by the lame, and by others; when yet the doctrinals of the ancients taught who are to be understood by persons of this description, and to what class of neighbour, and thus of charity, they belonged; according to those doctrinals the whole Word is written as to the sense of the letter, and therefore whosoever is unacquainted with them, cannot possibly know any interior sense of the Word; as in Isaiah, "Is it not to break bread to the hungry, and that thou take into thine house the afflicted outcasts, when thou seest the naked that thou cover him, and that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh; then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thy health shall bud forth speedily, and thy righteousness shall walk before thee, the glory of Jehovah shall gather thee," Ivii. 7, 8; he who lays stress on the literal sense of these words, believes that if he only gives bread to a hungry person, takes into his house afflicted outcasts or vagabonds, and covers the naked, he shall on that account be admitted into the glory of Jehovah, or into heaven, when nevertheless such are mere external acts, which even the wicked may perform in order to merit heaven; but by the hungry, the afflicted, the naked, are signified those who are spiritually such, consequently different states of misery incident to man, who is the neighbour towards whom charity is to be exercised. So in David, "Doing judgment to the oppressed, giving bread to the hungry, Jehovah looseth the bound, Jehovah openeth the blind, Jehovah raiseth up the bowed down, Jehovah loveth the just, Jehovah guardeth the sojourners, He supporteth the fatherless and widow," Psalm cxlvi. 7, 8, 9; where by the oppressed, the hungry, the bound, the blind, the bowed down, the sojourners, the fatherless and the widow, are not meant those who are commonly so called, but who are such as to spiritual things, or as to their souls; who these were, and in what state and degree they were neighbours, consequently what charity was to be exercised towards them, was taught by the doctrinals of the ancients; not to mention many other passages which occur in the Old Testament throughout; for the Divine [principle] when it descends to the natural principle appertaining to man, fixes its descent in such things as works of charity, with discrimination according to genera and species; in like manner also the Lord spake, because He spake from the essential Divine [principle], as in Matthew, "The king shall say to those on the right-hand, come ye blessed of My Father, possess the kingdom prepared for you; for I was an hungred and ye gave Me to eat, I was thirsty and ye gave Me to drink, I was a stranger and ye gathered Me, I was naked and ye clothed Me, I was sick and ye visited Me, I was in prison and ye came to Me," xxv. 34, 35, 36; by the Works here recounted are signified universal genera (kinds) of charity, and in what degree the several genera are good, or in what degree they are good who are the neighbours towards whom charity is to be exercised, and that the Lord in a supreme sense is neighbour, for He says, "So much as ye have done to one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done to Me," verse 40, of the same chapter. From these few considerations it may appear what is meant by the truths taught and received amongst the ancients; but that these truths are altogether obliterated by those who are principled in the doctrinals of faith, and not in the life of charity, that is, by those who in the Word are called Philistines, is signified by the Philistines stopping up the wells after the death of Abraham, which is the subject next treated of.

3420. "The Philistines stopped them up after the death of Abraham"—that hereby is signified that they who were principled only in the science of knowledges denied those truths, appears from the signification of stopping up, as denoting not to be willing to know, and what is the same thing, to deny, thus to obliterate, concerning which see above, n. 3412; and from the representation of the Philistines, as denoting those who are principled only in the science of knowledges, see n. 1197, 1198, 3412, 3413. They are principled in the science of knowledges, who are principled in the doctrinals of faith, and are not willing to know the truths of knowledges or of doctrinals. The truths of knowledges or of doctrinals are those which appertain to life, and respect charity towards our neighbour and love to the Lord; doctrine, to which doctrinals and knowledges appertain, only teaches those truths; he therefore who teaches what ought to be done, and does not do it, is not willing to know truths, for they are contrary to his life, and what is contrary to his life he also denies. It is in consequence of such conduct that the doctrinals of love and charity, which, in the ancient Church, were the all of doctrine, are obliterated.

3421. "And called their names"—that hereby are signified their quality, appears from the signification of calling names, as denoting quality, see n. 144, 145, 1754, 1896, 2009, 2724, 3006, 3237; and inasmuch as to call names, or name, denotes quality, therefore, to call, without the addition of name, in the internal sense of the Word, signifies to be of such or such a quality, as in Isaiah, "Hear this ye house of Israel, called by the name of Israel, and they have departed from the waters of Judah, because from the city of holiness are they called, and stay themselves upon the God of Israel," xlviii. 1, 2; where to be called from the city of holiness, denotes to be of such a quality: so in Luke, "Behold thou shalt conceive in the womb, and shalt bring forth a son, and shalt call His name Jesus, He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest," i. 31, 32; where to be called the Son of the Highest denotes to be so.

3422. "According to the names which his father called them"—that hereby are signified significatives of truth, appears from this consideration, that the names which in ancient times were given to persons, places, and things, were all significative, see n. 340, 1946, 2643, thus the names given to fountains and wells were significative of those things which were formerly understood by fountains and wells, which things that they had relation to truth, was shewn, n. 2702, 3096; and whereas names were significative, by name also, and by calling by name in general is signified the quality either of a thing or state, as was just now observed above, n. 3421; and this being the case, by names in the Word, in it's internal sense, is not signified any person, or any nation, or any kingdom, or any city, but a thing in all instances whatsoever. Every one may conclude, that in the present case by wells is signified somewhat heavenly, for unless this had been their signification, to mention so many particulars concerning wells would not have been worthy the Divine Word, because it would have been of no use to be acquainted with them: as for instance, that the Philistines stopped up the wells which the servants of Abraham digged; that Isaac digged them again, and that he called their names according to their former names; and afterwards that the servants of Isaac digged a well in the valley, about which the shepherds disputed; and that they digged again another well about which they also disputed; and afterwards another well, about which they did not dispute; and again another; and lastly, that they told him concerning a new well, verses 15, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 25, 32, 33; but the heavenly principle, which is signified by these wells, is now made manifest from the internal sense.

3423. Verses 19, 20, 21. And the servants of Isaac digged in the valley, and they found there a well of living waters. And the shepherds of Gerar disputed with the shepherds of Isaac, saying, we have the waters; and he called the name of the well Esek, because they contended with him. And they digged another well, and they disputed also over it, and he called the name thereof Sitnah. The servants of Isaac digged in the valley, and they found there a well of living waters, signifies the Word as to the literal sense, in which is the internal sense; and the shepherds of Gerar disputed with the shepherds of Isaac, signifies that they who taught, did not see any such thing therein, because opposite things appear; saying, we have the waters, signifies they are in the truth; and he called the name of the well Esek, because they contended with him, signifies denial on account of those things, also on account of other things, as being contrary to them, and on account of several things besides; and they digged another well, and they disputed also over it, signifies the internal sense of the Word, whether there be such a sense; and he called the name thereof Sitnah, signifies their quality.

3424. "The servants of Isaac digged in the valley, and they found there a well of living waters"—that hereby is signified the Word as to the literal sense, in which is the internal sense, appears from the signification of digging in a valley, as denoting to inquire lower according to truths where they are; for to dig is to inquire, and a valley is what is below, see n. 1723, 3417; and from the signification of a well of living waters, as denoting the Word in which are Truths Divine, thus denoting the Word as to the literal sense in which is the internal sense. That the Word is called a fountain, and indeed a fountain of living waters, is well known; the ground and reason why the Word is also called a well, is, because the sense of the letter is respectively such, and because the Word in respect to the spiritual is not a fountain but a well, see n. 2702, 3096; inasmuch as a valley denotes what is below, or, what is the same thing, somewhat more external, and the fountain was found in a valley, and the literal sense is the lower or more external sense of the Word, therefore it is the literal sense which is understood; but whereas in the literal sense is contained the internal sense, that is, the heavenly and Divine sense, therefore the waters thereof are said to be living, as is said also of the waters which went forth under the threshold of the new house, in Ezechiel, where it is written, "And it shall come to pass, every soul a wild beast which creepeth, to whichever the river there comes, liveth; and there shall be exceeding much fish, because those waters come thither and are healed, and every thing liveth whither the river cometh," xlvii. 9; where the river is the Word; the waters which cause every thing to live, are the Divine Truths contained in the Word; fish are scientifics, see n. 40, 991. That the Word of the Lord is such, as to give life to him that thirsteth, that is, to him that desires life, and that it is 'a fountain whose waters are living, the Lord also teaches in John, in these words, speaking to the woman of Samaria at Jacob's well, "If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, give me to drink, thou wouldst ask of him, and he would give thee living water; whoso drinketh of the water which I shall give him, shall never thirst, but the water which I shall give him, shall become in him a fountain of water springing up unto eternal life," iv. 10, 14. The ground and reason why the Word is living or alive, and thus gives life, is, because in a supreme sense the Lord is therein treated of, and in the inmost sense His kingdom, in which the Lord is all; and this being the case, there is in the Word essential life, which flows into the minds of those who read it under a holy influence; hence it is that the Lord declares Himself, as to the Word which is from Himself, to be a fountain of water springing up unto eternal life, see also n. 2702. That the Word of the Lord is also called a well, as it is called a fountain, appears from these words in Moses, "Israel sung a song; Rise up O well, answer ye to it; the well, the princes digged, the chiefs of the people digged out for a lawgiver with their staffs," Numb. xxi. 17, 18; these words were spoken at the place Beer, that is, at the place of the well; that by well in this passage is signified the Word of the ancient Church, spoken of above, n. 2897, appears evident from what is there said; princes are primary truths, see n. 1482, 2089; the chiefs of the people are inferior truths, such as are those contained in the literal sense, see n. 1259, 1260, 2928, 3295; that lawgiver is the Lord, is manifest: staffs denote the powers which they possessed.

3425. "The shepherds of Gerar disputed with the shepherds of Isaac"—that hereby is signified that they who taught did not see any such thing therein, because opposite things appear, is manifest from the signification of disputing, when the internal sense of the Word is treated of, as denoting to deny it to be such, by thus saying, that they do not see it; and from the signification of shepherds, as denoting those who teach, see n. 343; and from the signification of Gerar, as denoting faith, see n. 1209, 2504, 3365, 3384. Thus the shepherds of the valley of Gerar are those who acknowledge only the literal sense of the Word: the reason why they see no such thing in the Word, viz. no interior sense, is, because opposite things appear, viz. the things which are in the literal sense; nevertheless they are not opposite, although they appear opposite, inasmuch as they altogether correspond; the reason why they appear opposite, is, because they, who thus see the Word, are in an opposite principle. The case in this respect is like that of a man, who is in an opposite principle in himself, that is, whose external or natural man is altogether at disagreement with his internal or spiritual man. Such a person sees the things which are of the internal or spiritual man as it were opposite to himself, when yet he himself, as to the external or natural man, is in the opposite, and if he was not in the opposite, but his external or natural man yielded obedience to the internal or spiritual man, they would entirely correspond. As for example, he who is in an opposite principle, believes that riches are to be absolutely renounced, and all pleasures of the body and of the world, consequently the delights of life, in order to his receiving eternal life, such delights being supposed opposite to spiritual life; whereas they are not opposite in themselves, but correspond: for they are means conducive to an end, which end is, that the internal or spiritual man may enjoy them for the exercises of charity, and moreover may live content in a healthful body.

The ends regarded are what alone cause either contrariety between the internal and external man, or correspondence. Contrariety has place, when the riches, pleasures, and delights here spoken of become ends, for in this case, spiritual and celestial things, which appertain to the internal man, are despised and ridiculed, yea, are rejected; whereas correspondence has place, when those things are not made ends, but become means conducive to superior ends, viz. to such things as regard a life after death, consequently which regard the kingdom of heaven and the Lord Himself. In this case, corporeal and worldly things appear to man as scarce anything respectively; and when he thinks of such things, he values them only as means conducive to ends. Hence it is manifest, that those things which appear opposite, are not opposite in themselves; and that the reason of their appearing so is, because they who judge of them are in an opposite principle. They who are not in an opposite principle, act, and speak, and acquire riches, and also enjoy pleasures, in like manner as they who are in an opposite principle, insomuch that they can scarce be distinguished by their external appearance; the reason is, because what alone distinguishes them is the end regarded, or, what is the same thing, the ruling love, for the ruling love is the end regarded. But although they appear similar in their external form, or as to the body, yet they are altogether dissimilar, in their internal form, or as to the spirit; where there is correspondence, that is, where the external man corresponds to the internal, the spirit of the man is fair and beautiful, such as heavenly love is in its form; but where there is opposition, that is, where the external man is opposite to the internal, howsoever there may be a resemblance of the other as to what is external, yet the spirit in this case is dark and deformed, such as is self-love and the love of the world, that is, such as is contempt and hatred of others in its form. The case is similar in respect to very many passages in the Word, viz. that the things of the literal sense appear opposite to what is contained in the internal sense, when yet they are by no means opposite, but correspond entirely; as for example, it is frequently said in the Word, that Jehovah or the Lord is angry, is wroth, causes vastation, and casts into hell, when yet He is never angry, and still less does He cast any one into hell; the former is according to the sense of the letter, but the latter is according to the internal sense; these appear opposite, but the reason is, because man is in an opposite principle. The case in this respect is like that of the Lord's appearing as a sun to the angels in heaven, and thereby as a kind of vernal warmth, and a light as at day-dawn, whereas to the infernals he appears altogether as somewhat opaque, and thereby as winter-like cold, and as midnight darkness; consequently to the angels He appears in love and charity, but to the infernals in hatred and enmity; thus to the latter according to the sense of the letter, as being angry, being wroth, being the cause of vastation and casting into hell; but to the former according to the internal sense, as in nowise being angry and wroth, and still less as causing vastation and casting into hell. Since therefore in the Word those things are treated of which are contrary to the Divine [principle] they cannot otherwise be exhibited than according to appearance; it is also the Divine [principle] which the wicked change into what is diabolical, and which thus operates; wherefore also in proportion as they approach to the Divine [principle], in the same proportion they cast themselves into infernal torments. The case is the same with the Lord's words in the prayer, "Lead us not into temptation;" it is according to the sense of the letter that He leads into temptation, but the internal sense is, that He leads no one into temptation, as is well known, see n. 1875; the same is true in respect to other things as expressed in the literal sense of the Word.

3426. "Saying we have waters"—that hereby is signified that they are in the truth, or that they have truths, appears from the signification of waters, as denoting knowledges, and also truths, see n. 28, 680, 739, 2702, 3058.

3427. "And he called the name of the well Esek, because they contended with him"—that hereby is signified denial on account of those things, also on account of other things, as being contrary to them, and on account of several things besides, appears from this consideration, that the names, which were given of old, were significative of the thing or state, see n. 3422; hence they were enabled to recollect several particulars concerning such thing or state, especially respecting the quality thereof; in the present case, a name was given to the well from the circumstances of the shepherds of Gerar disputing with the shepherds of Isaac: that to dispute or contend signifies also to deny, may be seen n. 3425. Hence the name Esek, which in the original tongue signifies contention or dispute, and is derived from an expression nearly related thereto, which signifies oppression and injury; and whereas by well in this passage is signified the Word as to the literal sense, in which is the internal sense, therefore by Esek, or contention, is signified a denial of the internal sense of the Word; the causes of denial are also contained in the same expression, which causes, it is evident, are grounded in what was said above, n. 3425, viz. that the literal and spiritual senses of the Word appear opposite to each other. With respect to the internal sense of the Word, the case is this; they who are principled merely in the science of knowledges, and are called Philistines, and they who are principled merely in the doctrinals of faith, and are called the valley of Gerar, being not principled in any charity towards their neighbour, cannot possibly do otherwise than deny the internal sense of the Word, inasmuch as the Word in it's internal sense, treats of nothing else but love to the Lord, and love towards our neighbour; wherefore the Lord says, that on these two commandments hang the law and the prophets, that is, the whole Word, Matt. xxii. 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40: how far such persons deny the internal sense of the Word, was also given me to see from the state of such in another life, for when it is only mentioned in their presence, that there is an internal sense of the Word, which does not appear in the literal sense, and that it treats of love to the Lord and charity towards our neighbour, there is instantly perceivable not only a denial on the part of such spirits, but also an aversion, yea, a loathing thereby excited: this is the primary cause of denial; another cause is, that they altogether invert the Word, setting that above which is beneath, or, what is the same thing, setting that before (or in front) which is behind (or in the rear); for they establish it as a principle that faith is the essential of the Church, and that the things appertaining to love to the Lord and charity towards our neighbour, are the fruits of faith; when yet the real case is this, if love to the Lord be compared to the tree of life in the paradise of Eden, charity and it's works are the fruits thence derived, whereas faith and all things appertaining thereto are merely leaves; since therefore they so invert the Word, as to deduce the origin of fruits not from the tree but from the leaves, it is not to be wondered at that they deny the internal sense of the Word, and acknowledge only it's literal sense, for from the literal sense any doctrinal tenet, even the most heretical, may be confirmed, as is well known. Moreover, they who are merely in doctrinals of faith, but not in the good of life, must needs be in persuasive faith, that is, in preconceived principles, false as well as true, consequently they must be more stupid than others, for so far as any one is in persuasive faith, so far he is stupid; but so far as any one is in the good of life, that is, in love to the Lord and charity towards his neighbour, so far he is in intelligence, that is, in faith from the Lord; hence also it is, that the former must needs be in the negative respecting the internal sense of the Word, but the latter must needs be in the affirmative; with those also, who are principled merely in doctrinals, and not in the good of life, the interiors are closed, so that light from the Lord cannot flow in, and give them to perceive that it is so; whereas, with those who are principled in love to the Lord, the interiors are open, so that the light of truth from the Lord can flow in, affect their minds, and give a perception that it is so. A further cause is, that they have no other delight in reading the Word, than what arises from the acquirement of honours, and riches, and reputation thereby, which delight is the delight of self-love and the love of the world, and this to such a degree, that in case such acquisitions were not to be derived from the Word, they would entirely reject it; they who are of such a character, not only deny in their heart the internal sense of the Word, when they hear of it, but also the very literal sense, howsoever they may imagine that they believe it; for whosoever regards as an end the delight of self-love and the love of the world, entirely ejects from his heart every thing appertaining to eternal life, and only with his natural and corporeal man makes a shew of such things as he calls truths, not for the sake of the Lord and His kingdom, but for the sake of himself and those with whom he is connected. These and several other things operate as causes, why they, who are called shepherds of the valley of Gerar, and Philistines, deny the internal sense of the Word.

3428. "And they digged another well, and disputed also over it"—that hereby is signified the internal sense of the Word, whether there be such a sense, may appear from the signification of another well, and of disputing, concerning which see above, thus from the series of the things treated of; for they who deny anything, as they who deny the internal sense of the Word, when they again dispute or contend, must needs dispute or contend about the existence of such a thing. It is well known that several disputes at this day go no further than this; but so long as men remain in debate, whether a thing exist, and whether it be so, it is impossible to make any advance into anything of wisdom; for in the very thing which is the subject of debate, there are innumerable particulars which cannot be seen so long as the thing itself is not acknowledged, inasmuch as all and singular the things appertaining thereto, are in such case unknown; modern erudition scarce advances beyond these limits of debate, viz. whether a thing exist, and whether it be so, and of consequence there is an exclusion from the intelligence of truth; as for example, he who merely contends, whether there exists an internal sense of the Word, cannot possibly see the innumerable, yea, indefinite things, which are contained in the internal sense; as again, he who disputes whether charity be anything in the Church, and whether or no the things of faith be not the all thereof, cannot possibly know the innumerable, yea, indefinite things, which are contained in charity, but remains altogether in ignorance of what charity is; the case is the same in regard to a life after death, the resurrection of the dead, the last judgment, the existence of heaven and hell; they who only dispute whether such things exist, stand out of the doors of wisdom so long as they dispute, and are like persons who only knock at the door, and cannot even look into wisdom's magnificent palaces; and what is surprising, people of this description fancy themselves wise in comparison with others, and so much the wiser in proportion to their greater skill in debating whether a thing be so, and especially in confirming themselves that it is not so; when yet the simple, who are principled in good, and whom such disputants despise, can perceive in a moment, without any dispute, much more without learned controversy, both the existence of the thing, and also it's nature and quality; these latter have a common or general sense of the perception of truth, whereas the former have extinguished this sense by such things as incline them first to determine whether the thing exists; the Lord speaks both of the former, and of the latter, when He says, "I thank thee Father, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and intelligent, and revealed them unto babes." Matt. xi. 25; Luke x. 21.

3429. "And he called the name thereof Sitnah"—that hereby is signified their quality, appears from the signification of calling a name, as denoting quality, see n. 144, 145, 1754, 1896, 2009, 2724, 3006, 3421; and from the signification of Sitnah, as denoting, in the original tongue, aversion, which is a further degree of denial, 3430. Verses 22, 23. And he removed thence and digged another well, and they did not dispute over it, and he called the name thereof Rehoboth, and said, because now Jehovah has made us to be dilated, and we shall be fruitful in the earth. And he went up thence to Beersheba. He removed thence, signifies to the things inferior still: and digged another well, and they did not dispute over it, signifies the literal sense of the Word: and he called the name thereof Rehoboth, signifies quality thence derived, as to truth: and said, because now Jehovah has made us to be dilated, signifies increments (increasings) of truth thence: and we shall be fruitful in the earth, signifies increments of good thence: and he went up thence to Beersheba, signifies that hence the doctrine of faith was Divine.

3431. "And he removed thence"—that hereby is signified to things inferior still, appears from the signification of removing (or transferring), as denoting to other things which follow in the series, therefore in the present case to inferior or exterior truths, because the subject hitherto in order treated of has been concerning superior or interior truths; inferior or exterior truths are those which are extant in the literal sense of the Word, adequate to the apprehension of the natural man; and these truths now come to be treated of.

3432. "And digged another well, and they did not dispute over it"—that hereby is signified the literal sense of the Word, appears from the signification of well, as denoting the Word, see n. 3702, 3096, 3424; in the present case the Word as to the literal sense, for it is said, that he removed thence, and digged another well, and that they did not dispute over it, by which is signified that sense of the Word which is exterior, and which they do not deny, and it is this which is called the literal sense. The literal sense of the Word is threefold, viz. historical, pro-

phetical, and doctrinal; each whereof is such that it may be apprehended even by those who are in externals. With respect to the Word, the case is this; in the most ancient time, when the Church was celestial, the written Word was not, for the men of that Church had the Word inscribed on their hearts, inasmuch as the Lord taught them immediately through heaven what was good, and thereby what was true, and gave them to perceive each from a principle of love and charity, and to know from revelation. The very essential Word to them was the Lord. After this Church another succeeded, which was not celestial but spiritual, and this in the beginning had no other Word than what was collected from the most ancient people, which Word was representative of the Lord, and significative of His kingdom; thus the internal sense was to this people the essential Word. That they had also a written Word, as well historical as prophetic, which is no longer extant, and that in this Word there was in like manner an internal sense, which had relation to the Lord, may be seen, n. 2686; hence it was the wisdom of that time both to speak and write by representatives and significatives, within the Church concerning things Divine, and out of the Church concerning other things, as is evident from the writings of those ancient people which are come down to us: but in process of time this wisdom perished, insomuch that at length it was not known that there existed any internal sense even in the books of the Word. The Jewish and Israelitish nation was of this character, so that they accounted the prophetic Word holy merely by reason of it's resemblance to the ancient Word in sound, and because they heard the name of Jehovah in the sense of the letter, not believing that any thing Divine lay deeper hid within; nor does the Christian world think more holily concerning the Word. Hence it may appear how in process of time wisdom retired from inmost things to outermost, and man removed himself from heaven, and at length descended even to the dust of the earth, wherein wisdom is now made to consist. Forasmuch as this was the case with the Word, viz. that it's internal sense was successively obliterated, and this to such a degree, that at this day it is not known that such a sense exists, when yet this sense is the very essential Word in which the Divine [principle] proximately dwells, therefore the successive states thereof are described in this chapter.

3435. "And we shall be fruitful in the earth"—that hereby are signified increments of good thence derived, appears from the signification of being fruitful, as denoting increments of good; that to be fruitful is predicated of good, and to be multiplied is predicated of truth, see n. 43, 55, 913, 983, 2846, 2847; and from the signification of earth, as denoting the Church, and whatever is of the Church, concerning which see n. 662, 1066, 1067, 1262, 1733, 1850, 2928, 3325.

3436. "And he went up thence to Beersheba"—that hereby is signified that thence the doctrine of faith was Divine, appears from the signification of Beersheba, as denoting the doctrine of faith Divine, see n. 2723, 2858, 2859: the doctrine of faith which is here signified by Beersheba, is the very literal sense of the Word, for the Word is essential doctrine; and although the Word as to the literal sense is such, that truths may thence be derived, it is also such, that things not true may thereby be confirmed, as is well known from the case of heresies: but whosoever reads the Word to the end that he may grow wise, that is, may do what is good and understand what is true, he is instructed according to such end and according to the affection thereof, for the Lord flows in whilst he knows not, and illuminates his mind, and wherein he hesitates, gives understanding from other passages; moreover, whosoever is in simple good, and in simplicity believes the Word according to its literal sense, he is gifted with the faculty of perceiving truths, when he is instructed in another life by the angels; and in the mean time, the few truths which appertain to him are vivified by charity and innocence, and when charity and innocence are in truths, then the false principles, which also infused themselves in the shade of his ignorance, are not hurtful, not being adjoined to good, but being withheld therefrom as it were in the circumferences, whereby they can easily be cast out: but the case is otherwise with those, who are not principled in the good of life, for with such, the false principles which by mis-interpretation they have forged from the Word, possess the middle, or as it were centre, whilst truths possess the circuits or circumferences, wherefore false principles are what are adjoined to the evil of their life, and truths are dissipated.

3437. Verses 24, 25. And Jehovah appeared to him in that night, and said, I am the God of Abraham thy father, fear not because I am with thee, and I will bless thee, and will make thy seed to be multiplied for the sake of Abraham My servant. And he builded there an altar, and called on the name of Jehovah, and stretched out his tent there; and the servants of Isaac digged a well there. Jehovah appeared to him in that night, and said, signifies the Lord's perception concerning that obscure principle (or state); I am the God of Abraham thy father, fear not because I am with thee, signifies that the Divine [principle] was also there: and I will bless thee and will make thy seed to be multiplied, signifies that hence would be increase of good and of truth: for the sake of Abraham My servant, signifies from the Lord's Divine Human [principle]: and he builded there an altar, signifies a significative and representative of the Lord: and called on the name of Jehovah, signifies worship thence: and stretched out his tent there, signifies an holy principle therein: and the servants of Isaac digged a well there, signifies doctrine thence derived.

3438. "Jehovah appeared to him in that night, and said"—that hereby is signified the Lord's perception concerning that obscure [principle or state], appears from the signification of Jehovah's appearing and saying, when it is predicated of the Lord, as denoting to perceive from the Divine [principle]; that by Jehovah appearing to him is signified from the Divine [principle], may be seen, n. 3367, and that to say is to perceive, see n. 2862, 3395; for Jehovah was in Him, consequently so long as the human [principle] was not yet glorified, the appearing of Jehovah was perception Divine, or perception from the Divine [principle], wherefore by Jehovah appearing to him and saying, nothing else is signified; and from the signification of night, as denoting a state of shade or an obscure [principle or state], concerning which see n. 1712; by this obscure [principle or state] is signified the literal sense of the Word, this sense, in respect to the internal sense, being like shade in respect to light. In order to shew still more clearly how the case is in regard to the literal sense of the Word, we shall add a few words more on the subject; the internal sense is to the literal sense, as man's interior or celestial and spiritual principles are to his exterior or natural and corporeal principles; his interior principles are in the light of heaven, whereas his exterior principles are in the light of the world; what is the nature of the difference between the light of heaven and the light of the world, consequently between those things which appertain to the light of heaven, and those things which appertain to the light of the world, may be seen, n. 1521 to 1533, 1619 to 1632, 1783, 1880, 2776, 3138, 3167, 3190, 3195, 3222, 3223, 3225, 3337, 3339, 3341, 3413, viz. that it is like the difference between the light of day and the shade of night; and whereas man is in this shade, and is not willing to know that in truth from the Lord there is light, he cannot believe otherwise than that his shade is light, yea, also on the other hand that light is shade; for he is in this respect like a bird of night, which, whilst it flies in the shade of night, thinks that it is in the light, but whilst in the light of day, it thinks itself to be in the shade; for the internal eye, that is, the understanding, by which man sees interiorly, with such a person is no otherwise formed, for he has formed it no otherwise, inasmuch as he opens it when he looks downwards, that is, to worldly and corporeal things, and shuts it when he should look upwards, that is, to spiritual and celestial things; the case is the same in respect to the Word with persons of this character; what appears in it's literal sense, this they believe to be light, but what appears in the internal sense, this they believe to be shade; for the Word appears to every one according to his quality; when nevertheless the internal sense of the Word, in respect to it's literal sense, is as the light of heaven in respect to the light of the world, see n. 3016, 3108, that is, as the light of day in respect to the light of night. In the internal sense there are singular things, whereof myriads constitute together one particular which is exhibited in the literal sense; or, what is the same thing, in the internal sense there are particular things, whereof myriads constitute together one common or general thing which is in the literal sense, and it is this common or general thing which appears to man, but not the particular things which are in it and which constitute it; still however the order of the particular things in the common or general thing appears to man, but according to his quality, and this order is the holy principle which affects him.

3439. "I am the God of Abraham thy father, fear not, because I am with thee"—that hereby is signified that the Divine [principle] also was therein, viz. in the literal sense of the Word, appears from the representation of Abraham, as denoting the Lord's Divine [principle], see n. 2833, 2836, 3251, 3305; hence Jehovah God of Abraham signifies the Lord's Divine [principle] which Abraham represents, and whereas the subject treated of is concerning the Word, which also is the Lord, because all the Word is from Him, and the all of the Word relates to Him, therefore by these words, "I am the God of Abraham, fear not, because I am with thee," is signified that the Divine [principle] is therein. With respect to the Divine [principle] in the Word, the case is this; the essential Divine [principle] is in the supreme sense of the Word, because therein is the Lord; the Divine [principle] is also in the internal sense because therein is the Lord's kingdom in the heavens, hence this sense is called celestial and spiritual; the Divine [principle] is also in the literal sense of the Word, because therein is the Lord's kingdom in the earths, hence this sense is called the external and likewise the natural sense, for in it are crass appearances more remote from the Divine [principle]; nevertheless all and singular things therein are Divine. The case is, with respect to these three senses, as it was with the tabernacle; it's inmost, or what was within the vail, where the ark was containing the testimony, was most holy, or the holy of holies; but it's internal, or what was immediately without the vail, where was the golden table and candlestick, was holy; the external also where the court was, was also holy, the congregation assembled thereat, and hence it was called the tent of the congregation.

3440. "And I will bless thee, and will make thy seed to be multiplied"—that hereby is signified that thence would be an increase of good and of truth, appears from the signification of blessing thee, as denoting an increase of good, see n. 3406; and from the signification of thy seed being multiplied, as denoting an increase of truth, see n. 43, 55, 913, 983, 2846, 2847; that seed denotes truth, of which multiplication is predicated, see n. 1025, 1447, 1610, 2848, 3038, 3373, 3380. The reason why there is an increase of good and truth with man derived from the literal sense of the Word is, because in that sense likewise all and singular things are Divine, as was just now shewn above, n. 3439; and because in the literal sense the internal sense is open in many passages; as where it is said in the Old Testament by the prophets, that the Lord would come to be salvation to the human race; that all the law and the prophets teach only to love God and our neighbour; that to commit murder is to bear hatred, for he who hates another commits murder every instant, inasmuch as murder is in his will-principle and in the delight of his life: these are the truths of the internal sense in the literal sense; not to mention several others of a like nature.

Divine, in order that man may have access thereto, and because it is serviceable to mankind for their salvation. This then is what is signified by Abraham My servant; as also in David, "Make mention of the wonderful things which He hath done, His wonders and the judgments of His mouth, ye seed of Abraham His servant, ye sons of Jacob His elect: He sent Moses His servant, Aaron whom He hath chosen: He remembered the Word of His holiness with Abraham His servant," Psalm cv. 5, 6, 26, 42; where by Abraham His servant is meant the Lord as to the Divine Human [principle]: in like manner also the Lord as to the Divine Human [principle] is meant by Israel His servant, by Jacob His servant, and by David His servant; by Israel his servant, in this passage, "Thou Israel My servant, Jacob whom I have chosen, the seed of Abraham my friend; whom I have laid hold of from the ends of the earth, and from the wings thereof have I called thee, and have said unto thee, thou art My servant, I have chosen thee," xli. 8, 9; where Israel My servant in a supreme sense denotes the Lord in respect to the internals of the spiritual Church, and Jacob denotes Him as to the externals of that Church. Again, "He said to me, thou Israel art My servant in whom I will be rendered glorious: it is a light thing that thou be a servant to Me to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to bring back the preserved of Israel, and I have given thee for a light of the Gentiles, that thou mayst be My salvation to the extremity of the earth," xlix. 3, 6; where Israel, in whom I will be rendered glorious, manifestly denotes the Lord's Divine Human [principle]; that he is called servant from being serviceable, is evident, for it is said, that thou may be a servant to Me to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to bring back the preserved of Israel. That the Lord as to His Divine Human [principle] is meant also by Jacob a servant, appears from Isaiah in this passage, "I will give thee the treasures of darkness, and the hidden riches of secret places, for the sake of Jacob My servant, and Israel Mine elect," xlv. 3, 4; where by My servant Jacob, and Israel Mine elect is meant the Lord, My servant Jacob having respect to the externals of the Church, and Israel Mine elect to the internal. The same is also signified by David My servant, as in Ezechiel, "I will gather together the sons of Israel from the places around, My servant David shall be king over them, and they shall all have one shepherd; they shall dwell upon the land which I have given to My servant Jacob; and they shall dwell upon it, they and their sons and their sons sons even to eternity; and David My servant shall be a prince to them to eternity," xxxvii. 24, 25; where David My servant manifestly denotes the Lord's Divine Human [principle], see n. 1888, and this by virtue of Divine Truth, which is signified by king, who in the present case is David, see n. 1728, 2015, 3009; that truth itself also is respectively a servant, may be seen, n. 3409 ; and it is on this account that the Lord Himself calls Himself one that serves or ministers, as in Mark, "Whosoever will be great among you, shall be your minister ; and whosoever will be chief amongst you shall be the servant of all ; even as the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister," x. 44, 45 ; Matt. xx. 26, 27, 28. And in Luke, "Who is greater, he that sitteth at meat, or he that ministereth ? Is not he that sitteth at meat ? But I am in the midst of you as he that ministereth," xxii. 27.

3442. "And he builded there an altar"—that hereby is signified a significative and a representative of the Lord, appears from the signification of altar, as being a principle representative of the Lord, see n. 921, 2777, 2811.

3443. "And called on the name of Jehovah"—that hereby is signified worship thence derived, appears from the signification of calling on the name of Jehovah, as denoting worship, see n. 440, 2724 ; and that the name of Jehovah is all in one complex whereby the Lord is worshiped, see n. 2628, 2724, 3006.

3444. "And stretched out his tent there"—that hereby is signified an holy principle therein, appears from the signification of tent, as denoting the holy principle of worship, see n. 414, 1102, 2145, 2152, 3312.

3445. "And there the servants of Isaac digged a well"—that hereby is signified doctrine thence derived, appears from the signification of well, as denoting the Word, see n. 2702, 3424 ; and whereas the Word is essential doctrine, and thus all doctrine which appertains to the Church is derived from the Word, hence to dig a well signifies doctrine thence derived, viz. from the literal sense of the Word, because this sense is here treated of : howbeit the essential doctrine derived from the literal sense of the Word is one only, viz. the doctrine of charity and of love, of charity towards our neighbour, and of love to the Lord, for this doctrine and a life according to it is the whole Word, as the Lord teaches in Matthew, chap. xxii. 35, 36, 37, 38.

3446. Verses 26, 27. And Abimelech went to him out of Gerar, and Ahusath his companion, and Phicol the chief captain of his army. And Isaac said to them, wherefore are ye come to me, and ye have hated me, and have sent me away from you. And Abimelech went to him out of Gerar, signifies the doctrine of faith having respect to things rational : and Ahusath his companion, and Phicol the chief captain of his army, signifies the primary principles of the doctrine of their faith : and Isaac said unto them, wherefore are ye come to me, and ye have hated me, and have sent me away from you, signifies why should they de- sire the Divine [principle] when they denied it, and were averse to what is contained in the internal sense of the Word.

3447. "Abimelech went to him out of Gerar"—that hereby is signified the doctrine of faith having respect to things rational, appears from the representation of Abimelech, as denoting the doctrine of faith having respect to things rational, see n. 2504, 2509, 2510, 3391, 3393, 3397; and from the signification of Gerar, as denoting faith, see n. 1209, 2504, 3365, 3384; 3385; what is meant by doctrine having respect to things rational, may be seen n. 3368. The subject treated of here, and even to verse 33, is concerning those who are principled in the literal sense of the Word, and thence in the doctrinals of faith, and concerning the agreement of their doctrinals with the internal sense, so far as they are grounded in the literal sense; Abimelech, and Ahusath his companion, and Phicol the chief captain of his army, represent these doctrinals; they are such as make faith essential, not indeed rejecting charity, but postponing it, and thus giving doctrine the preference to life; our Churches at this day are almost all of this character, except that which is in Christian gentilism, where it is permitted to adore saints and their idols. As in every Church of the Lord there are those who are internal men, and those who are external, and the internal are those who are in the affection of good, and the external those who are in the affection of truth; so also it is with those who are here represented by Abimelech, his companion, and the chief captain of his army. The internal are those who are treated of above, chap. xxi. verse 22 to 33, where it is said of Abimelech, and Phicol the chief captain of his army, that they came to Abraham and made a covenant with him in Beersheba, concerning whom see n. 2719, 2720; but the external are those who are here treated of.

3448. "And Ahusath his companion, and Phicol the chief captain of his army"—that hereby are signified the primary principles of the doctrine of their faith, appears from the representation of Abimelech, as denoting the doctrine of faith having respect to things rational; hence his companion, and the chief captain of his army, denote those primary principles, and indeed the primary principles appertaining to doctrine; for a chief captain, like a prince, signifies primary principles, see n. 1482, 2089, and army signifies doctrinals themselves; the ground and reason why army signifies doctrinals, which appertain to truth, or which are inferior truths, is, because by warfare in the Word, and by war, are signified the things appertaining to spiritual warfare and war, see n. 1664, 1788, 2686, as also by arms, viz. by spears, shields, bows, arrows, swords, and the like, according to what has been abundantly shewn above; and whereas truths, or doctrinals, are the instruments whereby spiritual combats are waged, therefore by armies are signified such truths, or doctrinals, and also false or heretical principles in the opposite sense. That both the latter and the former are signified in the Word by armies, may appear from several passages; as in Daniel. "One horn of the he-goat grew exceedingly towards the south, and towards the east, and towards honourableness, and grew even to the army of the heavens, and cast down of the army and of the stars to the earth; and trampled them under foot: yea, he lifted up himself even to the prince of the army. His army was delivered up continually to transgression, and he cast truth to the earth. I heard one holy one speaking, and he said, "How long will be this vision, and continually wasting transgression, to give both the holy one and the army to be trodden under foot," viii. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13; where the horn which grew towards the south, towards the east, and towards honourableness, is the power of what is false grounded in evil, see n. 2832; the armies of the heavens are truths; the prince of the army is the Lord as to Divine Truth; and whereas army in a good sense is truth, it is said that he cast down of the army to the earth, and afterwards that he cast truth to the earth. Again, in the same prophet, "The king of the north shall set forth a greater multitude than the former, and at the end of the times of years, he shall come in coming with a great army, and with much wealth: afterwards he shall stir up his strength and his heart against the king of the south, with a great army; and the king of the south shall mix himself in war with an army exceedingly great and strong, but shall not stand; for they that eat his meat shall break him, and his army shall overflow, and many shall fall down slain," xi. 13, 25, 26; the subject treated of in this chapter throughout is concerning war between the king of the north and the king of the south, and by the king of the north are meant false principles, as also by his army, and by the king of the south and his army are meant truths; it is prophetic of the Church's vastation. So in the Apocalypse, "I saw heaven open, when lo! a white horse, and he who sat on him was called faithful and true, clothed in a vesture tinged with blood, and his army in heaven followed Him on white horses, clad in fine linen, white and clean. I saw the beast and the kings of the earth, and their armies gathered together to make war with Him who sat on the horse, and with His army," xix. 11, 14, 19; he who sat on the white horse denotes the Word of the Lord, or the Lord as to the Word, see n. 2760, 2761, 2762; His armies, which followed Him in heaven, denote truths thence derived, consequently those in heaven who are principled in truths; the beast denotes the evils of self-love; the kings of the earth and their armies denote falses; the combats of the false principle with truth are what are here described. So in David, "By the Word of Jehovah were the heavens made, and the armies of them by the breath of his mouth," Psalm xxxiii. 6; the armies of them, or of the heavens, denote truths, and whereas by armies are signified truths, therefore the sons of the kingdom and angels, by virtue of the truths in which they are principled, are called the armies of the heavens, as in Luke, "Suddenly there was present with the angel a multitude of the heavenly army praising God," ii. 13. So in David, "Bless ye, Jehovah, all His armies, ye ministers of His, that do His will," Psalm ciii. 21: and again, "Praise Jehovah, all ye His angels, praise Him all ye His armies," cxlvi. 2. So in Isaiah, "Lift up your eyes on high, and see ye who hath created these things, He that bringeth out in number their army, calleth all by name, of the multitude of the powerful and of the mighty a man shall not fail," xl. 26: and again, "I have made the earth, and have created man upon it; I, Mine hands have stretched out the heavens, and I have commanded all their army," xlv. 12; where the army of the heavens denotes truths, consequently denotes the angels, because they are principled in truths, as has been already said. So in the first Book of Kings, "I saw Jehovah sitting on His throne, and the universal army of the heavens standing beside Him, on His right hand and on His left," xxii. 19: and in Joel, "Jehovah gave His voice before His army, because His camp was exceedingly great, because he is numerous that doeth His Word," ii. 11. And in Zechariah, "I will pitch a camp for My house of the army, passing and returning, lest the exactor should pass any more over them. Exult exceedingly O daughter of Zion; shout O daughter of Jerusalem: behold thy king cometh to thee," ix. 8, 9, speaking of the Lord's coming; His army denotes Truths Divine, and it is on this account, and also because the Lord alone fights for man against the hells which are continually attempting to assault him, that the Lord in the Word is so often called Jehovah Sabaoth, God Sabaoth, the Lord Sabaoth, that is, of armies; as in Isaiah, "The voice of a tumult of kingdoms of nations gathered together, Jehovah Sabaoth leads an army of war," xiii. 4; where kingdoms of nations denote false principles grounded in evils; to lead an army of war denotes to fight for man. Inasmuch as the twelve tribes of Israel represented the Lord's heavenly kingdom, and tribes and likewise twelve signified all the things of faith in one complex, that is, all truths of the kingdom, see n. 577, 2089, 2129, 2130, 3272, therefore also they were called the armies of Jehovah, as in Exod. vii. 4; chap. xii. 17, 41, 51; and it was commanded that they should be brought out of Egypt according to armies, Exod. vi. 26; and should mete out the camp according to armies, Numb. i. 22; and should be distributed into armies, Numb. ii. 1, to the end. That by armies are signified truths, appears also from Ezechiel, "Persia, and Lud, and Puth were in thine army, the men of thy war, they hung in thee the shield and the helmet, they set forth the honour of thee; the sons of Arwad, and thine army upon thy walls round about, and the Gamadims were in thy towers," xxvii. 10, 11; speaking of Tyre, by which are signified interior knowledges of good and truth, consequently those who are principled therein, see n. 1201; army denotes the truths themselves: that Lud and Puth are also those who are principled in knowledges, may be seen n. 1163, 1164, 1166, 1195, 1231; shield and helmet are such things as appertain to combat or spiritual war. That army in an opposite sense denotes false principles, is evident from the following passages, "It shall be in that day, Jehovah shall visit upon the army of height in height, and upon the kings of the earth upon the earth," Isaiah xxiv. 21; where army of height denotes false principles grounded in self-love. So in Ezechiel, "I will bring thee back, and will put hooks in thy jaws, and will lead thee forth, and all thine army, horses and horsemen, all of them clothed perfectly, a company great with shield and buckler, all of them handling swords; thou shalt come out of thy place, out of the sides of the north, thou and many people with thee, all riding on horses, a great company, a great army," xxxviii. 4, 15; speaking of Gog, by whom is signified external worship separate from internal, thus rendered idolatrous, see n. 1151; the army therefore denotes false principles. So in Jeremiah, "I will send against Babel who draweth, drawing his bow, and lifting up himself in his armour; spare not the youths, give to the curse all his army," li. 2, 3; where Babel denotes worship, the externals whereof appear holy, whilst the interiors are profane, see n. 1182, 1283, 1295, 1304, 1306, 1307, 1308, 1321, 1322, 1326; his army denotes the false principles of such profane interiors, as is also signified by the army of Babel in other passages, as Jer. xxxii. 2; xxxiv. 1, 2; chap. xxxix. 1. So in Ezechiel, "Pharaoh shall see them, and shall be comforted upon all his multitude, the slain with the sword, Pharaoh and all his army, because I will give the terror of Me in the land of the living," xxxii. 31, 32; speaking of Egypt, by which are signified those who pervert truths by reasonings grounded in scientifics, see n. 1164, 1165; his army, or the army of Pharaoh, denotes the false principles thence derived; the same is also signified by the army of Pharaoh in other passages, as Jer. xxxvii. 5, 7; 11; chap. xlvi. 2; Ezech. xvii. 17. So in Luke, "When ye shall see Jerusalem encompassed with armies, then know ye that devastation is near at hand," xxi. 20; speaking of the consummation of the age, or of the last time of the Church when there is no longer any faith; that by Jerusalem is signified the Church, see n. 2117, which is encompassed with armies when it is beset by false principles. Hence it is manifest that by the armies of the heavens which the Jews and idolators adored, in the internal sense were signified false principles, concerning which it is thus written in the second Book of the Kings, "They forsook all the commandments of their God, and made to themselves a molten (image), two calves, and they made a grove, and bowed themselves down to all the army of the heavens," xvii. 16; speaking of the Israelites; and in another place, speaking of Manasseh, it is written, "That he built altars to all the army of the heavens," xxi. 5; and that Josias the king brought forth out of the temple all the vessels made for Baal, and for the grove, and for all the army of the heavens, xxiii. 4; and in Jeremiah, "That they should spread the bones of the princes, of the priests, and of the prophets, to the sun, to the moon, and to all the army of the heavens, which they had loved, and which they had served, and after which they had gone," viii. 1, 2; and in another place, "The houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the king of Judah shall be as Tophet, unclean as to all the houses, on the roofs whereof they have burned incense to all the army of the heavens, and have offered libations to other gods," xix. 13: and in Zephaniah, "I will stretch out mine hand against those who worship the army of the heavens on the house tops," i. 5; for the stars are what are principally called the army of the heavens, but that by stars are signified truths, and in an opposite sense falses, may be seen, n. 1128, 1808.

3449. "And Isaac said unto them, wherefore are ye come unto me, and ye have hated me, and have sent me away from you"—that hereby is signified why should they desire the Divine [principle] when they denied it, and were averse to what is contained in the internal sense of the Word, may appear from what was said above, verses 15, 16, 19, 20, 21.

3450. Verses 28, 29. And they said, seeing we have seen that Jehovah was with thee, and we said, let there be I pray a sacrament between us, between us and between thee, and let us make a covenant with thee. If thou dost evil with us, as we have not touched thee, and as we have done with thee nothing but good, and have sent thee in peace; thou art now the blessed of Jehovah. They said, seeing we have seen that Jehovah was with thee, signifies that they knew the Divine [principle] was therein; and they said, let there be I pray a sacrament between us, between us and between thee, and let us make a covenant with thee, signifies that the doctrinals of their faith considered in themselves should not be denied; if thou dost evil with us, as we have not touched thee, and as we have done with thee nothing but good, and have sent thee in peace, signifies that they had not violated the internal sense of the Word, and that they would not violate it; thou art now the blessed of Jehovah, signifies that it was from the Divine [principle].

3451. "They said, seeing we have seen that Jehovah was with thee"—that hereby is signified that they knew that the Divine [principle] was therein, appears from the signification of the expression seeing we have seen, as denoting to perceive and thus to know for certain ; and from the signification of Jehovah being with thee, as denoting that the Divine [principle] was therein. The subject here treated of, as was said above, n. 3447, is concerning the agreement of the literal sense of the Word with the internal sense, consequently concerning the agreement of the doctrinals of faith, which are signified by Abimelech, Ahusath, and Phicol, so far as they are derived from the literal sense of the Word, with the same, viz. with the internal sense ; thus concerning the conjunction of the Lord's kingdom in the earths with the Lord's kingdom in the heavens, consequently with the Lord, by the Word. For the Word, as to the supreme sense, is the Lord Himself, and as to the internal sense, it is the Lord's essential kingdom in the heavens, and as to the literal sense, it is the Lord's essential kingdom in the earths, as has been also observed above. But with respect to the Lord's kingdom in the earths, that is, with respect to His Church, the case is this, that whereas it derives it's doctrinals from the literal sense of the Word, it must needs be various and diverse as to those doctrinals, viz. one society will profess one thing to be a truth of faith, because it is so said in the Word, another society will profess another thing, for the same reason, and so forth. Consequently the Church of the Lord, inasmuch as it derives it's doctrinals from the literal sense of the Word, will differ in every different place, and this not only according to societies in general, but sometimes according to particular persons in each society. Nevertheless, a difference in doctrinals of faith is no reason why the Church should not be one, provided only there be unanimity as to willing what is good, and doing what is good. As for example ; if any one acknowledge for a doctrinal that charity is grounded in faith, and he lives in charity towards his neighbour, in this case he is not indeed in the truth as to doctrine, but still he is in the truth as to life, consequently there is in him the Lord's Church or kingdom. So again, if any one asserts that good works ought to be done with a view to recompence in heaven, according to the literal sense of the Word in Matthew, chap. x. 41, 42 ; chap. xxv. 34 to 46, and in other places, and yet in doing good works he never thinks of merit, he in like manner is in the Lord's kingdom, because as to life he is in the truth, and because being such as to life, he suffers himself easily to be instructed that no one can merit heaven, and that works, wherein merit is placed, are not good ; and so in other cases. For the literal sense of the Word is such, that in many passages it appears opposite to itself, but the reason is, because in that sense there are appearances of truth accommodated to those who are in external principles, consequently who are also immersed in worldly and corporeal loves. In the present case therefore by Abimelech they are treated of, who are principled in the doctrinals of faith, and that these are such as make faith the essential of salvation, was observed above. The agreement also of their doctrinals with the internal sense of the Word is treated of, and that conjunction is effected therewith, is manifest, but only with those who are principled in good, that is, with those who, notwithstanding they make faith essential as to doctrine, still make charity essential as to life; for when with such there is confidence or trust in the Lord, which they call real faith, then they are in the affection of love to the Lord, consequently as to life they are in good; but see what was said and shewn above on this subject viz. that charity, and not doctrinal tenets constitutes the Church, n. 809, 916, 1798, 1799, 1834, 1844. That doctrinals are of no account unless the life be according to them, n. 1515. That the Church is various as to truths, but is made one by charity, n. 3267. That there is a parallelism between the Lord and man as to the celestial things appertaining to good, but not as to the spiritual things appertaining to truth, n. 1831, 1832. That there is but one single doctrine, viz. that of love to the Lord and of charity towards our neighbour, n. 3445. That the Church would be one if all had charity, notwithstanding they differed as to worship and doctrinals, n. 809, 1285, 1316, 1798, 1799, 1834, 1844, 2982. That the Church would be as the Lord's kingdom in the heavens, if all had charity, n. 2385. That there are innumerable varieties of good and of truth in heaven, but that by harmony they still make one, like the organs and members of the body, n. 684, 690, 3241.

3452. "And we said, let there be I pray a sacrament between us, between us and between thee, and let us make a covenant with thee"—that hereby is signified that the doctrinals of their faith considered in themselves should not be denied, viz. so far as they are grounded in the literal sense of the Word, appears from the signification of a sacrament between us, as denoting consent of doctrinals with the literal sense of the Word; and from the signification of between us, and between thee, as denoting agreement with the internal sense; and from the signification of making a covenant, as denoting that thus there might be conjunction; that covenant is conjunction, may be seen, n. 665, 666, 1023, 1038, 1864, 2003, 2021. The sense hence resulting is, that the case being thus, the doctrinals of their faith considered in themselves should not be denied, for, as was observed, all doctrinals whatever, if so be they are derived from the Word, are accepted of the Lord, provided that the person, who is principled therein, be in the life of charity, for to the life of charity all things which are of the Word may be conjoined; but the interior things of the Word are conjoined to the life, which is in the interior good of charity. See what was said and adduced above on this subject, n. 3324.

3453. "If thou doest evil with us, as we have not touched thee, and as we have done with thee only good, and have sent thee in peace"—that hereby is signified that they had not violated the internal sense of the Word, and that they would not violate it, may appear from the series of things treated of in the internal sense, and from what was said above at verses 11, 22, 23.

3454. "Thou art now the blessed of Jehovah"—that hereby is signified that it was from the Divine [principle] appears from the signification of the blessed of Jehovah, when it is said of the Lord, or, what is the same thing, when it is said of the internal sense of the Word, for the Lord is the Word, as denoting Divine Truth, concerning which see n. 3140; thus that it was from the Divine [principle]; and thus that they had not violated, nor would violate, the internal sense, because it was from the Divine [principle]; but to violate the internal sense is to deny those things which are the principal constituents of that sense, and which are the very essential holy things of the Word, and these are, the Lord's Divine Human [principle], love to Him, and love towards our neighbour. These three are the principal constituents of the internal sense, and are the holy things of the Word; they are also the internal and holy things of all doctrinals which are derived from the Word, and likewise the internal and holy things of all worship, for in them is the Lord's essential kingdom. A fourth is, that the Word, as to all and singular things therein, yea, as to every smallest point or tittle, is Divine, consequently that the Lord is in the Word. This also is confessed and acknowledged by all who derive doctrinals from the Word; nevertheless they deny it in heart who acknowledge no other holy principle in the Word than what appears in the letter, for such can perceive nothing holy in the historical parts, nor in the prophetic, except only a slight external sanctity, in consequence of it's being called holy; when yet there must needs be in it an interior holy principle, if it be Divine, as to every point and tittle.

3455. Verses 30, 31. And he made them a feast, and they did eat and drink. And in the morning they arose early, and sware a man to his brother; and Isaac sent them away, and they went from being with him in peace. He made them a feast, signifies cohabitation: and they did eat and drink, signifies communication: and in the morning they arose early, signifies a state of illustration: and sware a man to his brother, signifies confirmation with those who are principled in the good of truth: and Isaac sent them away, and they went from being with him in peace, signifies that they were content.

3456. "He made them a feast"—that hereby is signified cohabitation, appears from the signification of a feast, as denoting cohabitation, see n. 2341.

3457. "And they did eat and drink"—that hereby is signified communication, appears from the signification of eating, as denoting to have communication as to what appertains to good, see n. 2187, 2343, 3168; and from the signification of drinking, as denoting to have communication as to what appertains to truth, see n. 3089, 3168.

3458. "And in the morning they arose early"—that hereby is signified a state of illustration, appears from the signification of morning, and of rising early, as denoting a state of illustration; for morning and day-dawn, in a supreme sense, is the Lord, and in the internal sense the celestial principle of His love, hence also it is a state of peace, see n. 2333, 2405, 2540, 2780; and to arise, in an internal sense, signifies elevation, see n. 2401, 2785, 2912, 2927, 3171. Hence it is evident, that by their arising in the morning early, is signified a state of illustration.

3459. "And they sware a man to his brother"—that hereby is signified confirmation with those who are principled in the good of truth, appears from the signification of swearing or of an oath, as denoting confirmation, see n. 2842, 3037, 3375; and from the signification of a man with his brother, as denoting the good of truth, or, what is the same thing, those who are principled in that good. That man (vir) denotes truth, see n. 265, 749, 1007, 3134, 3309; and that brother denotes good, see n. 2360. What the good of truth is, may be seen, n. 3295, 3332. They are principled in this good who are here represented by Abimelech, or who are represented by the Philistines, whose king Abimelech was, viz. who make faith essential to the Church, and give it the preference to charity. They who are of this character, are principled in no other good than the good of truth, for they extract and draw forth from the Word nothing but what appertains to faith, thus what appertains to truth, and scarce see the things appertaining to good, thus appertaining to life; therefore they confirm themselves in doctrinals of faith, but not in any doctrinals of charity; and when they do good, it is under the influence of the doctrinals of faith; which good is called the good of truth. With such as are principled in this good, the Lord conjoins Himself, but not so as with those who are principled in the good of charity, for love and charity is spiritual conjunction, and not faith, unless by love and charity; and this being the case, it is not said that they made a covenant with Isaac, but that they sware a man to his brother; for covenant is predicated of good, which appertains to love and charity, whereas an oath is predicated of truth, which appertains to faith, see n. 3375. Of those who are principled in the good of truth, is also predicated cohabitation, which is signified by a feast, see n. 3456. From spirits of this character, in another life, it was given me to know that they are separate from those who are principled in the good of charity, for these latter are more nearly conjoined to the Lord than the former; the good of the former, if I may so express myself, being hard, not suffering itself to be easily bended, not communicative, thus not in heaven, but in the entrance into heaven.

3460. "And Isaac sent them away, and they went from being with him in peace"—that hereby is signified that they were content, may appear without explication: hence also it is manifest, that with these there was cohabitation, not conjunction, according to what was just now observed, n. 3459.

3461. Verses 32, 33. And it came to pass in that day, and the servants of Isaac came, and told him concerning the reasons of the well which they digged; and they said unto him, we have found waters. And he called it Shebah, therefore the name of the city is Beershebah even to this day. It came to pass in that day, signifies that state: and the servants of Isaac came, signifies things rational: and told him concerning the reasons of the well which they digged, and said unto him, we have found waters, signifies interior truths by those things: and he called it Shebah, signifies the conjunction of confirmed truth by those things; therefore the name of the city is Beershebah, signifies the quality of doctrine thence derived: even to this day, signifies the perpetuity of the state.

3462. "It came to pass in that day"—that hereby is signified that state, appears from the signification of day, as denoting state, see n. 23, 487, 488, 493, 2788, in the present case the state of the doctrine which is treated of.

3463. "And the servants of Isaac came"—that hereby are signified things rational, appears from the signification of servants, as denoting things rational, and also scientifics, see n. 2567; and from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Lord in regard to the Divine Rational principle, see n. 1893, 2066, 2072, 2083, 2630, 3012, 3194, 3210. From what goes before it is manifest what [quality or principle] of the Lord is here represented by Isaac, viz. the Word as to its internal sense; for by Abimelech, and Ahusath, and Phicol, are signified the doctrinals of faith, which are derived from the literal sense of the Word, such as are the doctrinals of those who are called Philistines in a good sense, that is, those who are principled solely in the doctrinals of faith, and as to life are in good, but in the good of truth, which doctrinals have some conjunction with the internal sense, and thus with the Lord. For they who are principled solely in the doctrinals of faith, and in a life according thereto, are in a certain kind of conjunction, but remote, by reason that they do not know what charity towards their neighbour is, and still less what love to the Lord is, from any principle of affection, but only from a certain idea of faith, thus neither are they in any perception of good, but in a species of persuasion that what their doctrinals dictate, is true and thereby good, in which doctrinals when they are confirmed, it is possible they may be confirmed in what is false as well as in what is true, for nothing else can confirm man what truth is except good; truth indeed teaches what good is, but without perception, whereas good teaches what truth is from perception. Every one may know how the case herein is, and also what is the nature and quality of the difference here pointed out, solely from this common precept of charity, "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them," Matt. vii. 12. He who acts from this precept, does good indeed to others, but then he does good because it is so commanded, and not so much from affection of heart, and as often as he does it, he begins from himself, and also in doing good he thinks of merit; whereas he who does not act from the precept, but from a principle of charity, that is, from affection, acts from the heart, and thus from a free principle, and as often as he acts, he begins from a real will to what is good, thus from a perception of its being delightful to him; and inasmuch as he has recompence in the delight which he perceives, he does not think of merit. Hence then it may appear what difference there is between doing good from a principle of faith, and from a principle of charity, and that the former are more remote than the latter from essential good, which is the Lord; neither can the former be easily introduced into the good of charity to a degree of perception, inasmuch as they are little principled in truths, for no one can be introduced into that good, unless principles which are not true be first eradicated, and this cannot be effected, so long as such principles are rooted in the mind to a degree of persuasion that they are true.

3464. "And they told him concerning the reasons of the well which they digged, and they said, we have found waters"—that hereby are signified interior truth by those things, appears from the signification of well, as denoting the Word, see n. 3424; and from the signification of waters, as denoting truths, see n. 2702, viz. such as are from the Word; thus to tell him concerning the reasons of the well which they digged, signifies concerning the Word whence they derived doctrinals: and they said, we have found waters, signifies that in them, viz. in doctrinals, were interior truths; for, as was observed above, there are interior truths in all doctrinals drawn from the literal sense of the Word, inasmuch as the literal sense of the Word is like a well wherein is water, for in all and singular parts of the Word there is an internal sense, which sense is also in doctrinals that are derived from the Word. In regard to doctrinals derived from the literal sense of the Word, the case is this, that when man is principled in them, and at the same time in a life according to them, he has in himself correspondence; for the angels, who are attendant on him, are in interior truths, whilst he is in exterior, and thus he has communication by doctrinals with heaven, but yet according to the good of his life. As for example, when in the holy supper he thinks simply of the Lord, in consequence of the words used on the occasion, "This is My body and this is My blood," then his attendant angels are in the idea of love to the Lord and charity towards their neighbour, inasmuch as love to the Lord corresponds to the Lord's body and to bread, and neighbourly love corresponds to blood and to wine, see n. 1798, 2165, 2177, 2187. And whereas there is such correspondence, there flows an affection out of heaven through the angels into that holy principle by which man is influenced at the time, which affection he receives according to the good of his life. For the angels dwell with every one in his life's affection, thus in the affection of the doctrinals according to which he lives, but in no case if the life disagrees therewith; for if the life disagrees, as supposing there prevails an affection of gaining honours and riches by means of doctrinals, in such case the angels retire, and the infernals dwell in that affection, who either infuse into the man their confirmations for the sake of self and the world, thus a persuasive faith, which is of such a nature that he is regardless whether a thing be true or false, provided he can gain credit thereby, or take away from him all faith, in which case the doctrine uttered by his lips is only a sound excited and modified by the fire of the above loves.

3466. "Therefore the name of the city is Beersheba"—that hereby is signified the quality of doctrine thence derived, appears from the signification of name, as denoting quality, see immediately above, n. 3465; and from the signification of city, as denoting doctrine, see n. 402, 2449, 2712, 2943, 3216; hence comes Beersheba, which in the original tongue, signifies the well of an oath, thus the doctrine of confirmed truth; that Beersheba is doctrine, may be seen, n. 2723, 2858, 2859. Above, in chap. xxi. verses 30, 31, it is said, "Because thou shalt receive seven ewe-lambs from mine hand, that it may be to me for a witness that I have digged this well, therefore he called that place Beersheba, because there they both sware;" in which passage by Beersheba was signified the state and quality of doctrine, that it was from the Divine [principle], and that by it conjunction was effected; and whereas the interior things of the Church at that time are treated of in the above passage, it is said that that place was called Beersheba, whereas in the present passage, inasmuch as the exterior things of that Church are treated of, it is said that the city was so called; for of interior things is predicated state, which is signified by place, see n. 2625, 2837, 3356, 3387; but of exterior things is predicated doctrine, which is signified by city, for all doctrine has it's state and it's quality, from it's interior things.

3468. Verses 34, 35. And Esau was a son of forty years, and he took a woman Jehudith, the daughter of Beeri the Hittite, and Basemath the daughter of Elon the Hittite. And they were bitterness of spirit to Isaac and Rebecca. Esau was a son of forty years, signifies a state of temptation as to natural good of truth; and he took a woman, Jehudith, the daughter of Beeri the Hittite, and Basemath the daughter of Elon the Hittite, signifies adjunction of natural truth from another source than from what was real and genuine; and they were bitterness of spirit to Isaac and to Rebecca, signifies that hence at first came grief.

3469. "Esau was a son of forty years"—that hereby is signified a state of temptation as to natural good of truth, appears from the representation of Esau, as denoting natural good of truth, see n. 3300, 3302, 3322; and from the signification of forty years, as denoting a state of temptation; that forty denotes temptations, may be seen, n. 730, 862, 2272, and that years denote states, n. 487, 488, 493, 893. The reason why these circumstances concerning Esau are immediately adjoined to what has been related concerning Abimelech and Isaac, is, because the subject treated of is concerning those who are in the good of truth, that is, who are principled in life according to doctrinals, derived from the literal sense of the Word, for such are signified by Abimelech, and by Ahusath, and by Phicol, as was shewn above. They therefore who are in the good of truth, or in a life according to doctrinals, are regenerated as to interiors, which are their rational principles, but not as yet as to exteriors, which are their natural principles, for man is regenerated as to the rational principle before he is regenerated as to the natural, see n. 3286, 3288; inasmuch as the natural principle is altogether in the world, and in the natural principle as in a plane is founded man's thought and will. This is the reason why man perceives during regeneration a combat between the rational or his internal man, and the natural or external man, and the reason also why his external principle is regenerated much later, and likewise with greater difficulty than his internal; for what is nearer to the world and to the body, cannot so easily be constrained to comply with the internal man; a considerable length of time also will be necessary to effect such compliance, and there must be an introduction into several new states, such as states of self-acknowledgment, and of the acknowledgment of the Lord, viz. of the misery of self, and of the Lord's mercy, thus of humiliation by temptation-combats; this being the case, there is here immediately adjoined this relation concerning Esau and his two wives, whereby such things are signified in the internal sense. Every one knows what natural good is, viz. that it is the good into which man is born; but what the natural good of truth is, very few, if any, are acquainted with; natural good, or what is connate with man, is in it's kind fourfold, viz. natural good grounded in the love of good, natural good grounded in the love of truth, also natural good grounded in the love of evil, and natural good grounded in the love of what is false. For the good into which man is born, is derived to him from his parents, either father or mother; for whatsoever principle parents have contracted by frequent use and habit, or have become tinged with by actual life, so as to render it familiar to them till it has the appearance of being natural, this is derived down to their children, and becomes hereditary. Where parents have lived in the good of the love of good, and in so living have perceived their proper delight and blessedness, supposing them to conceive children in such a state of life, the children thence receive an inclination to similar good. Where parents also have lived in the good of the love of truth, concerning which good, see n. 3459, 3463, and in so living have perceived their proper delight, supposing them to conceive children in such a state of life, the children thence receive an inclination to similar good. The case is the same in respect to those parents who are in the good of the love of evil and in the good of the love of what is false, that they also communicate to their offspring such hereditary goods. These latter are called goods, by reason of their appearing in their external form as goods, to those persons who are principled therein, although they have nothing at all of real good in them, but the very reverse; such is the good possessed by several at this day, who appear to be principled in natural good. They who are in the natural good of the love of evil, are flexible and inclinable to evils of every kind, suffering themselves to be easily seduced, and in consequence of that good being compliant and yielding, especially to filthy pleasures, to adulteries, and even to exercises of cruelty; and they who are in the natural good of what is false, are inclinable to false principles of every kind, and in consequence of that good are easily caught by persuasions, especially when urged by hypocrites and cunning people, who are expert at engaging the mind's attention, insinuating themselves into the affections, and feigning innocence; into these goods so called, viz. of what is evil and false, several are born at this day in the Christian world, who are in natural good, by reason that their parents have contracted the delight of evil, and the delight of what is false by actual life, and thus have implanted it in their children, and thereby in their posterity.

jected; or it is as with fruits which are first filled with sour juice, before they can receive sweet juice, the sour juice, which is not genuine, being the means of introducing the sweet, and when this latter enters the former is dissipated. Thus also it is with man's natural principle before it is regenerated; for natural good is such, that of itself it is not willing to obey and serve rational good, as a servant serves a master, but it is desirous to have command. In order therefore that it may be reduced to a state of compliance and service, it is vexed by states of vastation and temptation, until it's concupiscencies grow faint, and then by an influx of the good of faith and of charity through the internal man from the Lord it is tempered, until the good received hereditarily is by degrees extirpated, and a new good is implanted in its place, into which goods the truths of faith are then insinuated, which are like new fibres inserted into the heart of man, through which fibres new juice is introduced, until a new heart by degrees grows up to maturity; the truths which are first introduced cannot be from a genuine fountain, because evil and false principles are in the former or natural good, but they are such resemblances or such appearances of truth, as have a certain affinity with genuine truths, whereby there is gradually given opportunity and place for real genuine truths to insinuate themselves. Genuine good is as it were the blood in the vessels, or as the juice in the fibres, leading and applying truths into form; the good which is thus formed in the natural or external man, is a common or general good woven together as it were, or wrought up of the particulars and singulars of spiritual good through the rational or internal man from the Lord, Who alone forms and creates anew; hence it is that the Lord in the Word is so often called Former and Creator.

3471. "And they were bitterness of spirit to Isaac and Rebecca"—that hereby is signified that hence at first came grief, appears from the signification of bitterness of spirit, as denoting grief; and from the representation of Isaac and Rebecca, as denoting the Lord's Divine Rational principle as to Divine Good and Divine Truth; for the subject treated of in the supreme sense is concerning the Lord, but in the representative it is concerning those who are likenesses or images of Him, viz. in the supreme sense, how the Lord made His Human [principle] Divine, and in the representative sense, how the Lord regenerates man, that is, makes him celestial and spiritual; that the regeneration of man is an image of the Lord's Glorification, may be seen, n. 3043, 3138, 3212, 3296. The ground and reason why there was grief at first is, because when truths are introduced into natural good, they at first cause pain, for they aggravate the conscience, and induce anxieties, inasmuch as concupiscencies are present, against which spiritual truth wages combat; but this first grief by degrees diminishes, and at length vanishes away. Natural good herein is as a weak and sickly body, which is to be restored to health by a painful regimen; when it is in this state, then at first it has grief.

3472. THAT all and singular things, which are in the literal sense of the Word, are representative of the spiritual and celestial things of the Lord's kingdom in the heavens, may appear from what has been heretofore shewn, and from what still remains, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, to be shewn: but inasmuch as man has removed himself so far from heaven, and has immersed himself in the lowest principles of nature, yea, even in such as are terrestrial, therefore it is altogether repugnant to him when it is said, that the Word contains deeper mysteries than what he apprehends from the letter, and more so when it is said, that it contains things incomprehensible, which are adequate only to the wisdom of angels, and still more so when it is said, that it contains things essentially Divine, which infinitely transcend the understanding of angels. The Christian world indeed acknowledges that the Word is Divine, but the Divinity thereof it still denies in heart, if not in tongue! nor is this to be wondered at, inasmuch as the terrestrial principle, in which man is immersed at this day, has no apprehension of things of a more sublime nature, nor is willing to apprehend them.

3473. That the Word in the letter has in it such deep and hidden contents, is often exhibited visibly to spirits or souls who come into another life; and during such exhibitions it has been sometimes granted me to be present, as may appear from the testimonies of experience adduced in the first part of this work, concerning the sacred Scripture or Word, as containing Things Divine, which are made manifest to good spirits and angels, n. 1767 to 1776, and 1869 to 1879, from which testimonies, for the sake of confirmation, it is permitted further to relate what follows.

3474. A certain spirit came to me not long after his decease, as I could conclude from this circumstance, that as yet he was ignorant of his being in another life, imagining that he was still living in the world. It was perceivable that he was studiously inclined, and accordingly I discoursed with him about his studies; but at that very instant he was suddenly taken up on high, as which I was surprised, and conjectured that he was one of those spirits who are of high and aspiring tempers, for it is usual with such to be carried up aloft; or that he fancied heaven to be situated on high, and such also are wont to be taken upwards, in order to convince them that heaven is not in what is high, but in what is internal. I presently perceived, however, that he was carried up to the angelic spirits, who are in front a little to the right in the first entrance into heaven. From thence he afterwards discoursed with me, saying, that he saw things more sublime than human minds can possibly conceive; after this I read the first chapter of Deuteronomy concerning the Jewish people, in that there were some sent to search the land of Canaan, and see what was therein; and whilst I was reading he said, that he perceived nothing of the sense of the letter, but only the things contained in the spiritual sense, and that these were too wonderful to be described. This was in the first entrance of the heaven of angelic spirits; what then must have been the case in that heaven itself? and what in the heaven of angels? Certain spirits on this occasion, who were attendant upon me, and who had before had no belief in the Word of the Lord as containing such things, began to repent that they did not believe, and said in that state that they did believe, because they heard him assert that he heard, saw, and perceived it to be so. But other spirits still persisted in their unbelief, and said that it was not so, and was mere phantasy, wherefore these also were suddenly taken up, and discoursing with me from their state of elevation they confessed that it indeed was very far from phantasy, for that they really now perceived it to be so, and this by a perception more exquisite than could possibly be communicated to any sense during the life of the body. Presently also others were taken up into the same heaven, and amongst them one with whom I had been acquainted when he was in the body, who testified the same thing, adding to other observations, that through astonishment he was not able to describe the glory of the Word in it's internal sense, at the same time saying, and this from a principle of tender pity and compassion, that it was surprising men had no apprehension of such things. On two occasions after this I saw others taken up into another heaven amongst angelic spirits, who thence discoursed with me; I was reading at that time the third chapter of Deuteronomy from beginning to end, whereupon they said, that they were only in the interior sense of the Word, asserting that there was not a single point or tittle, but what contained in it somewhat spiritual most beautifully cohering with the rest, also that names signified things; they likewise had this confirmation granted them, because they had not before believed that all and singular things in the Word were inspired from the Lord: this they were desirous also to confirm before others by an oath, but it was not permitted.

3475. That there exist in the heavens continual representatives, such as are in the Word, has been occasionally said and shewn above; these representatives are such, that spirits and angels see them in a much clearer light, than that of the sun of this world at noon-day, and what things they see in an external form, they perceive the signification of in an internal one, and therein things still interior. For there are three heavens; in the first heaven these representatives appear in an external form, with a perception of what they signify in an internal; in the second heaven they appear such as they are in their internal form, with a perception of what they are in a still interior form; in the third heaven they appear such as they are in that still interior form, which is the inmost. The representatives which appear in the first heaven, are the common representatives of those things which appear in the second, and those which appear in the second, are the common representatives of those which appear in the third; thus in those which appear in the first heaven are inwardly those which appear in the second, and in these are inwardly those which appear in the third; and whereas they are thus exhibited according to degrees, it may appear how perfect, and full of wisdom, and at the same time how happy are those representatives which are in the inmost heaven, and that they are altogether ineffable, inasmuch as myriads of myriads exhibit one particular of a general representative. All and singular these representatives involve in them such things as appertain to the Lord's kingdom, and these such things as appertain to the Lord Himself. They who are in the first heaven, in their representatives see such things as exist in the interior sphere of the Lord's kingdom, and therein such things as exist in the sphere still more interior, and thus see representatives of the Lord but remotely; they who are in the second heaven, in their representatives see such things as exist in the inmost sphere of the kingdom, and therein see representatives of the Lord nearer; but they who are in the third heaven, see the Lord Himself.

3476. Hence it may be known how the case is in regard to the Word; for the Word was given of the Lord to man, and also to the angels, in order that by it they may be near and present with Him; for the Word is the medium of the union of earth with heaven, and by heaven with the Lord; its literal sense is what unites man with the first heaven; and whereas in the literal there is an internal sense, which treats of the Lord's kingdom, and in this a supreme sense, which treats of the Lord, and these senses are in order within each other; it is hence manifest what is the nature of the union effected with the Lord by the Word.

3477. It was said that there are continual representatives in the heavens, and such as involve the deepest mysteries of wisdom; those which are manifest to man from the literal sense of the Word, are so few respectively, that they are as the waters of a small pool compared with those of the ocean. The nature of representatives in the heavens may appear from those already mentioned above, as having been seen by me, and likewise from the following: there was represented before certain spirits, as I myself saw, a broad way and a narrow way, whereof mention is made in the Word, a broad way which led to hell, and a narrow way which led to heaven; the broad way was beset with trees and flowers, of such a sort as in their external form appeared beautiful and delightful, but there were hidden therein snakes and serpents of various kinds, which the spirits did not see; the narrow way was not so decorated with trees and flowers to the sight, but appeared sorrowful and obscure, nevertheless in it there were angel infants most beautifully adorned in paradises and flower gardens most pleasant, which yet the spirits did not see: the spirits were then asked which way they were willing to go? They said, the broad way; when suddenly their eyes were opened, and in the broad way they saw the serpents, but in the narrow way the angels; and they were then again asked, which way they were willing to go? Hereupon they remained silent: and so far as their sight was opened, they said, that they were willing to go the narrow way, and so far as their sight was closed, that they were willing to go the broad way.

3478. There was also represented before certain spirits, the tabernacle with the ark; for they who have been greatly delighted with the Word, during their abode in the world, have such things presented visibly before their view; thus on this occasion there was presented the tabernacle with all it's apparatus, viz. with it's courts, it's curtains round about, it's rails within, the golden altar of incense, the table containing the bread, the candlestick, the propitiatory (mercy-seat) with the cherubim; and at the same time it was given to the well-disposed spirits to perceive what each particular signified; the three heavens were what were represented by the tabernacle, and the Lord Himself by the testimony in the ark on which was the propitiatory; and in proportion as their sight was opened, in the same proportion things more celestial and Divine were opened therein, of which they had no knowledge during their life in the body, and what is surprising, there was not the smallest particular therein but what was representative, even to the hooks and rings; to instance only in the bread which was on the table, in this, as in a representative and symbol, they had a perception of that food on which angels live, thus they had a perception of celestial and spiritual love with their joys and happinesses, and in that love and these joys and happinesses, they had a perception of the Lord Himself, as being the bread or manna from heaven; besides many other particulars arising from the form, position, and number of the loaves, and from the gold encompassing the table, and from the candlestick whence proceeded an illuminating light exhibiting still further representations of things ineffable; and so in other instances: from which it might appear also, that the rituals or representatives of the Jewish Church contained in them all the arcana of the Christian Church, and likewise that they, to whom the representatives and significatives of the Word of the Old Testament are opened, may know and perceive the arcana of the Lord's Church in the earths, whilst they live in the world, and the arcana of arcana which are in the Lord's kingdom in the heavens, when they come into another life.

3479. The Jews who lived before the Lord's coming, as also they who lived afterwards, entertained no other opinion concerning the rituals of their Church, than that Divine Worship consisted solely in such externals, being utterly regardless of what they represented and signified. For they did not know, neither were they willing to know, that there existed any internal principle of worship and of the Word, thus that there was any life after death, consequently that there was any heaven, for they were altogether sensual and corporeal. And whereas they were principled in things external separate from internal, worship with respect to them was merely idolatrous, and therefore they were most prone to worship any gods whatsoever, provided only they were persuaded that such gods could cause them to prosper. But inasmuch as this nation was of such a character that they were capable of being kept in an holy external principle, and thus of possessing holy rituals, whereby were represented the celestial things of the Lord's kingdom, and of having an holy veneration for Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and also for Moses and Aaron, and afterwards for David, by whom the Lord was represented, and especially of having an holy reverence for the Word, in which all and singular things were representative and significative of things Divine, therefore in that nation a representative Church was instituted. But if that nation had known internal things to a degree of acknowledgment, they would in such case have profaned them, and thus, whilst they had been in an holy external principle, they would have been at the same time in a profane internal principle, so that there could have been no communication of representatives with heaven by that nation. Hence it is, that interior things were not discovered to them, not even that the Lord was within, that He might save their souls. Inasmuch as the tribe of Judah was of this character more than the other tribes, and at this day as formerly, account the rituals holy, which may be observed out of Jerusalem, and also have an holy veneration for their fathers, and a particular reverence for the Word of the Old Testament, and inasmuch as it was foreseen that Christians would almost totally reject that Word, and would likewise defile it's internal things with things profane, therefore that nation has been hitherto preserved, according to the Lord's words in Matthew, chap. xxiv. 34; it would have been otherwise if Christians, as they were acquainted with things internal, had also lived internal men; in this case that nation, like other nations, would have been cut off many ages ago. But with regard to that nation, the case is this, that their external holy principle cannot in the least affect the internals of their minds, these being unclean through the sordid love of self and of the world, and also by reason of the idolatrous principle prevailing in them, in that they worship things external separate from internal ; thus they have not anything of heaven in them, nor can they carry anything of heaven with them into another life, except a few who live in mutual love, and in consequence thereof do not despise others in comparison with themselves.

3480. It was also shewn, how the unclean principles of that nation did not prevent the interiors of the Word, that is, it's spiritual and celestial things, from being still exhibited present in heaven ; for those unclean principles were removed so as not to be perceived, and evils were also changed into good, so that the mere external holy principle served as a plane, and thus the internals of the Word were exhibited present before the angels, without the interposition of any hindrances ; hence it was made manifest, how that people, though interiorly idolatrous, could represent things holy, yea, the Lord Himself, and thus how the Lord could dwell in the midst of their uncleannesses, Levit. xvi. 16 ; consequently how He could have somewhat resembling a Church amongst them, for a Church merely representative is but a resemblance of a Church, and not a real Church. With Christians this cannot be the case, because they are acquainted with the interior things of worship, but do not believe them, thus they cannot be in an holy external principle separate from it's internal. Moreover, with those who are in the life of faith, communication with heaven is effected by the goods appertaining to them, all evil and false principles being in the meantime removed ; and in this case, what is surprising, all and singular things of the Word, as it is read by them, are made manifest to the angels, and this also notwithstanding they who read do not attend to the sense thereof, as has been evidenced to me by much experience, for the internal principle appertaining to them, which is not so perceivable, serves as a plane of communication.

3481. I have very frequently discoursed with the Jews who are in another life, (they appear in front in the lower earth, beneath the plane of the left foot) and once also concerning the Word, concerning the land of Canaan, and concerning the Lord. Concerning the Word, as containing in it the deepest mysteries, which they allowed ; next, that all the mysteries contained therein relate to the Messiah and His kingdom, which also they were willing to allow ; but when I said, that Messiah in the Hebrew tongue is the same as Christ in the Greek, this they were not willing to hear ; again, when I said that the Messiah is the most Holy One, and that Jehovah is in Him, and that no other is meant by the Holy One of Israel and by the God of Jacob ; and that inasmuch as He is most holy, none can be in His kingdom but those who are holy, not in external form but internal ; consequently those who are not principled in the sordid love of the world, and in the exaltation of themselves against other nations, and in hatreds one towards another, this they could not endure to hear. Afterwards, when I told them that the Messiah's kingdom, according to the prophecies concerning it, must be eternal, and that they who are with Him will also inherit the earth for ever; and that supposing His kingdom to be of this world, and they were to be introduced into the land of Canaan, it would only be for a few years, according to the duration of man's life; besides that all those who died after that they were driven out of the land of Canaan, did not enjoy such blessedness; and that hence they might know, that by the land of Canaan was represented and signified the kingdom of heaven, and especially as they now knew that they were in another life, and were to live for ever, and that hereby it was evident that the Messiah had His kingdom there; and that in case it was given them to discourse with angels, they might know that the universal angelic heaven is His kingdom; and moreover, that by the new earth, the New Jerusalem, and the new temple spoken of in Ezechiel, nothing else can be signified but such a kingdom of the Messiah: to these things they could make no reply, only that they who were to be introduced into the land of Canaan by the Messiah, and were to die after so few years, and to leave the blessedness which they were to enjoy therein, would weep bitterly.

3482. The language used in the Word, although to man it appears simple, and in some passages unpolished, is yet real angelic language, but in it's ultimates, for angelic speech or language, which is spiritual, when it is conveyed down into human expressions, cannot be conveyed into any other speech or language than such as occurs in the Word, every singular thing therein mentioned being representative, and every singular expression being significative. The ancients, as having commerce with spirits and angels, had no other speech or language than this, which was full of representatives, and in every expression of which was contained an internal spiritual sense. The books of the ancients were also thus written, it being the study of their wisdom so to speak and so to write. Hence also it may appear how far man afterwards removed himself from heaven, inasmuch as at this day he does not even know that there is in the Word anything else but what appears in the letter, nor that there is a spiritual sense within; whatsoever is said beyond the literal sense is called mystical, and is rejected solely on that account; hence also it is, that communication with heaven is at this day intercepted, and this to such a degree, that few believe there is any heaven, and what is surprising, fewer amongst the learned and erudite, than amongst the simple.

3483. Whatsoever anywhere appears in the universe, is representative of the Lord's kingdom, insomuch that there is not any thing contained in the universal atmospheric region of the stars, or in the earth and it's three kingdoms, but what in it's manner and measure is representative; for all and singular the things in nature are ultimate images, inasmuch as from the Divine [principle] proceed the celestial things appertaining to good, and from these celestial things the spiritual things appertaining to truth, and from both the former and the latter proceed natural things. Hence it may appear how gross, yea, how terrestrial, and also inverted, human intelligence is, which ascribes all and singular things to nature separate or exempt from influx prior to itself, or from the efficient cause. They also who so think and speak, seem to themselves to be wiser than others, when yet angelic wisdom consists in ascribing nothing to nature, but all and singular things to the Lord's Divine [principle], thus to a principle of life, and not to anything dead. The learned know that subsistence is perpetual existence, but still it is contrary to the affection of what is false, and thereby contrary to the reputation of learning, to say, that nature continually subsists, as it originally had existence, from the Lord's Divine [principle]. Inasmuch now as all and singular things subsist from the Divine [principle], that is, continually exist, and all and singular things thence derived must needs be representative of those things whereby they had existence, it follows, that the visible universe is nothing else but a theatre representative of the Lord's kingdom, and that this latter is a theatre representative of the Lord Himself.

3484. From very much experience I am instructed, that there is but one single source of life, which is that of the Lord, and that this life flows in and causes man to live, yea, causes both the good and the wicked to live; to this life correspond forms which are substances, and which by continual Divine Influx are so vivified, that they appear to themselves to live by or from themselves. This correspondence is that of the recipient organs with the life received; but such as the recipient organs are, such is the life which they live. Those men, who are principled in love and charity, are in correspondence, for the life itself is received by them adequately; but they who are principled in things contrary to love and charity, are not in correspondence, because the life itself is not received adequately, hence they have a life existing with them according to their quality. This may be illustrated by the case of natural forms, into which the light of the sun is influent; such as the recipient forms are, such are the modifications of that light; in the spiritual world the modifications are spiritual, therefore in that world such as the recipient forms are, such is the intelligence and such the wisdom of the inhabitants; hence it is, that good spirits and angels appear as the very essential forms of charity, whereas wicked spirits and infernals appear as forms of hatred.

3485. The representations which exist in another life, are appearances, but living ones, because they are from the light of life; the light of life is the Divine Wisdom, which is from the Lord alone: hence all things which exist from that light are real, not like those things which exist from the light of this world;

wherefore they who are in another life have occasionally said, that the things they see therein are real things, and the things which man sees are respectively not real, because the former things live, and thereby immediately affect the life, whereas the latter things do not live; consequently neither do they affect the life, unless so far, and in such a sort, as the things of this world's light conjoin themselves adequately and correspondently with the things of the light of heaven. Hence then it may appear what representations are, and what are correspondencies.

GENESIS.

CHAPTER THE TWENTY-SEVENTH.

3486. AT the beginning of the preceding chapter, from n. 3353 to 3356, were explained the things which the Lord spake and foretold concerning the consummation of the age, or the end of the days of the Church, in Matt. xxiv. 3 to 7. At the beginning of this chapter, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, will be explained the things which follow there in order, namely, the things in the same evangelist, from 8 to 14, where are these words: "All these things are the beginning of sorrows. Then shall they deliver you into tribulation, and shall kill you, and ye shall be hated of all nations for My name. And then many shall be offended, and shall deliver up one another, and shall hate one another, and many false prophets shall arise and seduce many. And because of the multiplying of iniquity, the charity of many shall wax cold. But he that shall persevere unto the end, the same shall be saved. And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the inhabited [world], for a testimony to all nations; and then shall the end be."

3487. By those words which precede, and are explained, n. 3353 to 3356, was described the first state of the perversion of the Church, which was this, that they began no longer to know what was good and true, but to dispute among themselves concerning goodness and truth, from which falsities originated: by these words is described another state of the perversion of the Church, which is this, that they despised good and truth, and also turned away from them, and thus that faith in the Lord was about to expire, according to the degree in which charity was about to cease.

from the internal sense, which is as follows. All these things are the beginning of sorrows, signifies those things which precede, namely, the things which are of the first state of the perverted Church; which is, as has been mentioned, when they began no longer to know what was good and what was true, but to dispute about good and truth among themselves, from which spring falsehoods, and thence heresies. That such things perverted the Church before many ages were past, is clear from this, that the Church was divided in the Christian world, and this according to the opinion about good and truth, thus that the perversion of the Church commenced a long time ago. Then shall they deliver you into tribulation and shall kill you, signifies that good and truth were about to perish, first by tribulation, that is, by perversion; afterwards by killing them, that is, by denial; that to kill, when spoken of good and truth, denotes not to receive, that is, to deny, may be seen, n. 3387, 3395; by ye, or by the apostles, are signified all the things of faith in one complex, thus both its good and its truth; that those things are signified by the twelve apostles, may be seen, n. 577, 2089, 2129, 2130, f. 3272, 3354, and here it is manifestly clear, for the subject treated of is not concerning the preaching of the apostles, but the consummation of the age. And ye shall be hated of all nations for My name, signifies contempt and aversion for all things relating to good and truth; to hate is to condemn and be averse to, for these are the properties of hatred; by all nations, denotes by those who are in evil; that nations signify such, may be seen, n. 1259, 1260, 1849, 1868, 2588; for My name, is for the Lord, thus for all things which are from Him. That the name of the Lord denotes all in one complex, by which He is worshiped, thus every thing relating to His Church, may be seen, n. 2724, 3006. Then shall many be offended, and shall deliver up one another, and shall hate one another, signifies enmities on account of those things; many shall be offended, is the enmity in themselves; the Lord's essential Human [principle] is what excites enmity; that this would be an offence and scandal, is predicted throughout the Word; they shall deliver up one another, is the enmity between themselves arising from the false principle against the true; and they shall hate one another, is the enmity among themselves arising from evil against good. And many false prophets shall arise and shall seduce many, signifies preaching of what is false; that false prophets are such as teach false principles, thus that they denote false doctrine, may be seen, n. 2534; and shall seduce many, denotes that thence should be derivations. And because of the multiplying of iniquity, the charity of many shall wax cold, signifies the expiration of charity with faith; because of the multiplying of iniquity, denotes according to the falses of faith; the charity of many waxing cold, denotes the expiration of charity; for each keeps pace with the other; where there is no faith there is no charity, and where there is no charity there is no faith; but it is charity which receives faith, and it is no charity which rejects faith; hence the origin of every false principle and every evil. He who perseveres unto the end, the same shall be saved, signifies the salvation of those who are in charity; he who perseveres unto the end, is he who does not suffer himself to be seduced, thus he who does not yield in temptations. And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the inhabited [world], for a testimony to all nations, signifies that this shall first be made known in the Christian world; to be preached is to be made known; this gospel of the kingdom is this truth that thus it is; gospel denotes annunciation; kingdom is truth; that kingdom denotes truth, may be seen, n. 1672, 2547; in all the inhabited, namely earth, denotes the Christian world; that earth is the tract where the Church is, thus the Christian world, may be seen, n. 662, 1066, 1067, 1262, 1733, 1850, 2117, 2118, 2928, 3355. The Church is here called inhabited from the life of faith, that is, from the good which is of truth; for to inhabit in the internal sense is to live, and inhabitants are the goods of truth, n. 1293, 2268, 2451, 2712, 3384; for a testimony, denotes that they may know, and not make ignorance a pretext; to all nations, denotes evils, n. 1259, 1260, 1849, 1868, 2588; for when men are principled in what is false and evil, they no longer know what is true and what is good; they believe in this case what is false to be true, and what is evil to be good, and vice versa; when the Church is in this state, then will the end come. In what follows, which will be explained, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, at the beginning of the next chapter of Genesis, the subject treated of is concerning that state of the Church, which is called the abomination of desolation, which is the third state.

3489. That such is the condition of the Church, does not appear to those who are in the Church, namely, that they condemn and are averse to all those things which are of good and truth, and that they wage hostilities against them, and especially against the Lord Himself; for they frequent public worship, they hear preaching, they are in some degree of holiness when there, they go to the sacred supper, and occasionally converse among themselves in a becoming manner concerning those things; thus do the bad as well as the good. They also live among themselves in civil charity, or friendship; hence it is, that in the sight of men no contempt is visible, much less aversion, and least of all enmity against the goods and truths of faith, and against the Lord; but these things are only external forms by which one person seduces another; whereas the internal forms of the men of the Church are altogether unlike, even altogether contrary to the external forms. The internal forms are those here described, and which are as above-mentioned; the real quality of which appears to the life in the heavens, for the angels do not attend to anything else than things internal, that is, to ends, or intentions and volitions, and thoughts thence derived. How far these differ from what is external, may be clearly seen by those who come from the Christian world into another life, concerning whom see n. 2121, 2122, 2123, 2124, 2125, 2126: for in another life internal principles are those alone, according to which they there think and speak, inasmuch as external principles are left behind with the body; in another life therefore it is clear, that although they appeared peaceable in the world, yet nevertheless they entertained hatred one against another, and against all those things which are of faith, and especially against the Lord, for when the Lord only is named before them in another life, a sphere not only of contempt, but also of aversion, and enmity, is manifestly exhaled and diffused from them against Him, even from those who in appearance spake piously of Him, and likewise had preached concerning Him; so also when charity and faith are named. Such is their quality in the internal form, which is there manifested, insomuch that had external restraints been removed, while they lived in the world, that is, had they not feared the penalties of human laws, and especially had they not feared for reputation, on account of the honours which they affected and aimed at, and on account of the wealth which they desired and greedily sought after, they would have rushed one against another with intestine hatred, according to their will-tendencies and thoughts; and would have seized the goods of others without any conscience, and likewise would have murdered one another without any conscience, more especially the innocent. Such are Christians at this day as to their interiors, except a few who are not known; whence it appears what is the quality of the Church.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1. AND it came to pass that Isaac was old, and his eyes were darkened from seeing, and he called Esau his elder son, and said unto him, my son, and he said unto him, behold me.

2. And he said, Behold I pray thee I am old, I know not the day of my death.

3. And now take I pray thee thy weapons, thy quiver, and thy bow, and go into the field, and hunt for me venison.

4. And make me savoury meat, as I have loved, and bring it to me, and I will eat, to the intent that my soul may bless thee before I die.

5. And Rebecca heard Isaac speaking to Esau his son; and Esau went to the field to hunt for venison, to bring it.

6. And Rebecca said unto Jacob her son, saying, Behold I heard thy father speaking unto Esau thy brother, saying,

7. Bring me venison, and make me savoury meat, and I will eat and will bless thee before JEHOVAH before my death.

8. And now, my son, hearken unto my voice, to that which I command thee.

9. Go I pray to the flock, and take for me thence two good kids of the goats, and I will make them savoury meat for thy father as he loveth.

10. And bring it to thy father, and let him eat, to the intent that he may bless thee before his death.

11. And Jacob said unto Rebecca his mother, behold my brother Esau is a hairy man, and I am a smooth man.

12. Peradventure my father will feel me, and I shall be in his eyes as one seducing, and I shall bring upon me a curse and not a blessing.

13. And his mother said unto him, upon me be thy curse, my son, only hearken to my voice, and go take for me.

14. And he went, and took, and brought to his mother, and his mother made savoury meat as his father loved.

15. And Rebecca took goodly raiment [raiment of desires] of her eldest son Esau, which were with her in the house, and put them on Jacob her younger son.

16. And she made him put skins of kids of the goats upon his hands, and upon the smooth of his neck.

17. And she gave the savoury meat, and the bread, which she had made, into the hand of Jacob her son.

18. And he came to his father and said, My father; and he said, Behold me, who art thou, my son?

19. And Jacob said unto his father, I am Esau thy first-born, I have done as thou spakest unto me: arise I pray, sit, and eat of my venison, that thy soul may bless me.

20. And Isaac said unto his son, what is this thou hast hastened to find, my son? and he said, because JEHOVAH thy God caused [it] to meet my face.

21. And Isaac said unto Jacob, come near I pray, and I will feel thee, my son, whether thou be he my son Esau, or not.

22. And Jacob came near to Isaac his father, and he felt him, and said, the voice is Jacob's voice, and the hands are the hands of Esau.

23. And he did not acknowledge him, because his hands were hairy as his brother Esau's hands, and he blessed him.

24. And he said, art thou he my son Esau? And he said, I (am).

25. And he said, bring to me, and I will eat of my son's venison, to the intent that my soul may bless thee; and he brought to him, and he did eat, and he brought him wine, and he drank.

26. And Isaac his father said unto him, come near I pray, and kiss me, my son.

27. And he came near, and kissed him, and he smelled the smell of his raiment, and blessed him, and said, See, the smell of my son is as the smell of a field which יהוה hath blessed.

28. And God shall give thee of the dew of heaven, and of the fatnesses of the earth, and multitude of corn and new wine.

29. People shall serve thee, and people shall bow down themselves to thee; be thou a master to thy brethren, and thy mother's sons shall bow down themselves to thee; cursed are they who curse thee, and blessed are they who bless thee.

30. And it came to pass as Isaac left off to bless Jacob, and Jacob was scarce yet gone out from the presence of Isaac his father, that Esau his brother came from his hunting.

31. And he also made savoury meat, and brought it to his father, and said unto his father, let my father arise, and eat of his son's venison, to the intent that thy soul may bless me.

32. And Isaac his father said unto him, Who art thou? And he said, I am thy son, thy first-born Esau.

33. And Isaac shuddered with exceeding great horror, and said, Who then is he who hath hunted venison, and brought it to me, and I have eaten of all before thou camest, and blessed him, also he shall be blessed.

34. And Esau heard the words of his father, and he cried with a great and exceeding bitter cry, and said unto his father, bless me, even I my father.

35. And he said, thy brother came in treachery, and hath taken away thy blessing.

36. And he said, doth he not call his name Jacob, and he hath supplanted me these two times, he hath taken away my birthright, and behold, now he hath taken away my blessing; and he said, hast thou not reserved a blessing for me?

37. And Isaac answered and said unto Esau, behold I have placed him a master to thee, and I have given all his brethren to him for servants, and have supported him with corn and new wine, and what then shall I do for thee, my son?

38. And Esau said unto his father, hast thou but this one blessing, O my father, bless me, even I, O my father; and Esau lifted up his voice, and wept.

39. And Isaac his father answered, and said unto him, behold thy habitation shall be of the fatnesses of the earth, and of the dew of heaven from above.

40. And on thy sword shalt thou live, and shalt serve thy brother, and it shall be when thou hast dominion, and thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck.

41. And Esau hated Jacob on account of the blessing with which his father had blessed him; and Esau said in his heart, the days of mourning of my father will approach, and I will kill Jacob my brother.

42. And Rebecca was told the words of Esau her elder son, and she sent and called Jacob her younger son, and said to him behold Esau thy brother comforteth himself for thee to slay thee.

43. And now, my son, hearken unto my voice, and arise, flee unto Laban, my brother, to Haran.

44. And tarry with him some days, until thy brother's fury turn away.

45. Until thy brother's anger turn away from thee, and he forget what thou hast done unto him, and I will send and receive thee from thence; wherefore should I be deprived of you both in one day.

46. And Rebecca said unto Isaac, I loath my life, because of the daughters of Heth; if Jacob should take a woman of the daughters of Heth, such as are these of the daughters of the land, wherefore have I lives?

CONTENTS.

3490. ABOVE, in speaking of Isaac and Rebecca, the subject treated of in the internal sense is concerning the rational [principle], how the Lord made it Divine in Himself; the subject here treated of in the internal sense is concerning the natural [principle], how the Lord made it Divine in Himself; Esau is the good thereof, and Jacob is the truth; for the Lord, when He was in the world, made His whole human [principle] Divine in Himself, as well the interior, which is the rational, as the exterior, which is the natural, and also the very corporeal; and this according to Divine Order; according to which the Lord also makes man new or regenerates him; wherefore in a representative sense, the subject here treated of is also concerning the regeneration of man as to his natural [principle], in which sense Esau is the good of the natural [principle], and Jacob is the truth thereof; each nevertheless Divine, because all good and truth, which is in the regenerate, is from the Lord.

THE INTERNAL SENSE.

3491. AND it came to pass, that Isaac was old, and his eyes were darkened from seeing, and he called Esau his elder son, and said unto him, my son, and he said, behold me. It came to pass that Isaac was old, signifies when the state was at hand : and his eyes were darkened from seeing, signifies when the rational was willing to enlighten the natural [principle] with the Divine : and he called Esau his elder son, signifies the affection of natural good, or the good of life : and he said unto him, my son, and he said unto him, behold me, signifies presence by virtue of being foreseen and provided for.

3492. "It came to pass that Isaac was old"—that hereby is signified when the state was at hand, appears from the signification of being old, as denoting the presence of a new state, for old age in the Word signifies both the putting off a former state and the putting on a new state ; and this by reason that old age is the ultimate of age, when corporeal things begin to be put off, and therewith the loves of the preceding years, and thus when the interiors begin to be enlightened, for as the former are removed, the latter are enlightened ; also, because the angels, who spiritually perceive the things which are in the Word, have no longer the idea of any old age, but instead of it an idea of new life, thus an idea in the present case that the state was at hand, viz. that the Divine Rational principle, which is represented by Isaac, should desire a natural principle corresponding to itself, that is, which should also be Divine.

3493. "And his eyes were darkened from seeing"—that hereby is signified when the rational principle was willing to enlighten the natural with the Divine, appears from the signification of eyes, as denoting interior or rational sight, concerning which, see n. 2701 ; and from the signification of seeing, as denoting to perceive and understand, see n. 2150, 2325, 2807 ; hence when the eyes are said to be darkened, it signifies that there was no more any perception, in the present case no perception of those things which were in the natural principle ; and this being the signification of these words, it signifies that the rational principle was willing to enlighten the natural with the Divine. How this case is, may appear from what was above said and shewn concerning the rational and natural principle in man when he is regenerated, viz. that the rational is regenerated before the natural, by reason that the rational is interior and thus nearer to the Divine : and also because it is purer, and thus fitter to receive the Divine than the natural is ; and further, because the natural is to be regenerated by the rational, as may be seen, n. 3286, 3288, 3321 ; when therefore the rational principle is regenerated, and the natural is not, then the former appears to itself to be darkened, for there is no correspondence ; for the rational principle receives it's sight from the light of heaven, and the natural it's sight from the light of the world ; and unless these correspond, the rational can see nothing in the natural ; all therein appears to it as shade, or even as darkness ; but when they correspond, then the rational principle sees things which are in the natural in light, because in this case the things appertaining to the light of the world, are enlightened by those which are in the light of heaven, and thereby become as it were transparent; but these things appear more evident from what has been observed concerning correspondencies, n. 2987, 2989, 2971, 2990, 3002, 3138, 3167, 3222, 3223, 3225, 3337, 3485. Hence then it may in some sort be apprehended, that by these words, "the eyes of Isaac were darkened from seeing," is signified that the rational principle was willing to enlighten the natural with the Divine, that is, to make it also Divine, for in the supreme sense the Lord is treated of; which may thus be illustrated by those things which exist with man when he is regenerated, of which mention has been made; for the regeneration of man is an image of the Glorification of the Lord, n. 3043, 3138, 3212, 3296, 3490.

3494. "And he called his elder son Esau"—that hereby is signified the affection of natural good, or the good of life, is manifest from the representation of Esau, as denoting the Divine Good of the natural principle, concerning which see n. 3300, 3302, 3322; and because the good of the natural principle is that which appears in the affection and life, therefore it is the affection of natural good, or the good of life, which is here represented by Esau. The affection of good in the natural principle, and thence the good of life, is what is called the elder son; but the affection of truth, and thence the doctrine of truth, is what is called the younger son. That the affection of good, and thence the good of life, is the elder son, that is, the first-begotten, is clear from this consideration, that infants are first of all in good, for they are in a state of innocence, and in a state of love towards their parents and nurses, and in a state of mutual charity towards other infants their companions; so that good is with every man the first-begotten; this good, into which man is thus initiated when an infant, remains; for whatever is imbibed from infancy assumes life; and because it remains, it is the good of life; for if man was to be without the good which he derives from infancy, he would not be a man, but a wilder beast than any of the forest. This good does not appear indeed to be present, because all that is imbibed in infancy appears no otherwise than as somewhat natural, as is abundantly manifest from the act of walking, and from the other motions of the body, likewise from the manners and graceful carriage required in civil life; also from the speech, and several other particulars; hence it may appear that good is the elder son, that is, the first-born; and also that truth is the younger son, or begotten afterwards; for truth is not learnt till the infant becomes a boy, a youth, and an adult. Each principle, both good and truth, which is in the natural or external man, is a son, viz. a son of the rational or internal man, for whatever exists in the natural or external man, flows in from the rational or internal man, and from that also exists and is born; what does not thence exist and is born, is not a living human [principle]; it would be what might be called a sort of sensual corporeal [principle] without a soul. Hence it is that both good and truth are called sons, and indeed sons of the rational principle. Nevertheless it is not the rational principle which produces and brings forth the natural, but it is an influx through the rational into the natural, which influx is from the Lord. Hence His sons are all infants who are born; and afterwards when they become wise, so far as they are infants at the same time, that is, in the innocence of infancy, in the love of infancy towards their parent, in this case the Lord, and in the mutual charity of infancy towards other infants their companions, in this case their neighbour, so far they are adopted by the Lord as sons.

3495. "And he said unto him, my son, and he said unto him, behold me"—that hereby is signified presence by virtue of being foreseen and provided for, appears from the signification of calling him, and saying to him, my son, as denoting by virtue of being foreseen and provided for, because it is predicated of the Lord's Divine [principle]; and from the signification of saying unto him, behold me, which is the reply, as denoting presence.

3496. Verses 2, 3, 4. And he said, behold I pray, I am old, I know not the day of my death. And now take, I pray thee, thy weapons, thy quiver, and thy bow, and go into the field, and hunt me venison, and make me savoury meat as I have loved, and bring it to me, and I will eat, to the intent that my soul may bless thee before I die. And he said, behold I pray, I am old, signifies that the state was at hand; I know not the day of my death, signifies life in the natural principle; and now take I pray thy weapons, thy quiver, and thy bow, signifies the doctrinals of good which he had; and go into the field, signifies where the ground is good; and hunt me venison, signifies the truth of good; and make me savoury meat as I have loved, signifies pleasant things thence derived because from good; and bring to me and I will eat, signifies appropriation: to the intent that my soul may bless thee, signifies adjunction to his life: before I die, signifies the first state of resuscitation in the natural principle.

3497. "And he said, behold, I pray, I am old"—that hereby is signified that a state was at hand, appears from what has been said above concerning the signification of growing old, n. 3492.

3498. "I know not the day of my death"—that hereby is signified life in the natural [principle], appears from the signification of day, as denoting state, see n. 23, 487, 488, 493, 893, 2788; and from the signification of death, as denoting to rise again, or to be resuscitated into life, see n. 3326. Thus by the day of death is signified a state of the resuscitation of life, or what is the same thing, is signified life; that this is in the natural principle is clear, because the subject treated of is concerning life in that principle. How this case is, cannot be explained unless it be known how the case is with respect to the life of the rational principle and the life of the natural, or, what is the same thing, with the life of the internal man and the life of the external man. The life of the rational or the internal man is distinct from the life of the natural or external man, and indeed so distinct, that the life of the rational or internal man may exist beside the life of the natural or external man; but the life of the natural or the external man cannot exist without the life of the rational or internal; for the external man lives from the internal, insomuch, that if the life of the internal man should cease, the life of the external would be immediately destroyed; for exterior things depend on interior, as posterior things on prior, or as the effect on the efficient cause, for if the efficient cause should cease, the effect would immediately be void; such is the relation between the life of the external man and the life of the internal. This is evident from the case of man, for while he is in this world, or lives in the body, his rational principle is distinct from the natural, insomuch that man may be drawn from the sensual external principles which are of his body, and also in some degree from the interior sensual principles, which are of his natural man, and be in his rational principle, thus in spiritual thought. This may still be more evident from this consideration, that when a man dies, he altogether leaves his sensual external principles which are of the body, and then retains the life of his interior man; yea also that the scientifics, which are of the external or natural memory, he has still with him, but does not enjoy them, see n. 2475, 2476, 2477, 2479, 2480, 2481, 2482, 2483, 2485, 2486; whence it is manifest, that the rational or internal man is distinct from the external. But during man's life in the body, his rational principle does not appear distinct from his natural, by reason that he is in the world, or in nature, and this being the case, the rational life appears in the natural, insomuch that there does not appear to be any life in the rational principle, unless it be in the natural at the same time; that life only appears to be in the rational principle, so far as it corresponds with the natural, may be seen above, n. 3493. Hence it may be manifest, that it is life corresponding in the natural principle, which is signified by these words of Isaac unto Esau, "I know not the day of my death;" for the rational principle is represented by Isaac, and the natural by Esau, each as to good therein.

3499. "And now take, I pray, thy weapons, thy quiver, and thy bow"—that hereby are signified the doctrinals of good which he had, appears from the signification of weapons, quiver, and bow, as denoting doctrinals, see n. 2686, 2709, in the present case the doctrinals of good which he had, namely, the good of the natural principle, which is represented by Esau.

3500. "And go into the field"—that hereby is signified where the ground is good, is evident from the signification of field, as denoting the good of the Church, also the good of doctrine, concerning which, see n. 2971, 3196, 3310, 3317, thus good ground.

3501. "And hunt me venison"—that hereby is signified the truth of good, is manifest from the signification of hunting, and of venison, as denoting the truth of the natural [principle], from whence is the good of life, concerning which, see n. 3309; hence it means truth which is of good, because it is said to Esau, by whom is represented the good of the natural [principle], as has been observed above.

3502. "And make me savoury meat, as I have loved"—that hereby are signified pleasant things thence arising because from good, is clear from the signification of savoury meat, as denoting pleasant things; and as these are from Esau, by whom is represented the good of the natural [principle], therefore they are from good. Savoury meats in the original language are the delights and pleasantnesses of taste, and signify, in the internal sense, the delights which are of good, and the pleasantnesses which are of truth, because the taste, as well as the other senses of the body, corresponds to celestial and spiritual things, of which correspondence, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, we shall treat hereafter. It cannot be known how the case herein is, unless it be known in what manner the natural principle is made new, or receives life from the rational, i.e. from the Lord through the rational. The natural principle is not made new, or receives life corresponding with the rational, that is, is not regenerated, unless by doctrinals, or the knowledges of good and truth; the celestial man by the knowledges of good first, but the spiritual man by the knowledges of truth first. Doctrinals, or the knowledges of good and truth, cannot be communicated to the natural man, thus cannot be conjoined and appropriated unless by delights and pleasantnesses accommodated to him, for they are insinuated by an external or sensual way; whatsoever does not enter by some delight or pleasantness does not inhere, thus does not continue. These are the things which are signified by the truth of good, and the pleasantnesses thence derived, and these are the things which are treated of in what follows?

3503. "Bring it to me that I may eat"—that hereby is signified appropriation, is clear from the meaning of eating, as denoting appropriation, concerning which, see n. 2187, 2343, 3168.

3504. "To the intent that my soul may bless thee"—that hereby is signified adjunction to his life, consequently life corresponding to the rational, is clear from the meaning of blessing, as denoting to be gifted with celestial and spiritual good, concerning which see n. 981, 1731, 2846, 3017, 3406. For the good of infancy, and thence of life, which is the same as the good of the natural principle, and which is represented by Esau, is not spiritual good, for the good of infancy is without science, and without intelligence, and thus without wisdom; the good of infancy becomes spiritual good by the implantation of truth, thus by regeneration, see n. 1616, 1802, 2280, 2290, 2291, 2299, 2304, 2305, 2307, 3494; hence the correspondence between natural and rational things, consequently the adjunction of the natural man to the life of the rational; this adjunction to its life is what is meant by these words, that my soul may bless thee.

3505. "Before I die"—that hereby is signified the first state of resuscitation in the natural [principle], is clear from the signification of dying, as denoting to rise again, or to be raised up into life, concerning which see n. 3326, 3498. That this is the first state, is clear from this consideration, that the good of infancy, and thence the good of life, is that which is the first of regeneration; which state is heretofore represented by Esau. The following states are what are treated of in a series in this chapter.

3506. Verses 5, 6, 7. And Rebecca heard as Isaac was speaking to Esau his son, and Esau went into the field to hunt for venison, to bring it, and Rebecca said unto Jacob her son, saying, behold I heard thy father speaking unto thy brother Esau, saying, bring me venison, and make me savoury meat; and I will eat and bless thee before Jehovah, before my death. Rebecca heard as Isaac was speaking to Esau his son, signifies the affection of truth, and life from it. And Esau went into the field to hunt for venison, to bring it, signifies the endeavour of the affection of good to procure truth, which might be adjoined to the Divine rational principle. And Rebecca said to Jacob her son, saying, signifies the perception of the Lord from Divine Truth concerning natural truth. Behold I heard thy father speaking unto thy brother Esau, saying, signifies that the Divine Good of the Divine Rational principle willed the affection of good. Bring me venison, signifies the truth of good. And make me savoury meat, signifies desire and delight arising from the pleasantness thence derived. And I will eat, signifies appropriation thus. And I will bless thee before Jehovah, signifies conjunction thereby. Before my death, signifies thus life in the natural principle.

3507. "Rebecca heard as Isaac was speaking to Esau his son"—that hereby is signified the affection of truth, and life from it, is clear from the representation of Rebecca, as denoting the Divine Rational of the Lord with respect to Divine Truth conjoined with the Divine Good therein, thus denoting the very affection of truth; and from the signification of hearing Isaac speak, as denoting life from thence; for to hear speak, in the internal sense, is influx, by reason that to hear, in a representative sense, is to obey, see n. 2542; and to speak is to will and to flow into, see n. 2626, 2951, 3037; thus in the supreme sense, hearing speak is life from thence, namely, the life of the Divine Truth from Divine Good; to her son, in the internal sense, denotes concerning the good of the natural [principle], and thence the truth of the natural principle. That this is the sense of these words, does not so plainly appear, because it is in some measure removed from the sense of the letter, which is historical; nevertheless so it is; for angelic ideas are altogether different from those of men; angelic ideas are spiritual, and when they go more inward, they are celestial; but human ideas are natural, and when derived from things historical, are sensual. Howbeit, such a correspondence is established by the Lord through the Word, between the spiritual things which are of heaven, and the natural things which are of the world, that natural ideas may be changed into spiritual, and this in a moment; hence there is conjunction of heaven with the world by man, and indeed by the Word, consequently by the Church in which is the Word. That there is a correspondence of natural and spiritual things in all and everything which can be conceived or perceived, will be made clear by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, from the things related from experience concerning the Grand Man at the end of the chapters following.

3508. "And Esau went into the field to hunt for venison, to bring it"—that hereby is signified the endeavour of the affection of good to procure truth which might be joined to the Divine Rational, is clear from the representation of Esau, as denoting the good of the natural [principle], concerning which see above; hence it denotes the affection of the good of the rational principle in the natural. For the good which is in the natural, is not of the natural, but is of the rational in the natural, see n. 3498; and from the signification of going into the field to hunt for venison, to bring it, as denoting an endeavour to procure truth to itself, for a field is that where there is good ground, see n. 3500; venison is truth which is from good, see n. 3501; to bring it, is to procure it, thus to adjoin it to the Divine Rational principle. The subject here treated of, as was above observed, in the supreme sense is concerning the Glorification of the Lord's natural principle; and in the representative sense concerning the regeneration of the natural [principle] in man, see n. 3490. It is according to order that this should be accomplished by truth, that is, by the knowledges of good and truth, for without them, the natural principle cannot be enlightened from the rational, or by the rational; thus it cannot be regenerated, knowledges being the recipient vessels of good and truth flowing from the rational; according to the quality and quantity which the vessels receive, such is the illumination. The vessels which receive good and truth from the rational principle, are the very truths of the natural, which are only scientifics, knowledges, and doctrinals. From the order of those things which flow in, and from the order of those things which are there among themselves, goods are effected; hence the good of the natural principle.

3509. "And Rebecca said unto Jacob her son"—that hereby is signified the perception of the Lord from Divine Truth concerning natural truth, is clear from the representation of Rebecca, which is the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational of the Lord, concerning which see n. 3012, 3013, 3077; and from the signification of saying, as denoting to perceive, concerning which see n. 1791, 1815, 1819, 1822, 1898, 1919, 2080, 2506, 2515, 2552, 2619; and from the representation of Jacob, as denoting the natural [principle] of the Lord in respect of truth, concerning which see n. 3305. Hence it is clear, that by "Rebecca saying unto Jacob her son" is signified the perception of the Lord from the Divine Truth concerning natural truth. That the Lord, from the Divine Good of the Divine rational, which is represented by Isaac, was willing to procure truth to Himself by the good of the natural [principle], which is represented by Esau, whereby He might glorify or make His natural [principle] Divine; or that the Lord from the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational principle, which is represented by Rebecca, was willing to procure truth unto Himself by the truth of the natural [principle], which is represented by Jacob, by which the rational might be glorified, or made Divine, cannot be comprehended, unless it be illustrated by those things which exist in man, whilst he is regenerating or creating anew by the Lord; nor indeed even by this, unless it be known how the case is with the rational principle in respect of good and truth therein; wherefore we shall speak a few words on this subject. The rational mind is distinguished into two faculties, one of which is called the will, the other the understanding. That which proceeds from the will, whilst man is regenerating, is called good; that which proceeds from the understanding is called truth. Before man is regenerated, the will does not act in unity with the understanding, but the former wills good, whereas the latter wills truth, insomuch that a tendency of the will is perceived distinct from the tendency of the understanding. This, however, is only perceived by those who reflect and know what the will is and the things which belong to it, and what the understanding is and the things which belong to it; but it is not perceived by those who do not know these things, and therefore who do not reflect; and because the natural mind is regenerated by the rational mind, as may be seen, n. 3493, and this according to order, in such a sort, that the good of the rational does not immediately flow into the good of the natural and regenerate it, but through the truth which is of the understanding, thus according to appearance from the truth of the rational. These are the things which are treated of in this chapter in the internal sense; for Isaac is the rational mind with respect to good, which is of the will; Rebecca is the same with respect to truth which is of the understanding; Esau is the good of the natural principle existing from the good of the rational; Jacob is the truth of the natural principle existing from the good of the rational by the truth which is therein. From these particulars it may appear what arcana are contained in the internal sense of the Word; but still there are very few which can be explained to human apprehension; whilst those which transcend the human intellect, and cannot be explained, are indefinite; for in proportion as the Word penetrates deeper, that is, more interiorly into heaven, in the same proportion the arcana become more indefinite, and also inexpressible, not only before man, but also before the angels of an inferior heaven, and when they go to the inmost heaven, the angels there perceive that they are infinite, and altogether incomprehensible by them, because they are Divine. Such is the nature of the Word.

3510. "Behold I heard thy father speak unto Esau thy brother, saying"—that hereby is signified that the Divine Good of the Divine Rational principle willed the affection of good, is clear from the representation of Isaac, who is here the father, as denoting the Divine Good of the Divine Rational principle, concerning which see above; and from the signification of speaking, as denoting to will, concerning which see n. 2626, 2951, 3037; and from the representation of Esau, as denoting the affection of good in the natural [principle], concerning which see above, n. 3508.

3512. "And make me savoury meat"—that hereby is signified desire and delight derived from the pleasantness thence arising, is clear from the signification of savoury meat, as denoting pleasantness, concerning which see above, n. 3502, thus denoting desire and delight derived from the pleasantness thence arising, viz. from truth. For in the above passage it is said, that truths are introduced into the natural [principle] of man by the pleasant things agreeing therewith, and those which are not so introduced, do not adhere, and thus are not conjoined to the rational principle by correspondence. Truths also, like all other scientifics, have their place in the memory which belongs to the natural man, according to the agreeablenesses and delights which introduced them, as is evident from this consideration, that when those pleasantnesses and delights return, the things also return, which were introduced by them; and vice versa, when the things are recalled, at the same time the delights or pleasantnesses are excited to which they are adjoined.

3513. "And I will eat"—that hereby is signified appropriation thus, is clear from the signification of eating as denoting to appropriate, concerning which see n. 2187, 2343, 3168, 3503. Appropriation is effected, when truths or the knowledges of good and truth, are insinuated by pleasantnesses and delights into the natural [principle], and when these truths are there adjoined to good, then there is effected a communication between truth and good of the rational principle, thus with the rational principle, and this communication is what is called appropriation, for such truth and good are of the rational principle in the natural; for the things which are in the rational principle with respect to those which are in the natural, are as particulars in respect to generals. It is a known thing that particulars compose generals, and that without particulars no generals could exist; the general of the particulars of the rational principle, is what is exhibited in the natural, and inasmuch as it is a general [or common principle,] it appears under another form, and this according to the order of the particulars which compose it, thus according to the form thence derived. If the singulars and consequent particulars of celestial good and spiritual truth are what form the general in the natural principle, in this case there exists a celestial and spiritual form, and in a certain image there is represented something of heaven in the singulars of the general. But if the singulars and particulars are not of good and truth, but of what is evil and false, which form the generals in the natural principle, in this case there is represented in an image something of hell in the singulars of the general. Such things also are signified by eating and drinking in the holy supper, where likewise by eating and drinking is signified appropriation; namely, by eating, the appropriation of good; and by drinking, the appropriation of truth. If good, that is, love to the Lord, and charity towards our neighbour, form the internal or rational man, and by this the external or natural man corresponding with it, then man becomes in particular and in general an image of heaven, consequently an image of the Lord. But if on the other hand contempt of the Lord, and of the good and truth of faith, and hatred towards our neighbour form the internal man, in this case man becomes in particular and in general, an image of hell; and especially if at the same time he is in external sanctity, for hence comes profanation; thus it is that to those who eat and drink worthily, eternal life is appropriated, but that they who eat and drink unworthily, appropriate death unto themselves.

3514. "And will bless thee before Jehovah"—that hereby is signified conjunction thus, is clear from the signification of blessing thee, as denoting adjunction to his life, of which see above, n. 3504; and whereas it is here said, I will bless thee before Jehovah, it denotes conjunction. Adjunction is predicated of the communication of the truth of the natural principle with the good of the rational; but conjunction is predicated of the communication of the good of the natural principle with the good of the rational; for parallelism between the Lord and man is given as to the celestial things which are of good, not as to the spiritual things which are of truth, see n. 1832.

3516. Verses 8, 9, 10. And now, my son, hearken unto my voice, to that which I command thee. Go I pray unto the flock, and take for me thence two good kids of the goats, and I will make them savoury meat for thy father, as he loveth; and bring it to thy father, and let him eat, to the intent that he may bless thee before his death. Now my son hearken unto my voice, to that which I command thee, signifies the desire and the delight perceived from the Divine Truth in the Divine Rational principle towards natural truth. Go, I pray, to the flock, signifies to natural domestic good not conjoined with the Divine Rational principle. And take for me thence two good kids of the goats, signifies the truths of that good. And I will make them savoury meat for thy father as he loves, signifies that he should thence make delights. And bring it to thy father and let him eat, signifies to the Divine Good of the Divine Rational principle, and appropriation. That he may bless thee, signifies conjunction thereby. Before his death, signifies resuscitation in the natural [principle.]

3517. "And now, my son, hearken unto my voice, to that which I shall command thee"—that hereby is signified desire and delight perceived from the Divine Truth in the Divine Natural principle towards natural truth, is clear from the representation of Rebecca who speaks these things, as denoting the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational principle, concerning which see above; and from the representation of Jacob, to whom these things are said, as denoting natural truth, of which see also above; that it is desire and delight, is clear without explanation.

natural domestic good not conjoined with the Divine Rational principle, is clear from the signification of flock, as denoting good, n. 343, 415, 1565, in this place natural good, because it is spoken to Jacob, and this domestic, because it was at home [or in the house]; whereas the field whence Esau brought his venison, by whom the good of the natural [principle] is signified, n. 3500, 3508, was good not domestic. In other cases flock in the Word is predicated of the good of the rational principle, but in such cases herd is predicated of the good of the natural, n. 2566. Natural domestic good is that good which a man receives from his parents, or that in which he is born, very distinct from the good of the natural principle which flows in from the Lord. The nature and quality of natural good may be seen, n. 3470, 2471; wherefore for distinction's sake the one is called the good of the natural [principle], but the other natural good. Besides every man receives domestic good from his father and from his mother, which goods are also distinct in themselves; that which he receives from the father is interior; that from the mother is exterior. In the Lord, these goods were most distinct, for the good which He had from the Father, was Divine; but that which He had from the mother was contaminated with hereditary evil. That good in the natural principle, which the Lord had from the Father, was His proprium, because it was His very Life, and is that which is represented by Esau; whereas the natural good which the Lord derived from the mother, because it was contaminated with hereditary evil, was evil in itself, and this is what is understood by domestic good; this good, notwithstanding it's being of such a quality, yet was serviceable for the reformation of the natural principle, but when it had answered this end, it was rejected. The case is the same with every man who is regenerated; the good, which he receives from the Lord as from a new father, is interior, but the good which he derives from his parents is exterior. The former good, which he receives from the Lord, is called spiritual, but the latter which he derives from his parents is called natural good. This latter good, namely, that which he derives from his parents, is serviceable first of all for his reformation, for by that, as by something pleasing and agreeable, scientifics are introduced, and afterwards the knowledges of truth; but when it has served as a means for this use, then it is separated, and in this case spiritual good comes into view, and manifests itself. This may appear evident from much experience, as from this single consideration, that when a child is first instructed, he is affected with the desire of knowing, at first not for any end manifest unto himself, but from a certain pleasure and delight connate therewith, and arising from other causes. Afterwards as he grows up, he is affected with the desire of knowing on account of some end, viz. that he may excel others, or his rivals; then for some end [or advantage] in the world; but when he is about to be regenerated, he is affected from the delight and pleasantness of truth, and whilst he is regenerating, which is accomplished in mature age, then from the love of truth, and afterwards from the love of good. The ends in this case, which were formerly purposed, and their delights, are separated by little and little, and are succeeded by interior good from the Lord, which manifests itself in his affection; hence it is clear, that the former delights, which appeared in an external form as good, served for means. Such successions of means are continual. The case herein is comparatively like that of a tree, which in it's first age or the beginning of spring, adorns it's branches with leaves, afterwards as it's age or the spring advances, it decorates them with flowers, and next in the summer puts forth the first germs of fruits, which in process of time become fruit, and lastly it produces seeds therein, which contain in them new trees like the parent stock, and indeed whole orchards as to the power of production, and in reality of produce in case the seeds are sown. Such are the comparatives existing in nature, which also are representative; for universal nature is a theatre representative of the kingdom of the Lord in the heavens, hence of the kingdom of the Lord in the earths, or in the Church, and hence of the kingdom of the Lord in every regenerate man. From these considerations it is evident how natural or domestic good, although it is mere external delight, and indeed of a worldly nature, may serve as a means of producing the good of the natural [principle], which may join itself with the good of the rational, and thus become regenerate or spiritual good, that is, good which is from the Lord. These are the things which are represented and signified by Esau and Jacob in this chapter.

3519. "And bring me thence two good kids of the goats"—that hereby are signified the truths of that good, is clear from the meaning of kids of the goats, as denoting the truths of good, of which we shall speak presently; the reason of their being two is, because as in the rational principle, so also in the natural, there are things appertaining to the will and to the understanding; the things in the natural principle which appertain to the will are delights, and those which appertain to the understanding are scientifics; these two must be conjoined in order that they may be something. That kids of the goats denote the truths of good, may appear from those passages of the Word where kids and goats are mentioned. It is to be noted, that all the tame and useful beasts which are named in the Word, signify, in the genuine sense, the celestial things of good, and the spiritual things of truth, as may be seen, n. 45, 46, 142, 143, 246, 714, 715, 2180, 2781, 3218; and because there are various kinds of celestial things or goods, and consequently various kinds of spiritual things or truths, one kind is signified by one beast, and another kind by another, thus one kind is signified by a lamb, another by a kid, another by a sheep, by a she-goat, by a he-goat, by a ram, by a cow, by an ox; another also by a horse and by a camel; another likewise by birds; and also another by the beasts of the sea, as by whales, and by fishes. There are more kinds of celestial and spiritual things than can be numbered, consequently of goods and truths, although when the celestial principle or good is named, as also the spiritual principle or truth, it appears not manifold, but a simple oneness; but how manifold they both are, or how innumerable their kinds are, may be evident from the things which are said concerning heaven, n. 3241, namely, that it is distinguished into innumerable societies, and this according to the kinds of celestial and spiritual things, or of the goods of love and thence of the truths of faith; and moreover every singular kind of good, and every singular kind of truth, has innumerable species, into which the societies of each kind are distinguished, and every species in like manner. The most universal kinds of good and truth, are what were represented by the animals which were offered in burnt-offerings and sacrifices; and because the kinds are most distinct in themselves, it is expressly enjoined that such and no other should be offered; in some cases, for instance, male and female lambs, also male and female kids; in some cases rams and sheep, and also goats, but in others calves, heifers, and oxen; also pigeons and turtle doves, as may be seen, n. 922, 1823, 2180, 2805, 2807, 2830, 3218. What male and female kids signified, may appear both from the sacrifices in which they were offered, and also from other passages in the Word; whence it is evident, that male and female lambs signified the innocence of the internal or rational man, and that male and female kids signified the innocence of the external or natural man; thus the truth and good thereof. That the truth and good of the innocence of the external or natural man is signified by male and female kids, is clear from these passages in the Word. In Isaiah, "The wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid, the calf also, and the young lion, and the sheep together, and a little child shall lead them," xi. 6; the subject here treated of is concerning the Lord's kingdom, and therein concerning a state of no fear from evil, or of no dread from hell, because appertaining to the Lord; the lamb and the kid denote those who are in innocence, and because these are the safest of all, therefore they are first named. When all the first-born of Egypt were smitten, it was enjoined, that they should slay cattle perfect and male, of the lambs or of the kids, and should put the blood on the posts and upon the threshold of the houses, and thus they should not be smitten with the plague, Exod. xii. 5, 7, 13; the first-born of Egypt is the good of love and charity extinct, n. 3325; lambs and kids are states of innocence, in which they who are principled are defended from evil, for all in heaven by states of innocence are defended of the Lord, and this defence was represented by the slaying of a lamb or kid, and the blood upon the door and threshold of the houses. When Jehovah appeared to any one by an angel, a kid of the goats was sacrificed, lest he should die, as when He appeared to Gideon, Judges vi. 19; and to Manoah, Judges xiii. 15, 16, 19; the reason was, because Jehovah, or the Lord, could not appear to any, not even to an angel, unless he, to whom He appeared, was in a state of innocence; wherefore as soon as the Lord is present with the angels, they are let into a state of innocence, for the Lord enters by innocence, even with the angels in heaven; it is on this account that no one can come into heaven unless he has somewhat of innocence, according to the words of the Lord in Matthew, chap. xviii. 3; Mark x. 15; Luke xviii. 17. That they believed that they should die when Jehovah appeared, unless they offered a burnt-offering, may be seen, Judges xiii. 22, 23. Inasmuch as genuine conjugal love is innocence, see n. 2736, therefore it was a solemn rite in the representative Church, to enter in unto a wife by a present of a kid of the goats, as is written of Sampson, Judges xv. 1; likewise of Judah when he went in unto Thamar, Gen. xxxviii. 17, 20, 23. That a kid and a she-goat signified innocence, is also clear from the sacrifices of guilt, which were offered when any one had sinned through error, Levit. i. 10; chap. xiv. 28; chap. v. 6; sin through error is a sin of ignorance, in which is innocence. The same is clear from the Divine Command in Moses, "The first-fruits of the first-fruits of thy land thou shalt bring to the house of Jehovah thy God, thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk," Exod. xxiii. 19; chap. xxxiv. 26; where by the first-fruits of the land, which they should bring to the house of Jehovah, is signified the state of innocence which is in infancy; and by not seething a kid in it's mother's milk is signified that they should not destroy the innocence of infancy; because these things are signified, one command follows the other directly in both the passages quoted, which in the literal sense appear to be altogether different, but in the internal sense cohere. Because kids and she-goats signify innocence, as has been said, it was also commanded, that the curtain over the habitation of the tabernacle should be made of the wool of female kids, Exod. xxv. 4; chap. xxvi. 7; chap. xxiii. 26; chap. xxxv. 5, 6; chap. xxxvi. 14; for a sign that all the holy things, which were therein represented, derived their essence from innocence; by the wool of goats is signified the ultimate or the outermost principle of innocence, which is in ignorance, such as has place among the Gentiles, which in the internal sense are the curtains of the tabernacle. Hence then it is manifest, what and of what quality the truths of good are which are signified by the two good kids of the goats, concerning which Rebecca the mother spoke unto Jacob her son; viz. that they are grounded in innocence or infancy, or those which Esau was to bring to his father Isaac, concerning which see above, n. 3501, 3508; which indeed were not Jacob's, but appeared so in the beginning; and hence it is, that by these Jacob pretended to be Esau.

3520. "And I will make savoury meat for thy father, as he loveth"—that hereby is signified that thence he should make delights, is clear from the signification of savoury meats, as denoting agreeableness from good, of which see above, n. 3502, here they are called delights, because they are truths not from genuine good, but from domestic good, n. 3518.

3521. "And bring to thy father, and let him eat"—that hereby is signified to the Divine Good of the Divine Rational principle, and appropriation, is clear from the representation of Isaac, in the present case the father, as denoting the Divine Good of the Divine Rational principle, of which see above; and from the signification of eating, as denoting appropriation, of which see above, n. 3513; but that truth from domestic good is not appropriated, will be clear from the things which follow.

3522. "To the intent that he may bless thee"—that hereby is signified conjunction thus, is clear from the signification of blessing, as denoting conjunction, see n. 3504, 3514.

3524. Verses 11, 12, 13. And Jacob said unto Rebecca his mother, behold my brother Esau is a hairy man, and I am a smooth man. Perhaps my father may feel me, and I shall be in his eyes as one who seduceth, and I shall bring a curse upon me, and not a blessing. And his mother said unto him, upon me be thy curse my son, only hearken unto my voice, go, and take for me. Jacob said unto Rebecca his mother, signifies the Lord's perception from Divine Truth concerning natural truth. Behold Esau my brother is a hairy man, signifies the quality of natural good respectively. And I am a smooth man, signifies the quality of natural truth respectively. Perhaps my father may feel me, signifies an inmost degree of perception. And I shall be in his eyes as one who seduceth, signifies rejection, because apparently contrary to order. And I shall bring upon myself a curse and not a blessing, signifies disjunction. And his mother said unto him, signifies perception from Divine Truth. Upon me be thy curse, my son, signifies that there would be no disjunction. Only hearken unto my voice, and go, take for me, signifies from the effect.

3525. "And Jacob said unto Rebecca his mother"—that hereby is signified the Lord's perception from Divine Truth concerning natural truth, is clear from the signification of saying in the historical parts of the Word, as denoting to perceive, see n. 3509; and from the representation of Jacob, as denoting natural truth, n. 3305; and from the representation of Rebecca, as denoting the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational of the Lord, n. 3012, 3013, 3077. The reason why perception from Divine Truth concerning natural truth is signified, not perception from natural truth concerning Divine Truth, according to appearance from the sense of the letter, is, because all apperception, which is of the natural principle, is from the rational; in the present case therefore, as being predicated of the Lord, it is from the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational principle.

3526. "Behold Esau my brother is a hairy man"—that hereby is signified the quality of natural good respectively, is clear from the representation of Esau, as denoting the good of the natural principle, of which see n. 3494, 3504; and from the signification of a hairy man, as denoting the quality of it, viz. of good: that hairy signifies the natural [principle] especially respecting truth, may be seen n. 3301, and from what now follows.

3527. "And I am a smooth man"—that hereby is signified the quality of natural truth respectively, is clear from the representation of Jacob, who is here the person who speaks, as denoting the natural [principle] as to truth, of which see n. 3305, and from the signification of a smooth man, as denoting it's quality, of which we shall speak presently. Before it can be known what these things signify, it must be known what is meant by hairy, and what by smooth; the interiors in man exhibit themselves in a certain image in his exteriors, especially in his face and countenance. His inmost principles do not appear therein at this day, but his interiors do in some measure, unless from infancy he has learned to dissemble, for in this case he assumes to himself as it were another soul, and consequently induces another countenance, inasmuch as it is the soul which appears in the face; hypocrites, more than others have acquired this habit from actual life, thus from custom, and this so much the more, as they are more deceitful; with those who are not hypocrites, rational good appears in their face from a certain fire of life, and rational truth from the light of this fire; man knows these things from a certain innate science, without study, for it is the life of his spirit as to good and as to truth, which thus manifests itself, and because man is a spirit clothed with a body, he has such knowledge from the perception of his spirit, thus from himself; hence it is, that at times man is affected by the countenance of another, although this is not from the countenance, but from the mind which thus shines forth through it; whereas the natural principle appears in the face in a more obscure fire of life, and a more obscure light of life; but the corporeal principle scarce [appears] unless in the warmth and fairness of the complexion, and in the change of their states according to the affections. Inasmuch as the interiors thus manifest themselves in the face especially, as in an image, therefore the most ancient people, who were celestial men, and altogether ignorant of dissimulation, and much more of hypocrisy and deceit, were able to see the minds of one another conspicuous in the face, as in a form, and therefore by the face were signified the things of the will and understanding, or the interior rational principles with respect to good and truth, see n. 358, 1999, 2434, and indeed those interior things with respect to good by the blood and its redness, and the interior things respecting truths by the form thence resulting, and its fairness; but the interior natural things by the excrescences thence arising, such as are the hairs and the scales of the skin, viz. the things from the natural principle that have reference to good by the hairs, and the things from the natural principle which refer to truth by the scales; of course they who were in natural good, were called hairy men; but they who were in natural truth, smooth men; from these considerations it may appear what is meant in the internal sense by these words, "My brother Esau is a hairy man, and I am a smooth man," viz. the quality of natural good respectively, and the quality of natural truth respectively. Hence also it is evident what Esau represents, namely, the good of the natural [principle], for Esau is so called from being hairy, see Gen. xxv. 25; and Edom from being ruddy, Gen. xxv. 30. Mount Seir, where he dwelt, signifies also the same, namely, what is shaggy; and because it had this signification, there was a mountain by which they went up to Seir, which is called a smooth mountain, see Josh. xi. 17; chap. xii. 7; which was also representative of truth ascending to good. That hairy is predicated of good, and thence of truth, and also in an opposite sense of evil, and thence of what is false, may be seen n. 3301; but that smooth is predicated of truth, and in an opposite sense of what is false, is clear from these passages in the Word, in Isaiah, "Waxing warm with their gods under every green tree, in the smooth things of the valley is thy portion," chap. lvii. 5, 6; where to wax warm is predicated of evil, and the smooth things of the valley of what is false. Again in the same prophet, "The smith strengthens the melter, smoothing the hammer with the stroke of the anvil, saying to the joining, it is good," chap. xli. 7; where the smith strengthening the melter is predicated of evil, and smoothing the hammer of what is false. So in David, "They make thy mouth smooth with butter, when his heart approaches, [his] words are softer than oil," Psalm lv. 22, where a smooth or alluring mouth is predicated of what is false, and the heart, and thence soft things of what is evil. Again, "Their throat is an open sepulchre, they speak smooth things with their tongue," Psalm v. 10; the throat an open sepulchre is predicated of evil, the tongue speaking smooth things of what is false. So in Luke, "Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be humbled; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain ways," iii. 4; where valley denotes what is lowly, see n. 1723, 3417; mountain and hill what is elated, see n. 1691; the crooked made straight, denotes the evil of ignorance turned into good, for length, and the things relating thereto, are predicated of good, n. 1613; the rough places made into plain ways, denotes the falses of ignorance turned into truths; that way is predicated of truth, see n. 627, 2333.

3528. "Perhaps my father may feel me"—that hereby is signified the inmost degree of perception, is clear from the signification of feeling, and thus of being made sensible, as denoting the inmost and the all of perception; and from the signification of father, as denoting good, in the present case Divine Good, because it treats of the Lord. That to feel is the inmost and the all of perception, is from this ground, because all sensation has reference to the sense of touch, and the touch is derived and exists from perception, for sensation is nothing else than external perception, and perception is nothing else than internal sensation. The nature of perception may be seen, n. 104, 371, 495, 503, 521, 536, 1383 to 1398, 1616, 1919, 2145, 2171, 2831. Moreover all sensation and all perception, although it appears so various, has yet reference to one common and universal sense, namely, the touch; the varieties, as the taste, the smell, the hearing, and the sight, which are external sensations, are no other than the genera thereof, arising from the internal sensation, that is from the perception; this might be confirmed by much experience, but of this, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, we shall treat in its proper place. Hence it is clear, that to feel is the inmost and the all of perception. Moreover all perception, that is internal sensation, exists from good, but not from truth, unless from good by truth, for the Divine Life of the Lord flows into good, and through good into truth, and thus produces perception; hence it may appear what is signified by this expression, "If my father shall feel me," viz. the inmost and the all of perception from good, thus from the Divine [principle] of the Lord.

3529. "And I shall be in his eyes as one seducing"—that hereby is signified rejection because apparently contrary to order, is clear from the signification of being in his eyes, as denoting apperception of the quality, for by the eye is signified apperception of the internal sight, see n. 212, 2701, 2789, 2829, 3198, 3202; and from the signification of seducing, or seducer, as being contrary to order, in the present case apparently; all seduction is nothing else; and hence would be rejection. But what is signified by being apparently contrary to order, will appear evident from what follows.

3530. "And I shall bring upon me a curse and not a blessing"—that hereby is signified disjunction, is clear from the signification of curse, as denoting disjunction or aversion from good, see n. 245, 379, 1423; and from the signification of blessing, as denoting conjunction with good, see n. 3504, 3514.

3531. "And his mother said unto him"—that hereby is signified perception from Divine Truth, is clear from the signification of saying, as denoting to perceive, of which mention has been often made above; and from the representation of Rebecca, here the mother, as denoting the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational of the Lord, concerning which see n. 3012, 3013.

3532. "Upon me be thy curse, my son"—that hereby is signified that there should be no disjunction, is clear from the signification of curse, as denoting disjunction, see n. 3530; and whereas perception was from the Divine principle, see n. 3531, it signifies that there should be no disjunction.

3533. "Only hearken unto my voice, and go, take for me"—that hereby is signified from the effect, may be clear from the signification of hearkening to a voice, as denoting to obey; and from the signification of going and taking for me, as denoting to do; and because this is spoken to the natural [principle] as to truth, represented by Jacob, from the rational as to truth, in this place the Divine Rational, represented by Rebecca, wherefore nothing else is signified than from the effect; for the natural [principle] sees from the effect, whereas the rational sees from the cause.

3534. Verses 14, 15, 16, 17. And he went, and took, and brought to his mother, and his mother made savoury meat as his father loved. And Rebecca took goodly raiment [raiment of desires] of her elder son Esau, which were with her in the house, and put them upon Jacob, her younger son. And she made him put the skins of the kids of the goats upon his hands, and on the smooth of his neck. And she gave the savoury meat, and the bread, which she had made, into the hand of Jacob her son. And he went, and took, and brought to his mother, signifies a state of obedience of natural truth. And his mother made savoury meat as his father loved, signifies delectable things, but not desirable. And Rebecca took goodly raiment [raiment of desires] of her elder son Esau, signifies genuine truths of good. Which were with her in the house, signifies which were from the Divine Good by the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational principle. And she put them on Jacob her younger son, signifies the affection of truth, or the life of good from truth. And she made him put on the skins of the kids of the goats, signifies the external truths of domestic good. Upon his hands, signifies according to the faculty of receiving. And upon the smooth of his neck, signifies that disjoining truth should not appear. And she gave him savoury meat, signifies delectable things from thence. And bread, signifies good from thence. Which she had made, signifies which were from Divine Truth. Into the hand of Jacob her son, signifies that such was the affection of natural truth.

3535. "And he went, and took, and brought to his mother"—that hereby is signified a state of obedience of natural truth, may appear from what was said above, n. 3533, thus without further explication.

3536. "And his mother made savoury meat as his father loved"—that hereby are signified delectable things, but not desirable, appears from the representation of Rebecca, who here is mother, as denoting the Divine Rational [principle] as to truth; and from the signification of savoury meats, as denoting the agreeable things which are of truth, of which see above, n. 3502. The reason why the delectable things here spoken of are not desirable, is, because they are not from the hunting of Esau, that is, from the truth of genuine good, see n. 3501, but from the kids of the goats which are of the flock, that is, from the truth of domestic good, see n. 3518, 3519. How these things are, may be clearly understood from what was said above, n. 3502, 3512, 3518, 3519.

3537. "And Rebecca took goodly raiment [raiment of desires] of her elder son Esau"—that hereby are signified genuine truths of good, is clear from the signification of goodly raiment [raiment of desires], as denoting genuine truths; that raiment denotes inferior truths respectively, may be seen, n. 2576; raiment of desires denotes genuine truths, because of genuine natural good, which is represented by Esau the elder son, see n. 3300, 3302, 3322, 3494, 3504, 3527.

3538. "Which were with her in the house"—that hereby is signified which were from the Divine Good by the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational principle, is clear from the representation of Rebecca, who is here understood by her, as denoting the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational [principle], of which see above; and from the signification of house, as here denoting the Divine Good, because it is predicated of the Lord; that house is good, may be seen, n. 710, 2233, 2234, 2559, 3128. The ground and reason why these things are signified by these words, which were with her in the house, is, because by house is signified the rational principle both as to good and as to truth; or, what is the same, both as to the will [principle], this being of good, and as to the understanding, this being of truth; when the rational acts from the will [principle] or good, by means of the intellectual [principle] or truth, then the rational mind is called one house; thence also heaven itself is called the house of God, because therein is nothing but good and truth; and the good acts by means of truth united and conjoined to itself. This also is represented in marriages between husband and wife who compose one house, by reason that conjugal love exists from the Divine marriage of good and truth, see n. 2728, 2729, 3132, and both the husband and wife have will from good, but with a difference like that of good in respect to it's truth, wherefore also good is signified by the husband, and truth by the wife, for when the house is one, then good is all therein, and truth, because it is of good, is also good. The reason why it is said, "with her in the house," not with him or with them, is, because the subject treated of is concerning the state of conjunction of truth and good, or concerning the state before they were fully united or conjoined; which state is next spoken of.

3539. "And she put [them] on Jacob her younger son"—that hereby is signified the affection of truth, or the life of good from truth, is clear from the representation of Rebecca, as denoting the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational [principle], and from the representation of Jacob, as denoting the Divine Truth of the Divine Natural [principle]; and from the signification of putting on, as here denoting to communicate, and to imbibe, namely, the truths of good which are signified by the garments of Esau, see n. 3537, thus the affection of natural truth, which is here the same with the life of good from truth. How these things are to be understood, may be known from what was said above, n. 3518; but because they are such things as are at this day most unknown, it may be proper to explain them further to common apprehension. The subject treated of in this chapter is concerning the Lord, how He made His natural [principle] Divine; and in a representative sense, concerning the regeneration of man as to his natural [principle], see n. 3490. The case herein with man is this; the end of regeneration is that man may be made new as to his internal man, thus as to his soul or spirit; but man cannot be made new or regenerated as to his internal man, unless also as to his external; for although man after death is a spirit, he nevertheless has with him in another life the things appertaining to his external man, viz. natural affections, and also doctrinals, and likewise scientifics, in a word, all things of the external or natural memory, see n. 2475 to 2483; for these are the planes in which his interiors are terminated. As these therefore are disposed, so interior things, when they flow in, are formed, for therein they are modified. Hence it is evident, that man ought not only to be regenerated or made new as to his internal or rational man, but also as to his external or natural man; and unless this was effected, there could be no correspondence. That there is a correspondence between the internal man and his spiritual [principle], and the external man and his natural [principle], may be seen, n. 2971, 2987, 2989, 2990, 3002, 3493. The state of the regeneration of man is described in a representative sense in this chapter by Esau and Jacob, and here his quality at first, viz. whilst he is regenerating, or before he is regenerated; for this state is plainly the inverse of that in which man is when he is regenerated: for in the former state, viz. whilst man is regenerating, or before he is regenerated, intellectual things, which are of truth, apparently act first; but when he is regenerated, then the things of the will, which are of good, act first. That the intellectual things, which are of truth, apparently act first in the first state, is represented by Jacob, in that he claimed the birth-right of Esau to himself, see n. 3325, 3336; also in that he claimed the blessing, which is here treated of; and that the state is plainly inverted, is represented by this circumstance, that Jacob feigned himself to be Esau, viz. in putting on the garments of Esau, and the skins of the kids of the goats; for in this state, rational truth, not so fully conjoined to rational good, or, what is the same, the understanding not so fully conjoined with the will, thus flows in, and acts upon the natural [principle], and thus inversely disposes the things which are therein. This may also be manifest from much experience, especially from this, that a man may perceive in the understanding, and the natural [principle] thence know many things which are good and true, but yet the will may not as yet act according to them: as for instance, that love and charity is the essential [principle] in man, this his intellectual faculty may see and confirm, but before he is regenerated, the will-principle cannot acknowledge it. There are those who have altogether no love to the Lord, and no charity to their neighbour, who are well able to comprehend this. In like manner, that love is the very life of man, and that as the love is, such is the life; and likewise that every thing pleasing and agreeable is from love, consequently all joy and all felicity; and of course, such as the love is, such is the joy and such the felicity. Man may also comprehend in his understanding, (although his will should dissent or even go contrary thereto,) that the happiest life is from love to the Lord and charity to our neighbour, because the essential Divine [principle] flows thereinto; and on the other hand, that the most miserable life is from self-love and the love of the world, because the essential infernal [principle] flows into it. Hence also it may be perceivable by the understanding, yet not by the will, that love to the Lord is the life of heaven, and that mutual love is the soul from that life; wherefore so far as a man does not think from the life of his will, nor reflects on his life thence derived, so far he perceives this in his understanding, but so far as he thinks from the life of his will, so far he does not perceive, nay denies.

The understanding may also clearly comprehend, that the Divine [principle] can only flow into man when he is humble, for this reason, because when he is in this state the loves of self and the world, and consequently infernal things which oppose, are removed; but yet, while the will is not new, and the understanding not united to such new will, man cannot be in humiliation of heart; yea, so far as a man is in the life of evil, that is, so far as his will is in evil, so far he cannot be in humiliation; and further, so far the above truth is obscure to him, and he even denies it. Hence also a man may perceive in his understanding, that his humiliation is not for the sake of the love of glory in the Lord, but for the sake of Divine Love, that the Lord with good and truth may thus flow in, and make man blessed and happy; nevertheless, so far as the will is consulted, so much this is obscured; the same is true in several other cases. This faculty, namely, that man may understand what is good and true, although he does not will it, is given to man in order that he may be reformed and regenerated; on which account both the good and bad have this faculty, yea, in the bad it is in some cases more acute, but with this difference, that in the bad there is no affection of truth on account of life, that is, for the good of life from truth, wherefore they cannot be reformed; but with the good there is an affection of truth for life, that is, for the good of life, and therefore these may be reformed. The first state of the reformation of these is, that the truth of doctrine appears to them to be in the first place, and the good of life in the second, for they do good from truth; but their second state is, that the good of life is in the first place, and the truth of doctrine in the second, for they do good from good, that is, from the will of good; and when this is the case, inasmuch as the will is conjoined to the understanding as in a marriage, man is regenerated. These two states are treated of in what is said of Esau and Jacob in the internal sense.

3540. "And she made him put on the skins of the kids of the goats"—that hereby are signified the external truths of domestic good, is clear from the signification of skins, as denoting external things, of which we shall speak presently; and from the signification of kids of the goats, because from the flock at home, as denoting truths of domestic good, of which see n. 3518, 3519; in which passages it is manifest also what is domestic good, and what the truths thence derived. Every particular good has its truths, and all truths have their good, which must be conjoined to each other in order that they may be something. The ground and reason why skins signify things external, is, because skins are the outermost principles of the animal, in which its interiors are terminated, in like manner as the skin or cuticles in man. This significative is grounded in what is representative in another life. There are in the other life those who refer to the province of the skin, concerning whom we shall treat, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, when we speak concerning the GRAND MAN at the end of the following chapters; they are such as are only in external good, and in it's truths; and hence the skin, and also the hide of beasts, signify things external, which is also manifest from the Word, as in Jeremiah, "Because of the multitude of thy iniquity, thy skirts are revealed, thy heels are violated; can the Ethiopian change his skin, and the leopard his spots? ye also may do good, who are taught to do evil," xiii. 22, 23. In this passage, skirts are external truths; heels, outermost goods. That heel and shoes are the lowest natural principles, may be seen, n. 259, 1748; and because those truths and goods were from evil, as it is said, they are compared to an Ethiopian, or a black, and his skin also to a leopard and it's spots. So in Moses, "If in pledging thou shalt have pledged unto thee the raiment of thy companion, thou shalt restore it unto him before the sun goes down, because this is his only covering; this his raiment is for the skin in which he shall lie down;" Exod. xxii. 25, 26. As all laws, even civil and forensic, which are in the Word, have correspondence with the laws of good and truth which are in heaven, and were thence enacted, so also this law, otherwise it would be impossible to discover why they should restore a pledged raiment before the sun set; and why it is said that his raiment is for the skin in which he shall lie down. The correspondence is manifest from the internal sense, which is this, that companions should not be defrauded of external truths, which are the doctrinals according to which they live, and rituals; that raiment denotes such truths, see n. 297, 1073, 2576. But the sun is the good of love, or of life which is thence, see n. 1529, 1530, 2441, 2495. That this should not perish, is signified by its being restored before the sun set; and because the above things are the externals of the interiors, or their terminations, therefore it is said, that his raiment is for a skin in which he should lie down. Because skins signified things external, "It was commanded that the covering of the tent should be of the skins of red rams, and over these the skins of badgers," Exod. xxvi. 14. For the tent was representative of the three heavens, thus of the celestial and spiritual things of the Lord's kingdom. The curtains, which were round about, represented natural things, which are external, see n. 3478, which are the skins of rams and the skins of badgers; and because external things are what cover internal, or natural things what cover things spiritual and celestial, as the body it's soul, therefore was this command given. In like manner that Aaron and his sons, when the camp proceeded, should cover the ark of the covenant with the veil of a covering, and should put upon it a covering, the skin of a badger; and upon the table, and the things which were upon it, should spread a cloth of scarlet double dyed, and should cover it with badger's skin, as a covering. Likewise they shall cover the candlestick and all it's vessels with a covering of badger's skin; and should put a cloth of blue over all the vessels of the ministry, and should cover them with a covering of badger's skin, Numb. iv. 5, 6, 8, 10, 11, 12. Whoever thinks religiously concerning the Word, may know that divine things are represented by all these particulars, as by the ark, the table, the candlestick, and the vessels of the ministry, so also by the coverings of scarlet double dyed and blue, and also by the coverings of the badger's skins, and that by these are represented Divine things which are in externals. Inasmuch as the prophets represented teachers, and thence the doctrine of good and truth from the Word, see n. 2534, and Elias the Word itself, see n. 2762, and in like manner John, who therefore is called the Elias that was to come, Matt. xvii. 10, 11, 12, 13; therefore that they might represent the Word, as it is in it's external form, that is, in the letter, Elias was girded with a girdle or skin round his loins, 2 Kings i. 8; and "John had a garment of camel's hair, and a girdle of skin round his loins," Matt. iii. 4. And whereas skin signified external things, which are natural things in respect of spiritual and celestial, and in the ancient Church it was customary to speak and write by representations, therefore also in Job, which is a book of the ancient Church, skin has the same signification, as may appear from several passages in that book, as for instance, "I know my Redeemer, He liveth, and at the last He shall arise over the dust, and these things shall be encompassed with my skin, and out of my flesh I shall see God," xix. 25, 26; where to be encompassed with skin, denotes the natural [principle], such as man has with him after death, concerning which see n. 3539: out of the flesh to see God, denotes from a vivified proprium; that this is flesh may be seen, n. 148, 149, 780. That the book of Job is a book of the ancient Church, is evident, as has been mentioned, from the representative and significative style in which it is written, but it is not of those books which are called the law and the prophets, because it has not an internal sense, which only treats of the Lord, and of His kingdom. It is this alone which makes a book of the genuine Word.

3542. "And upon the smooth of his neck"—that hereby is signified that disjoining truth should not appear, is evident from the predication of smooth or of smoothness, as having respect to truth, of which see n. 3527; and from the signification of neck, as denoting what conjoins, of which we shall speak presently; in the present case therefore, because the appearance was upon the smooth of his neck, it denotes that disjoining truth should not appear. How this case is, may appear from what was said and shewn above, n. 3539, viz. that the good, and the truths, which flow from the understanding, and not from the will at the same time, is not good, and are not truths, although they should appear so in the external form, and if the will is of evil, the good and the truths would disunite and not conjoin; but if there is anything of good in the will, in this case they do not disunite, but conjoin, although they be disposed in an inverted order, for thereby man is regenerated; and because when thus disposed, they serve first for the regeneration of man, it is said that thus disjoining truth should not appear; but more of this in what follows. The ground and reason why the neck signifies the conjoining [principle], is, because the superior things in man, which appertain to the head, communicate with the inferior things of his body by the interceding neck; hence both influx and communication, consequently conjunction, is signified by that intermediate [principle], as may still better appear from the correspondences of the GRAND MAN with the various parts of the human body, which are treated of at the conclusion of the chapters. The same is thence signified by the neck in the Word; as in Isaiah, “His spirit, like an inundating stream, will divide even to the neck,” xxx. 28; where inundating stream denotes the false principle thus overflowing; to divide even to the neck, denotes to check and to intercept communication, and thence the conjunction of things superior with things inferior, which is checked and intercepted when spiritual good and truth is not received. So in Habakkuk, “Thou hast wounded the head from the house of the wicked, by making naked the foundation even to the neck,” iii. 13; where to wound the head from the house of the wicked, is to destroy the principles of what is false; to make naked the foundation even unto the neck, denotes to intercept the conjunction thereby. So in Jeremiah, “Prevarications intertwined have ascended upon my neck, he hath thurst at my strength, God hath delivered me into hands that I cannot rise up,” Lam. i, 14; where prevarications intertwined ascending upon the neck, denote that falses ascended towards things interior or rational. Inasmuch as by neck was signified communication and conjunction, therefore by the chains of the neck was signified interception, consequently the desolation of truth, which then exists, when spiritual things, which continually flow from the Lord, are not any longer admitted into the rational [principle] of man, nor of course into his natural. This interception or desolation is what is represented in Jeremiah by the injunction, that he should make unto himself chains and yokes, and should put them upon his neck, and send them to the people, and say, that they should serve Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and they who did not yield their necks under his yoke, should be visited by the sword, famine, and pestilence; but they who bowed down their neck, should be left on the earth, Jer. xxvii. 2, 3, 8, 11; where to put the neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon and to serve him, denotes to be desolated as to truth, and to be vastated as to good; that it is Babel which vastates, may be seen, n. 1327: and that they are vastated, lest holy things should be profaned, see n. 301, 302, 303, 1327, 1328, 2426, 3398, 3399, 3402; and because, when the influx of good and truth is intercepted, what is evil and false are served, therefore also to put the neck under the yoke is to serve. Again, in the same prophet, "Jehovah hath said, within two years of days I will break the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon from off the neck of all nations," xxviii. 11; denoting deliverance from vastation. So in Isaiah, "Shake thee from the dust, arise, sit down, O Jerusalem; open the bands of thy neck, O captive daughter of Zion," lii. 2; where to open the bands of the neck is to admit and receive good and truth. So in Micah, "Behold I purpose evil against this family, from which ye shall not withdraw your necks, and ye shall not go erect; because that is a time of evil," ii. 3; where not to withdraw the neck from evil, is not to admit truth; not to go erect, is thus not to look to superior things, or those which are of heaven, see n. 248.

3543. "And she gave the savoury meat"—that hereby is signified the delightful things thence derived, is clear from the signification of savoury meat, as denoting things agreeable, and also delightful, of which see above, n. 3502, 3536.

3545. "Which she had made"—that hereby are signified the things which were from the Divine [principle], is clear from the representation of Rebecca, as denoting the Divine Truth of the Divine Rational of the Lord; and because it is said of Rebecca, that she made them, it signifies that which was from the Divine [principle].

3547. Verses 18, 19, 20. And he came to his father and said, my father, and he said, Behold me, who art thou my son? And

*Jacob said to his father, I am Esau thy first-born, I have done as thou spakest to me, arise I pray, sit, and eat of my venison (hunting),to the end that thy soul may bless me. And Isaac said to his son, what is this thou hast hastened to find, my son? and he said, because Jehovah thy God caused it to meet my face. He came to his father, and said, my father; and he said, behold me, who art thou, my son? signifies a state of perception arising from the presence of that truth. And Jacob said to his father, signifies the apperception of natural truth. I am Esau thy first born, signifies that he believed that he was real natural good. I have done as thou spakest to me, signifies obedience: Arise, I pray, sit, and eat of my venison (hunting), signifies the truth of the affection of such good. To the end that thy soul may bless me, signifies conjunction. And Isaac said to his son, signifies perception. What is this thou hast hastened to find, my son? signifies production so hasty. And he said, because Jehovah God caused it to meet my face, signifies providence.

3548. "He came to his father, and said, My father, and he said, Behold me, who art thou, my son?"—that hereby is signified a state of perception arising from the presence of that truth, may appear from the representation of Isaac, who is here father, and from the representation of Jacob, who is here son, of which frequent mention is made above; also from the signification of saying, as denoting to perceive, concerning which see likewise above. Hence, and from the rest of the expressions, it is evident that it is a state of perception arising from the presence of that truth, which is represented by Jacob. But what is the quality of the truth which is now represented by Jacob, is manifest from the internal sense of what goes before and of what follows, viz. that in an external form it appears like good and the truth of good, but that it is not such in it's internal form. The natural principle as to truth with man, who is in the process of regeneration, that is, before regeneration is accomplished, has such an appearance, not indeed in the sight of man, for he knows nothing concerning good and truth in himself during regeneration, but in the sight of the angels, who see such things in the light of heaven. Man does not even know what the good and truth of the natural principle is, and inasmuch as he does not know this, he cannot perceive it; and inasmuch as he does not perceive it in general, neither can he perceive it in particular; consequently he cannot perceive the differences, and still less the changes of their state; and this being the case, he cannot without difficulty comprehend from any description how this good and the truth thereof are mutually circumstanced. But whereas the subject treated of in this chapter is concerning such good and truth, therefore in what follows we shall endeavour to explain it, so far as it is capable of being apprehended.

fied the apperception of natural truth, appears from the signification of saying, as denoting to perceive, concerning which see above; in the present case denoting to apperceive, because from the natural principle; and from the representation of Jacob, as denoting natural truth, concerning which see also above.

3550. "I am Esau thy first-born"—that hereby is signified that he believed he was real natural good, appears from the representation of Esau, and from the signification of first-born, as denoting good, and indeed natural good, which is represented by Esau: for thus it is with the truth appertaining to man, before he is regenerated, that it believes itself to be real good. They who have perception know that it is not good, but that it is truth under the form of good; but they who have not perception, know no other than that it is good. This however will appear more evident from what follows.

3551. "I have done as thou spakest to me"—that hereby is signified obedience, may appear without explication.

3552. "Rise, I pray; sit, and eat of my venison"—that hereby is signified the truth of the affection of such good, appears from the signification of rising, as implying somewhat of elevation, see n. 2401, 2785, 2912, 2927, 3171; and from the signification of sitting, as implying somewhat of tranquillity; and from the signification of eating, as denoting appropriation, see n. 2187, 3168; and from the signification of venison (hunting), as denoting truth which is grounded in good, see n. 3501; hence in the present case denoting the affection of such good from which truth is derived; for the things signified by rising, sitting, and eating, in the internal sense, have respect to affection, wherefore the term affection alone is used to denote those things.

3553. "To the end that thy soul may bless me"—that hereby is signified conjunction, appears from the signification of being blessed, as denoting conjunction, see n. 3504, 3514, 3530.

3554. "And Isaac said to his son"—that hereby is signified perception, viz. of the rational [principle] represented by Isaac, concerning the natural [principle] which is represented by Jacob, and that to say is to perceive, has been often shewn above.

3555. "What is this thou hast hastened to find, my son?"—that hereby is signified production so hasty, appears without explication.

3556. "And he said, because Jehovah thy God caused it to meet my face"—that hereby is signified providence, may also appear without explication. The providence here treated of is, that good and truths thence derived are thus arranged in order with man, during regeneration, viz. that they appear outwardly, or are exhibited without in such an appearance, as if they were genuine good and genuine truths thence derived, when nevertheless they are not such, but are domestic good and truths thence derived, as was said above, serving only for the regeneration of man, thus for introducing goods and truths of a grosser nature, because such are expedient.

3557. Verses 21, 22, 23. And Isaac said to Jacob, come near I pray, and I will feel thee, my son, whether thou be my son Esau, or not. And Jacob came near to Isaac his father, and he felt him, and said, the voice is the voice of Jacob, and the hands the hands of Esau. And he did not acknowledge him, because his hands were hairy as his brother Esau's hands; and he blessed him. Isaac said to Jacob, signifies perception concerning this natural principle. Come near I pray, and I will feel thee, my son, signifies inmost perception from presence. Whether thou be my son Esau or not, signifies that it was not natural good. And Jacob came near to Isaac his father, signifies a state of presence. And he felt him, signifies thence all perception. And said, the voice is the voice of Jacob, and the hands the hands of Esau, signifies that the intellectual principle in this case is of truth which is within, but the will-principle is of good which is without, thus of inverted order. And he did not acknowledge him, because his hands were hairy as his brother Esau's hands, signifies that from the will-principle which was without, he perceived that it was natural good. And he blessed him, signifies conjunction thereby.

3558. "Isaac said to Jacob"—that hereby is signified perception concerning this natural principle, appears from the signification of saying, as denoting to perceive, concerning which see above; and from the representation of Jacob, as denoting the natural [principle] as to truth, in the present case merely the natural [principle], because he also represented apparently, or in an external form resembled Esau, thus also the natural [principle] as to good, which is Esau, and likewise his venison (hunting), which is the truth that is of that good, see n. 3501. The reason of its being so often repeated, He said, is, because thus a new state commences, or a new perception, see n. 2061, 2238, 2260.

3559, "Come near I pray, and I will feel thee my son"—that hereby is signified inmost perception from presence, appears from the signification of coming near, as denoting presence; and from the signification of feeling, as denoting inmost and all perception, see n. 3528.

3560. "Whether thou be my son Esau or not"—that hereby is signified that it was not natural good, appears from the doubt expressed in these words and in those which presently follow; and whereas it is the rational [principle] which perceives what and of what quality the natural [principle] is, it is a perception that it was not natural good or Esau.

3561. "And Jacob came near to Isaac his father"—that hereby is signified a state of presence, may appear by what goes before, thus without further explication.

3562. "And he felt him"—that hereby is signified all perception, appears from the signification of feeling, as denoting inmost and all perception, concerning which see above, n. 3528, 3559, in the present case all perception, because the perception of all things is from that which is inmost, that is, they who are in inmost perception are in the perception of all things which are beneath, for the things which are beneath are nothing but derivations and consequent compositions, inasmuch as the inmost [principle] is all in all in whatever is beneath it, for whatever is beneath, unless it exists from things interior, or, what is the same, from things superior, as an effect from it's efficient cause, has no existence at all. Hence it is evident, why the end regarded renders man happy or unhappy in another life, for the end regarded is the inmost [principle] of all cause, inasmuch that unless the end be in the cause, yea, unless it be the all thereof, the cause does not exist; in like manner the end is the inmost [principle] of all effect, for the effect is produced from such cause; and this being the case, whatsoever appertains to man, derives it's esse from the end which influences him, and hence in another life his state is such as the end is by which he is influenced, see n. 1317, 1568, 1571, 1645, 1909, 3425. Hence it may appear, that as by feeling is signified inmost perception, it consequently signifies all perception.

3563. "And he said, the voice is the voice of Jacob, and the hands the hands of Esau"—that hereby is signified that the intellectual [principle] in this case is of truth which is within, but that the will-principle is of good which is without, thus of inverted order, appears from the signification of voice, as being predicated of truth, and from the signification of hand, as being predicated of good; that voice is predicated of truth, appears from what was adduced above, 219, 220, and from this circumstance, that it is said, the voice is the voice of Jacob, by whom is represented natural truth, as was shewn above; and the reason why hand is predicated of good is, because by hand is signified power and faculty, see n. 878, 3541, which is derived from no other source than good, all power and faculty being hence derived to truth, although it appears to be from truth; the same is evident also from this circumstance, that it is said, the hands are the hands of Esau, by whom is represented natural good, as was likewise shewn above. That these principles are of an inverted order, appears from this consideration, that it is according to order that good which is of the will be within, and that truth which is of the understanding be without. These subjects however are of such a nature, as was said above, that they can be explained to the apprehension of very few for want of know-ledges respecting them, inasmuch as where such knowledges are wanting, they cannot be comprehended; nevertheless it may be expedient to make some observations in regard thereto, such being the subject here treated of. The good of the natural [principle] has no other source of existence with man but from interior good, that is, the good of the rational [principle]; but influx causes the good therein to have quality agreeable to the quality of the principle; and whereas the good of the natural [principle] is from this source and from no other, the truth of the natural [principle] is also from the same source, for where good is, there is truth, it being necessary that both should exist in order to the existence of either; but influx also causes the truth herein to have a quality agreeable to the quality of the principle. The influx is in this manner; the good of the rational [principle] flows into the natural by a twofold way, viz. by the shortest way, into the essential good of the natural [principle], thus immediately, and through the good of the natural [principle] into it's truth; this good and this truth is what is represented by Esau and his venison (hunting); the good of the rational [principle] also flows into the natural by a way less short, viz. through the truth of the rational [principle], and by this influx forms somewhat resembling good, but it is truth. It is thus according to order that the good of the rational [principle] should flow into the good of the natural, and at the same time into it's truth, immediately, and also through the truth of the rational [principle] into the good of the natural, thus mediately, and in like manner into the truth of the natural [principle] both immediately and mediately. When this is the case, then the influx is according to order. Such influx has place with those who are become regenerate; but another influx has place before they are regenerate, as was said above, viz. an influx of the good of the rational [principle] not immediately into the good of the natural, but mediately through the truth of the rational, whereby is presented somewhat resembling good in the natural, but it is not genuine good, and consequently not genuine truth, yet it is of such a nature, that it really has good intimately united with it, by virtue of influx through the truth of the rational [principle], but no further. For this reason good also exists therein under another form, namely, outwardly like the good which is represented by Esau, but inwardly like the truth which is represented by Jacob, and as this is not according to order, it is said to be of inverted order; nevertheless, when considered in regard to it's expediency, as needful in the process of man's regeneration, it is according to order. I am well aware that these particulars, although they are expressed with clearness, and consequently may be perceived clearly by those who are principled in the knowledge of such things, will still appear obscure to those who are unacquainted with the nature of influx, and more so to those who do not know that the rational [principle] is distinct from the natural, and still more so to those, who have not any distinct idea concerning good and concerning truth. But what the quality of natural good is, and of natural truth, in the state previous to regeneration, can only be manifest from the affections which prevail at that time. When man is affected with truth, not for the sake of ends which regard life, but for the sake of other ends, viz. that he may become learned, and this from a certain affection of emulation, or from a certain affection of infantile envy, and also from a certain affection of glory, in such case the good and truth of the natural [principle] is in such an order, as is here represented by Jacob, consequently it is in inverted order respectively, that is, the will-principle which is of good is without, and the intellectual-principle which is of truth is within; but in the state after regeneration it is otherwise. In this case man is not only affected with truth for the sake of the ends of life, but he is still more affected with essential good of life, and the former affections, viz. of emulation, of infantile envy, and of glory, separate themselves, and this until it appears as if they were dissipated, for in this case good which is of the will is within, and truth which is of the understanding is without, yet still in such a manner, that truth acts in unity with good, as being derived from good. This order is genuine; and the former order is to the intent that this order may be formed, for the will-principle, which in such case is without, is admmissive of several things which are serviceable to regeneration, and like a sponge which imbibes both clear and muddy waters, it also imbibes such things as would otherwise be rejected, which nevertheless serve as mediums, and also for forming ideas concerning goods and truths, besides other uses.

3564. "And he did not acknowledge him, because his hands were hairy as his brother Esau's hands,"—that hereby is signified that from the will-principle which was without, he perceived that it was natural good, appears from this consideration, that he did not acknowledge Jacob to be Jacob, that is, the truth which Jacob represents, but that he perceived Esau, that is, the natural good which was without, and this by reason of the influx spoken of above, n. 3563; for between interior good and exterior good there is given a communication, because there is a parallelism, see n. 1831, 1832, 3514, but not between good and truth, unless the influx of good into truth be such as has been just now described above.

3565. "And he blessed him"—that hereby is signified conjunction thence effected, appears from the signification of being blessed, as denoting conjunction, see n. 3504, 3514, 3530; but in this state the conjunction was no other than what was described, n. 3563; there was intimate conjunction, but not middle conjunction, with the truth represented by Jacob, thus it was by the end, which is inmost good, which end was, that thus and no otherwise it could be effected; when there is an end regarded, then first conjunction has place of things inmost with things outermost; middle conjunction comes by degrees, and is produced by the end regarded, for in the end regarded lies concealed all the progression thereto, inasmuch as the Lord acts by ends, and by them successively arranges intermediate things in order, and hence comes conjunction, which is signified by Isaac blessing Jacob.

3566. Verses 24, 25. And he said, art thou he my son Esau, and he said, I (am). And he said, bring to me, and I will eat of my son's venison, to the intent that my soul may bless thee; and he brought to him, and he did eat, and he brought him wine, and he did drink. He said, art thou he my son Esau, and he said, I (am), signifies a state of the affection of natural truth, in that it believed itself then to be natural good, from the external form. And he said, bring to me, and I will eat of my son's venison (hunting), signifies a desire of conjoining to himself natural truth by good. To the intent that my soul may bless thee, signifies conjunction. And he brought to him and he did eat, signifies conjunction of good first. And he brought him wine and he did drink, signifies conjunction of truth afterwards.

3567. "He said, art thou he my son Esau, he said, I (am)"—that hereby is signified a state of the affection of natural truth, in that it believed itself at that time to be natural good from the external form, may appear from Isaac's inquiry, "art thou he my son Esau," by which nothing else can be signified, in the internal sense, but the influx of the rational [principle] from good into natural truth represented by Jacob; and from the reply, "He said, I (am)," that he supposed himself at that time to be good; see what is said above. n. 3550.

3568. "And he said, bring to me, and I will eat of my son's venison"—that hereby is signified a desire of conjoining to himself natural truth by good, appears from the signification of eating, as denoting to conjoin and to appropriate, see n. 2187, 2343, 3168, 3513; and from the signification of my son's venison (hunting), as denoting the truth of good, see n. 3309, 3501, 3508; that desire is implied, is manifest.

3569. "To the intent that my soul may bless thee"—that hereby is signified conjunction, appears from the signification of being blessed, as denoting conjunction, see n. 3504, 3514, 3530, 3565.

3570. "And he brought to him, and he did eat"—that hereby is signified conjunction of good first; and that by bringing wine to him and he did drink, is signified conjunction of truth afterwards, appears from the signification of eating, as denoting to be conjoined and to be appropriated as to good, concerning which see just above, n. 3568; and from the signification of wine as denoting truth which is grounded in good, see n. 1071, 1798; and from the signification of drinking, as denoting to be conjoined and to be appropriated as to truth, see n. 3168. In regard to this circumstance, that the good of the rational [principle], which is represented by Isaac, conjoins to itself good first, and truth afterwards, and this by the natural [principle], which is Jacob, the case is this; when the natural [principle] is in that state, that outwardly it is good, and inwardly truth, concerning which see above, n. 3539, 3548, 3556, 3563, it admits at this time several things which are not good, but which yet are useful, such as are the mediums leading to good in their order; but the good of the rational [principle] does not thence conjoin and appropriate to itself any other things than such as agree with its own good, for good receives no other, and whatsoever disagrees, it rejects; the rest of the things in the natural [principle] it leaves, that they may serve as means of admitting and introducing several things suitable to itself. The rational [principle] is in the internal man, and what is therein transacted is unknown to the natural [principle], as being above the sphere of its perception. Hence it is, that man, who lives a mere natural life, cannot know anything of what is transacting with him in his internal man, or in his rational [principle], the Lord disposing and ordering such things, whilst man is altogether ignorant of it. Hence too it is, that man knows nothing of the manner how he is regenerated, and scarcely that he is regenerated. But if he be desirous to know this, let him attend only to the ends of life, which he proposes to himself, and which he rarely discovers to any one; if these ends are directed to good, viz. that he is more attentive to his neighbour and the Lord than to himself, he is then in a state of regeneration; but if the ends are directed to evil, viz. that he is more attentive to himself than to his neighbour and the Lord, let him know that in such case he is in no state of regeneration. Man by the ends of his life is in another life, by ends of good in heaven with angels, but by ends of evil in hell with devils; ends with man are nothing else but his loves, for what a man loves, that he has for an end; and inasmuch as ends are his loves, they are also his inmost life, see n. 1317, 1568, 1571, 1645, 1909, 3425, 3562, 3565. Ends of good with man are in his rational [principle], and are what is called the rational [principle] as to good, or the good of the rational [principle]. By ends of good, or by good therein, the Lord disposes all things which are in the natural [principle], for the end is as the soul, and the natural [principle] is as the body of that soul; such as the soul is, such is the body wherewith it is encompassed, thus such as the rational [principle] is as to good, such is the natural [principle] wherewith it is invested. It is a known thing, that the soul of man has its beginning in the ovum of the mother, and is afterwards perfected in her womb, and is there encompassed with a tender body, and this of such a nature, that by it the soul is enabled to act suitably in the world into which it is born. The case is similar when man is born again; that is, is regenerated; the new soul, which he then receives, is the end of good, which has its beginning in the rational [principle], at first as in an ovum therein, and afterwards it is there perfected as in a womb; the tender body, with which this soul is encompassed, is the natural [principle] and the good therein, which is such, as to act obediently according to the ends of the soul; the truths therein are like fibres in the body, for truths are formed from good, see n. 3470. Hence it is manifest, that an image of the re-formation of man is exhibited in his formation in the womb; and if you are disposed to believe it, celestial good and spiritual truth, which is from the Lord, is also what forms him, and at the same time impresses an ability that he can receive each [principle] successively, and this according to the manner and degree, in which like a man he has respect to heavenly ends of life, and not like a brute animal to worldly ends. That the rational [principle] as to good conjoins to itself good first, and truth afterwards by the natural [principle], which is signified by Jacob's bringing savoury meat and bread to Isaac, and he did eat, and bringing him wine and he did drink, may also be illustrated by the offices which the body performs for its soul. It is the soul which gives to the body to appetite food, and which gives also to relish it; different kinds of food are introduced by the delight of appetite and by the delight of taste, thus by external good; but the different kinds of food which are introduced, do not all enter the life, some serving as menstrooms for digestion, some for tempering, some for opening, some for introducing into the vessels; but the good foods elected are introduced into the blood, and become blood, and out of the blood the soul conjoins to itself such things as are of use. The case is similar in regard to the rational [principle] and the natural; the desire and affection of knowing truth correspond to appetite and relish, and scientifics and knowledges correspond to different kinds of food, see n. 1480; and it is by reason of this correspondence that the cases are similar. The soul which is the good of the rational [principle], gives the faculty of desiring and of being affected with the things of science and of doctrine, and thus introduces such things by the delight which is of desire, and by the good which is of affection; but the things which it introduces are not all such as to become the good of life, some serving as means for a kind of digesting and tempering, some for opening and introducing, but the good things which are of life it applies to itself, and thereby conjoins them to itself, and from them forms to itself truths. Hence it is manifest, how the rational [principle] disposes the natural to serve itself as the soul, or, what is the same thing, to serve the end regarded by man, which is the soul, and to perfect itself, that it may be of use in the Lord's kingdom.

3571. Verses 26, 27, 28, 29. And Isaac his father said unto him, come near, I pray, and kiss me my son. And he came near, and kissed him, and he smelled the smell of his raiment, and blessed him, and said, see, the smell of my son is as the smell of a field, which Jehovah has blessed. And God shall give to thee of the dew of heaven, and of the fatnesses of the earth, and multitude of corn and new wine. People shall serve thee, and people shall bow down themselves to thee, be a master unto thy brethren, and thy mother's sons shall bow down themselves to thee; cursed are they that curse thee, and blessed are they that bless thee. Isaac his father said unto him, come near I pray, signifies a degree of perception still more inward. And kiss me, my son, signifies whether or no he can be united. And he came near and kissed him, signifies presence and union. And he smelled the smell of his raiment, signifies what was grateful arising from the truth of good which he perceived. And he blessed him, signifies conjunction thus. And said, see, the smell of my son, signifies what was grateful arising from the truth of good. Is as the smell of a field, signifies as from good ground out of which is truth. Which Jehovah has blessed, signifies that it is multiplied and made fruitful from the Divine [principle]. And God shall give unto thee of the dew of heaven, signifies from Divine Truth. And of the fatnesses of the earth, signifies from Divine Good. And multitude of corn, signifies natural good thence derived. And of new wine, signifies thence natural truth. People shall serve thee, signifies the truths of the Church, or spiritual Churches. And people shall bow down themselves to thee, signifies the truths of good. Be a master to thy brethren, signifies dominion at first appearing to be of the affection of natural truth over the affections of natural good. And thy mother's sons shall bow down themselves to thee, signifies over the rest of the affections of truth. Cursed are they that curse thee, signifies that whosoever disjoineth himself shall be disjoined. And blessed are they that bless thee, signifies that whosoever conjoineth himself shall be conjoined.

3572. "Isaac his father said unto him, come near, I pray"—that hereby is signified a degree of perception still more inward, appears from the signification of saying that he should come near, as denoting a degree of more inward perception arising from presence; to come near, can have no other signification.

3573. "And kiss me, my son"—that hereby is signified whether or no he can be united, appears from the signification of kissing, as denoting union and conjunction from affection. Kissing, which is a thing external, is nothing else but an affection of conjunction, which is a thing internal; there is also a correspondence between them. The subject here treated of, as is manifest from what has been said above, in a supreme sense, is concerning the Glorification of the natural [principle] in the Lord, that is, how the Lord made the natural [principle] in Himself Divine; but in a representative sense it relates to the regeneration of the natural [principle] with man, thus to the conjunction of the natural [principle] with the rational; for the natural [principle] is not regenerated until it is conjoined to the rational. This conjunction is effected by influx immediate and mediate of the rational [principle] into the good and truth of the natural, viz. from the good of the rational [principle] immediately into the good of the natural, and through this good into the truth of the natural [principle]; and mediately through the truth of the rational [principle] into the truth of the natural, and thence into the good of the natural. These conjunctions are here treated of; which conjunctions can in no wise exist but by means provided from the Divine [principle], and indeed by such as are most unknown to man, and of which he can scarce form any idea by those things which are of the world's light, that is, which are of the luminous [principle] naturally appertaining to him, but by those things which are of the light of heaven, that is, which are of rational light. Nevertheless all these means (or mediums) are discoverable in the internal sense of the Word, and are manifest to those who are principled in that sense, consequently to the angels, who see and perceive innumerable things on this subject, whereof scarce a single one can be unfolded and explained adequately to the apprehension of man. But from effects and the signs thereof it is in some measure evident to man, how the case is in respect to this conjunction; for the rational mind, that is, the interior will-principle and intellectual [principle] with man, must needs represent itself in his natural mind, as the natural mind represents itself in his face and countenance, insomuch that, as the face is the countenance of the natural mind, so the natural mind must needs be the countenance of the rational mind. When conjunction is effected, as is the case with those who are regenerated, then whatsoever man interiorly wills and thinks in his rational [principle], presents itself conspicuous in his natural [principle], and this latter presents itself conspicuous in his face. Such a face have the angels, and such a face had the most ancient people, who were celestial men; for they were not at all afraid of others knowing their ends and intentions, inasmuch as they willed nothing but good; for whosoever suffers himself to be led of the Lord, in no wise intends and thinks any thing else. When the state is such, then the rational [principle] as to good conjoins itself immediately with the good of the natural [principle], and by this with its truths, and also mediately by truth conjoined to itself in the rational [principle] with truth of the natural [principle], and by this with good in the same [principle]; hence conjunction becomes indissoluble. But how far man at this day is removed from this state, consequently from a celestial state, may appear from this consideration, that it is believed to be a requisite of civil prudence to speak, to act, and also to express by the countenance what is contrary to the thought and intention; yea, even to dispose the natural mind in such a manner, that together with it's face, it may act contrary to the things interiorly thought and willed from an end grounded in evil. This was regarded by the most ancient people as enormous, and such persons were rejected from their society as devils. From these considerations, as from effects and their signs, it is manifest what is meant by the conjunction of the rational or internal man, as to good and truth, with the natural or external man; and thus what is the quality of a man-angel, and what the quality of a man-devil.

3574. "And he came near and kissed him"—that hereby is signified presence and conjunction, appears from the signification of coming near, as denoting presence, and from the signification of kissing, as denoting union or conjunction from affection, see n. 3573. That this is signified by kissing, appears also from the following passages in the Word, "Serve Jehovah in fear, and kiss the Son, lest He be angry, and ye perish in the way, because His wrath will kindle shortly; blessed are all they that trust in Him," Psalm ii. 12: speaking of the Lord, Whose Divine Human [principle] is the Son; to kiss Him is to be conjoined to Him by faith grounded in love. Again, "Let mercy and truth meet together; let justice and peace kiss," Psalm lxxxv. 10; where justice and peace kissing, denotes their conjunction together. So in Hosea, "Ephraim hath spoken horror, and he became guilty in Baal; and now they add to sin, they make them a graven image of their silver, idols in their intelligence, the whole work of artificers, saying to them, sacrificing a man they kiss calves," xiii. 1, 2; where Ephraim denotes intelligence, in the present case man's own proper intelligence, that is, of those who believe, and are desirous to believe, that they are wise of themselves and not from the Lord. The graven image of their silver denotes good falsified; the whole work of the artificers, denotes self-intelligence. They who are such are said to kiss calves; that is, to embrace magic and to adjoin themselves thereto. So in the first book of the Kings, "Jehovah said to Elijah, I have caused to remain in Israel seven thousand, all the knees which have not bowed themselves to Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him," xix. 18; where to kiss denotes to join itself from affection, thus to worship.

good which he perceived, appears from the signification of smell (odour), as denoting what is grateful, see n. 925, and of smelling, as denoting to perceive what is grateful, and from the signification of raiment, as denoting truth, see n. 297, 1073, 2576; and as this was Esau's, who is here understood by his, and by Esau is represented natural good, therefore it is the truth of good which is here signified. Truth of good is that which is produced in the natural [principle] by influx immediate and mediate of the rational, concerning which influx see above, n. 3573. This truth was what was desired; but whereas it could not be produced by immediate influx from the good of the rational [principle], unless at the same time by a mediate one, that is, through the truth of the rational [principle], and this could not be produced except by several means (or mediums), which are what are here described by Esau and Jacob, in the internal sense; therefore by smelling the smell of his raiment is signified the truth of good which was perceived.

3576. "And blessed him"—that hereby is signified conjunction thus, appears from the signification of being blessed, as denoting conjunction, see n. 3504, 3514, 3530, 3565. From these particulars, which are related concerning Esau and Jacob, it may appear, that the good of the rational [principle] conjoined itself intimately with the good of the natural, and by good therein with truth; for Isaac represents the rational [principle] as to good; Rebecca, the rational [principle] as to truth; Esau, the good of the natural [principle]; and Jacob, the truth thereof. That the rational [principle] as to good, which is Isaac, conjoined itself intimately with the good of the natural [principle], which is Esau, and not with the truth of the natural [principle], which is Jacob, except mediately, is evident from this consideration, that Isaac had Esau in mind when he pronounced the blessing on Jacob; nor did he think of Jacob at that time, but of Esau. Whosoever pronounces a blessing, blesses him of whom he thinks, and not him at that time of whom he does not think. All blessing which is uttered with the mouth, comes forth from an interior principle, having life in it from the will and thought of him who blesses, and hence it is essentially his to whom such will and thought are directed. He who takes it, and thereby makes it his own, is like one who steals somewhat which is to be restored to another. That Isaac, when he pronounced blessing, thought of Esau, and not of Jacob, may appear from all and singular the things which precede, as from verses 18, 19, where Isaac says to Jacob, Who art thou, my son? and Jacob said to his father, I am thy first-born Esau; and from verses 21, 22, 23, Isaac said to Jacob, come near I pray, and I will feel thee my son, whether thou be my son Esau, or not; and after that he felt him, he said, the voice is the voice of Jacob, and the hands the hands of Esau, and he did not acknowledge him; also from verse 24, And he said, art thou he my son Esau, and he said, I (am); and at length when he kissed him, he smelled the smell of his raiment, namely, Esau's, and when he then blessed him, he said, see the smell of my son. Hence it is manifest, that by the son whom he blessed, no other is understood than Esau; wherefore also when he heard from Esau, that it had been Jacob, Isaac shuddered with exceeding great horror, verse 33, and said, thy brother came in treachery, verse 35. But the reason why Jacob retained the blessing, according to what is said, verses 33 and 37, is, because the truth represented by Jacob was to have dominion apparently as to time, as has been occasionally shewn above; but after the stated time of reformation and regeneration, then essential good, which lay intimately concealed, and thence arranged all and singular the things which appeared to be of truth, or which truth had attributed to itself, comes forth and has open dominion; and this is signified by what Isaac said to Esau, on thy sword thou shalt live, and shalt serve thy brother, and it shall be when thou hast dominion, and thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck, verse 40; the internal sense of which words is, that so long as truth is in the process of conjoining to good, good is in an inferior place, as to appearance, but that it will be in a superior place, and then there shall be conjunction of the rational [principle] with the good of the natural, and thereby with the truth, and thus truth shall be of good; consequently in such case Esau will represent the essential good of the natural [principle], and Jacob the essential truth thereof conjoined to the rational [principle]; thus in a supreme sense the Lord's Divine Natural [principle], Esau as to Divine Good, and Jacob as to Divine Truth therein.

3577. "As the smell of a field"—that hereby is signified as from good ground out of which is truth, appears from the signification of the smell of a field, as denoting the perception of truth derived from good, like as of an exhalation from ripe corn in a field; that field denotes good ground, may be seen, n. 3500. The ground and reason why smell denotes perception, is, because the delights of good and the pleasantnesses of truth, which are perceived in another life, manifests themselves there by corresponding smells (or odours), see n. 1514, 1517, 1518, 1519; hence, and from the nature of correspondencies, it is evident, that smell is nothing else but a perceptive [principle]; yet natural, corresponding to the perceptive spiritual [principle].

3578. "Which Jehovah hath blessed"—that hereby is signified that it is multiplied and made fruitful from the Divine [principle], appears from the signification of Jehovah's blessing, as denoting to be multiplied as to truth, and to be made fruitful as to good, see n. 2846, 3406.

3579. "And God shall give thee of the dew of heaven"— that hereby is signified of the Divine Truth, and that of the fatnesses of the earth signifies of the Divine Good, appears from the signification of the dew of heaven, as denoting truth, of which we shall speak presently; and from the signification of fatnesses, as denoting good, see n. 353; each Divine, in the supreme sense, in which they are predicated of the Lord. With respect to the multiplication of truth and the fructification of good, the case is this; when the rational [principle] flows into the natural, it there presents it's good in a common or general form; by this good it produces truths therein, almost as the life or living [principle] in man composes fibres, and disposes them into forms according to uses. This good, by these truths disposed into a celestial form, produces further good, and by this good further truths, which are derivations; such a natural idea may be had of the formation of truth from good, and further of good by truth, whereby again truth is formed; but a spiritual idea cannot be had except by those who are in another life, for there the ideas are formed from the light of heaven, in which is intelligence. That dew signifies truth, appears also from other passages of the Word, as in Zechariah, "The seed of peace, the vine shall give it's fruit, and the earth shall give it's produce, and the heavens shall give their dew," viii. 12; speaking of a new Church, where by the vine giving it's fruits is denoted, that the spiritual [principle] of the Church, or the truth of faith, should give good; and by the earth giving it's produce, is denoted that the celestial [principle] of the Church, or the good of charity, should give truth; the dew which the heavens should give, denote these things. So in Haggai, "Because of my house, which is vastated, the heavens above you is shut from dew, and the earth is shut from it's produce," i. 9, 10; where the dew of the heavens and the produce of the earth, which were checked, have a like signification. So in David, "From the womb of the morning thou hast the dew of thy nativity," Psalm cx. 4; speaking of the Lord, the dew of nativity denoting the celestial [principle] of love. So in Moses, "Blessed of Jehovah is his land respecting the precious things of heaven, respecting the dew, respecting the abyss also lying beneath," Deut. xxxiii. 13; speaking of Joseph; the precious things of heaven are things spiritual, see n. 3166, which are dew; the abyss lying beneath are things natural. So again, "Israel dwelt securely, solitary at the fountain of Jacob, in a land of corn and new wine, the heavens also dropped dew," Deut. xxxiii. 28; where also the dew which the heavens dropped, denotes the spiritual things which are of truth. Dew, in a genuine sense, is the truth of good which is from a state of innocence and peace, for by morning or day-dawn, when the dew descends, are signified those states, see n. 2333, 2405, 2780; hence also the manna, which was from heaven, was with the dew which descended in the morning, as may appear from Moses, "In the morning was the lying of the dew, round about the camp, and when the lying of the dew ceased, behold on the faces of the wilderness a bruised round thing, bruised like the hoar-frost on the earth," Exod. xvi. 13, 14. "When the dew descended upon the camp in the night, the manna descended upon it," Numb. xi. 9; manna, as being heavenly bread, in a supreme sense signified the Lord as to Divine Good, hence the celestial [principle] of love with men, for this is from the Lord's Divine [principle]; see n. 276, 680, 1798, 2165, 2177, 3464, 3478; the dew, in which and with which the manna descended, denotes Divine Truth in a supreme sense, and spiritual truth appertaining to men in a respective sense; morning is a state of peace in which these good things are found, see n. 92, 93, 1726, 2780, 3170. Inasmuch as dew signifies truth which is from good, or, what is the same thing, the spiritual [principle] which is from the celestial, therefore also spiritual truth in the Word is compared to dew, for the things which signify serve also for comparison, as in Isaiah, "Thus said Jehovah to me, I will rest and will look in my habitation, as serene heat upon light, as a cloud of dew when the harvest is warm," xviii. 4. And in Hosea, "What shall I do to thee Ephraim, what shall I do to thee Judah, because your holiness is as the morning cloud, and as the dew falling in the morning," vi. 4; chap. xiii. 3. Again, in the same prophet, "I will be as the dew unto Israel, he shall bud as a lily, and shall fix his roots like Lebanon," xiv. 6. And in Micah, "The remains of Jacob shall be in the midst of many people, as dew from Jehovah, as drops upon the herb," v. 7. And in David, "As good oil upon the head, which descended upon the border of Aaron's garments, as the dew of Hermon which descended upon the mountain of Zion, because there hath Jehovah ordained the blessing of life even to an age," Psalm cxxxiii. 2, 3. And in Moses, "My doctrine shall flow down like rain, My Word shall drop as dew, as drops upon the grass, and as drops upon the herb," Deut. xxxii. 2. Where dew denotes the multiplication of truth from good, and the fructification of good by truth; and whereas dew is what every morning renders the field and vineyard fruitful, therefore essential good and truth are signified by corn and new wine, which come next to be considered.

3580. "And multitude of corn"—that hereby is signified natural good thence derived, and that by new wine is signified natural truth thence derived, appears from the signification of corn, as denoting good, and from the signification of new wine, as denoting truth; which, when predicated of the natural [principle], signify natural good and truth, and in such case bread and wine are predicated of the rational [principle]. That bread is celestial good, see n. 276, 680, 1798, 2165, 2177, 3464,

3478 ; and that wine is spiritual truth, thus truth from good, see n. 1071, 1798. That corn and new wine have such a signification, may appear from the following passages in the Word, "The heavens are shut up from dew, and the earth is shut up from it's produce, and I have called dryness upon the earth, and upon the mountains, and upon the corn, and upon the new wine, and upon what the earth brings forth," Haggai. i. 10, 11; where dryness (or drought) denotes a failure of dew and of rain, thus a failure of truth derived from any good ; dryness upon the corn is a failure of good, and dryness upon the new wine is a failure of truth. So in Moses, "Israel shall dwell securely, solitary at the fountain of Jacob, in a land of corn and new wine, and the heavens thereof shall drop dew," Deut. xxxiii. 28 ; solitary denotes those who are not infested by evils and false principles, see n. 139, 471 ; a land of corn and of new wine denotes the good and truth of the Church. So in Hosea, "I will be as the dew unto Israel, he shall bud forth as a lily, and shall fix his roots like Lebanon ; they shall return that dwell in his shade, they shall vivify the corn, and shall flourish as a vine, his memory shall be as the vine of Lebanon," xiv. 6, 7, 8 ; where corn denotes spiritual good, and wine spiritual truth. So in Isaiah, "The curse shall devour the earth, the new wine shall mourn, the vine shall languish, all the glad in heart shall groan," xxiv. 6, 7 ; speaking of the vastation of the spiritual Church ; the new wine mourning denotes that truth shall cease. So in Jeremiah, "Jehovah hath redeemed Jacob, they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to the good of Jehovah, to the corn and to the new wine, and to the oil, and to the sons of the flock and of the herd," xxxi. 11, 12 : where corn and new wine denote good and the truth thence derived ; oil denotes the good out of which they come, and which is derived from them ; the sons of the flock and of the herd denote the truth which is thus thence derived ; and as these things have such a signification, they are called the good of Jehovah. So in Hosea, "She hath not known that I have given her corn and new wine, and oil ; and I have multiplied the silver and gold which they made for Baal, therefore will I return, and will take my corn and new wine in its stated time, and will seize upon my wool and my flax," ii. 8, 9 ; speaking of the Church perverted, where it is evident that by corn is not signified corn, nor by new wine new wine, neither by oil, silver, gold, wool, and flax, such things as are so expressed, but spiritual things, that is, things appertaining to good and truth. In like manner, speaking of a new Church in the same prophet, "I will betroth thee to Myself in faith, and thou shalt know Jehovah, and it shall be in that day I will hear the heavens, and these shall hear the earth, and the earth shall hear the corn and the new wine, and the oil, and these shall hear Jesreel," ii. 20, 21, 22 ; Jesreel

denotes a new Church. So in Joel, "Rise up ye drunkards and weep, and howl all ye that drink wine, because of the new wine which is cut out from your mouth. The field is wasted, the earth mourneth, because the corn is wasted, the new wine is dried up, the oil languisheth," i. 5, 10. Again, in the same prophet, "Rejoice ye sons of Zion, and be glad in Jehovah your God, because he hath given unto you the morning rain for righteousness, and he will cause to descend upon you the morning and evening rain in the first, and the floors shall be filled with pure corn, and the wine-presses shall overflow with new wine, and oil," ii. 23, 24. Again, in the same prophet, "It shall come to pass in that day the mountains shall drop new wine, and the hills shall flow with milk, and all the rivers of Judah shall flow with waters, and a fountain shall go forth from the house of Jehovah," iii. 18; speaking of the Lord's kingdom, where by new wine, by milk, and by waters, are signified things spiritual, whose abundance is thus described. So in Zechariah, "Jehovah their God shall serve them in that day, as a flock His people, for how great is His goodness, and how great is His beauty! Corn shall cause the young men to bud forth, and new wine the virgins," ix. 16, 17. And in David, "Thou visitest the earth, and delightest in it, thou greatly enrichest it, the river of God is full of water, thou preparest their corn, the pastures are clothed with flocks, and the valleys are covered with corn, they shout for joy, they also sing," Psalm lxxv. 9, 13. Hence then it is evident, what is signified by corn and new wine.

3581. "People shall serve thee"—that hereby are signified the truths of the Church; and that by people bowing down themselves to thee, are signified the truths of good, appears from the signification of serving, as being predicated of truths, see n. 2567, 3409; and from the signification of people, as denoting truths, see n. 1259, 1260, 2928, 3295. By people first mentioned are signified the truths of the Church, which are called truths, and by people mentioned a second time are signified truths of good, which are spiritual goods, and respectively are called truths, the goods of charity being such truths; inasmuch as there is this distinction, therefore the people first mentioned are expressed, in the Hebrew tongue, by an expression not altogether similar, but yet related to that by which they are expressed in the second place.

n. 3324, 3325, 3330, 3332, 3336, 3470, 3539, 3548, 3556, 3563, 3570.

3583. "And thy mother's sons shall bow down themselves to thee"—that hereby is signified over the rest of the affections of truth, appears from the signification of sons, as denoting also truths, see n. 489, 491, 533, 1147, 2623, 3373; and from the signification of mother, as denoting the affection of spiritual truth, and hence denoting the Church, because the Church is a mother, and is so called by virtue of truth and the affection thereof, see n. 289, 2691, 2717.

3584. "Cursed are they that curse thee"—that hereby is signified, that whosoever disjoins himself shall be disjoined; and that by blessed are they that bless thee, is signified, that whosoever conjoins himself shall be conjoined, appears from the signification of cursing, as denoting to be disjoined, and from the signification of blessing, as denoting to be conjoined, see n. 3504, 3514, 3530, 3565. These things are predicated of truth, and by those that curse are signified false principles, which separate themselves from truths; and by those that bless are signified truths which adjoin themselves to other truths. For with respect to truths and goods, the case is, that they form a society between themselves, and at length constitute as it were one state. In such manner also they have consociation together; which formation and consociation originates in the form of heaven, in which form the angels are arranged according to the consanguinities and affinities of good and truth, and thus together constitute one kingdom or one state; and hence truths and goods flow in with man, and are arranged with him into a similar form, and this from the Lord alone. But how this case is, will appear more evidently from the correspondence of the GRAND MAN, or heaven, with all and singular the things appertaining to man, concerning which correspondence, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, we shall speak at the close of the chapters. From these considerations then it is evident what is involved in the blessing of Isaac pronounced upon Jacob, but understood as respecting Esau, namely, the fructification of good by the multiplication of truth, and the fructification again of this latter.

3585. Verses 30, 31, 32, 33. And it came to pass, as Isaac left off to bless Jacob, and Jacob was scarce yet gone out from the faces of Isaac his father, that Esau his brother came from his hunting. And he also made savoury meat, and brought it to his father, and said to his father, Let my father arise, and eat of his son's venison (hunting), to the intent that thy soul may bless me. And Isaac his father said unto him, Who art thou? And he said, I am thy son, thy first-born Esau. And Isaac shuddered with exceeding great horror, and said, Who then is he who hath hunted venison, and hath brought to me, and I have eaten of all before thou camest, and have blessed him, also he shall be blessed. It came to pass, as Isaac left off to bless Jacob, signifies when the first conjunction was thus effected. And Jacob was scarce yet gone out from the faces of Isaac his father, signifies progression and change of state. That Esau his brother came from his hunting, signifies the truth of good, and it's arrival. And he also made savoury meat and brought to his father, signifies things desirable and delectable to the Divine Rational [principle]. And said to his father, Let my father arise, and eat of his son's venison, signifies that he should appropriate to himself the truth of natural good. To the intent that thy soul may bless me, signifies that there might be conjunction. And Isaac his father said unto him, Who art thou? and he said, I am thy son, thy first-born Esau, signifies a state of perception concerning natural good and truth thence derived. And Isaac shuddered with exceeding great horror, signifies a great alteration about the inversion of state. And he said, Who then is he that hath hunted venison (hunting) and hath brought to me, signifies inquiry concerning that truth. And I have eaten of all before thou camest, signifies that it was appropriated. And I have blessed him, also he shall be blessed, signifies that it was conjoined.

3587. "And Jacob was yet scarce gone out from the faces of Isaac his father"—that hereby is signified progression and change of state, appears from the signification of going out from faces, as denoting when those things ceased, which were represented by Jacob, thus when the state was changed, for the subject now treated of is concerning Esau, and in an internal sense, concerning the good of the natural [principle], how this comes forth from the inmost [principle], as was said above, and manifests itself, and when re-formation is accomplished by the ministry of truth, has dominion.

3588. "Esau his brother came from his hunting"—that hereby is signified the truth of good and it's arrival, appears from the representation of Esau as denoting the good of the natural [principle], concerning which see above; and from the signification of coming, as denoting arrival; and from the signification of venison (hunting), as denoting truth which is from good, see n. 3501.

3589. "And he also made savoury meat and brought to his father"—that hereby are signified things desirable and delectable to the Divine Rational [principle], appears from the signification of savoury meat, as denoting the delights which are of good and the pleasantnesses which are of truth, see n. 3502, 3536; the delights which are of good are things desirable, and the pleasantnesses which are of truth are things delectable, for the affection of good is what desires, and in such case the affection of truth is what delights.

3590. "And said to his father, let my father arise, and eat of his son's venison (hunting)"—that hereby is signified that the Divine Rational [principle] should appropriate to itself the truth of natural good, appears from the representation of Isaac, who here is the father, as denoting the good of the rational [principle], concerning which see frequently above; and from the signification of eating, as denoting to appropriate, see n. 2187, 2343, 3168, 3513; and from the signification of venison (hunting), as denoting the truth of natural good, see just above, n. 3588.

3591. "To the intent that thy soul may bless me"—that hereby is signified that conjunction might be effected, appears from the signification of being blessed, as denoting conjunction, see also above, n. 3504, 3514, 3530, 3565, 3584.

3592. "And Isaac his father said unto him, who art thou? and he said, I am thy son, thy first-born Esau"—that hereby is signified a state of perception concerning natural good and truth thence derived, appears from what was said above, n. 3548, 3549, 3550, at verses 18 and 19, where similar words occur.

3593. "And Isaac shuddered with exceeding great horror"—that hereby is signified a great alteration about the inversion of state, appears from what has been said above concerning the two states of man who is regenerated, the state before he is regenerated, and the state after he is regenerated, namely, that in the state before he is regenerated, truths apparently have the dominion, whereas in the state after he is regenerated, truths give place and good receives the dominion, on which subject see what has often been shewn above, n. 1904, 2063, 2189, 2697, 2979, 3286, 3288, 3310, 3325, 3330, 3332, 3336, 3470, 3509, 3539, 3548, 3556, 3563, 3570, 3576, 3579.

3594. "And he said, who then is he that hath hunted venison (hunting) and hath brought to me?"—that hereby is signified inquiry concerning that truth, appears from the representation of Jacob, of whom it is here said, who is he, as denoting the natural [principle] in regard to truth, concerning which see above; and from the signification of venison (hunting) as denoting truth derived from good, see n. 3501; in the present case the inquiry concerning that truth was, whether it was derived from good.

3596. "And have blessed him, also he shall be blessed"—that hereby is signified that it was conjoined, appears from the signification of being blessed, as denoting to be conjoined, see n. 3504, 3514, 3530, 3565, 3584. How the case is with respect to the appropriation and conjunction of the truth represented by Jacob, may appear from what has been said above; but as these subjects are of such a nature, as to transcend the apprehension of the natural man, and cannot be seen except in the light in which the rational or internal man is, in which light few at this day are principled, because few are regenerated, therefore it is better to illustrate them no further, inasmuch as the illustration of things unknown, and such as transcend the apprehension, tends rather to render them obscure than to throw light upon them. Besides, such things ought to be established as a superstructure on the ideas of natural truths, whereby they are to be apprehended, and these also at this day are wanting; and this is the reason why the passages immediately preceding have been explained so briefly, and only as to the internal sense of the expressions. From what has been already said it may appear, what is implied by Isaac's asking venison of his son, that he might eat of it, before he blessed him, and that he did not bless him till after he had eaten, and thus that after eating followed the blessing of him who made the savoury meat and brought it, as is also evident from Isaac's words spoken here concerning Jacob, he hath brought to me, and I have eaten of all before thou camest, and have blessed him, and also he shall be blessed. The reason evidently appears from the internal meaning of the rituals of the ancient Church, for eating with them signified appropriation and conjunction, and conjunction with him with whom they had eaten, or of whose bread they had eaten; meat in general signified the things which are of love and charity, that is, the same as celestial and spiritual meat; bread the things which are of love to the Lord, and wine the things which are of charity towards our neighbour; when these things were appropriated, the persons were joined together; thus they spake to each other from affection, and were consociated together. Feasts (or convivial entertainments) amongst the ancients were of this nature, nor was anything else represented in the Jewish Church by their eating together of the holy offerings in their sacrifices, nor anything else implied in the primitive Christian Church by their dinners and suppers.

3597. Verses 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40. And Esau heard the words of his father, and he cried out with a great and exceeding bitter cry; and said to his father, bless me even me my father,

And he said, thy brother came in treachery, and hath taken thy blessing. And he said, doth he not call his name Jacob, and he hath supplanted me these two times; he hath taken my birth-right, and behold now he hath taken my blessing; and he said, hast thou not reserved a blessing for me? And Isaac answered and said unto Esau, behold I have placed him a master to thee, and I have given all his brethren to him for servants; and with corn and with new wine have I supported him, and what then shall I do for thee my son? And Esau said to his father, hast thou but this one blessing, my father? bless me, even me also, my father; and Esau lifted up his voice and wept. And Isaac his father answered and said unto him, Behold of the fatnesses of the earth shall be thy habitation, and of the dew of heaven from above. And upon thy sword thou shalt live, and shalt serve thy brother, and it shall be when thou hast the dominion, and thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck. Esau heard the words of his father, signifies the perception of natural good derived from Divine Good. And he cried out with a great and exceeding bitter cry, signifies it's great alteration about the inversion of state. And said to his father, Bless me, even me, my father, signifies that it desired conjunction, although by it truth was conjoined. And he said, thy brother came in treachery, signifies the inverse of order. And hath taken thy blessing, signifies conjunction thus. And he said, doth he not call his name Jacob? signifies his quality. And he hath supplanted me two times, signifies that he inverted order. He hath taken my birth-right, signifies priority. And behold now he hath taken my blessing, signifies conjunction. And he said, hast thou not reserved a blessing for me, signifies whether he had any thing as to conjunction in that former state. And Isaac answered and said unto Esau, signifies instruction. Behold I have placed him a master to thee, signifies that in that state he should have dominion. And all his brethren have I given to him for servants, signifies that to the affections of truth in this case the affections of good were subordinate as to appearance. And with corn and new wine have I sustained him, signifies, as above, the good and truth thereof. And what then shall I do for thee, my son? signifies that good had nothing else in that state. And Esau said to his father, signifies the perception of natural good. Hast thou but this one blessing, my father? signifies whether any thing else could be adjoined from natural good in such case. Bless me also, even me, my father, signifies that natural good desired conjunction, although by it truth was conjoined. And Esau lifted up his voice and wept, signifies a further state of alteration. And Isaac his father answered and said unto him, signifies perception concerning natural good that it would be made Divine. Behold of the fatnesses of the earth shall be thy habitation, signifies that life is from the Divine Good. And of the dew of heaven from above, signifies that it is from the Divine Truth. And upon thy sword thou shalt live, and shalt serve thy brother, signifies that so long as truth is conjoining to good, good would be in an inferior place as to appearance. And it shall be when thou hast dominion, signifies that it shall be in the prior place. And thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck, signifies that in such case conjunction would be by good, and that truth would be of good.

3598. Inasmuch as the things contained in verses 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, are such as have been explained above, and what is involved therein may appear from what has been already said, therefore it is needless to explain them further as to the internal sense. We shall only illustrate what is contained in verses 39 and 40, relating to the blessing of Esau by his father Isaac.

3599. "And Isaac his father answered and said unto him"—that hereby is signified perception concerning natural good, that it would be made Divine, appears from the signification of Isaac, as denoting the Lord's Divine Rational [principle] as to the good thereof, see n. 3012, 3124, 3210; and from the signification of saying, in the historical parts of the Word, as denoting to perceive, concerning which see frequently above; and from the representation of Esau, to whom he said, as denoting natural good, of which also much has been said above; that it should be made Divine, appears from the blessing which follows. It was said above that Esau represents the Lord's Divine Natural [principle] as to Divine Good, and Jacob his Divine Natural [principle] as to Divine Truth; but here, that Esau represents natural good which should be made Divine; and in what goes before, that Jacob represented natural truth which should be made Divine. How this is, may appear from what was said above, n. 3494 and 3576; but to render the subject clearer, it may be expedient to add a few words in relation to it. The natural good, which Esau first represents, is the natural good of the Lord's infancy, which was Divine from the Father, but human from the mother; and so far as it was from the mother, it was tainted with hereditary evil, and being such, it could not be instantly in an order capable of receiving the Divine [principle] which was inmost in it, but had need of being reduced into such order by the Lord. The case is the same with the truth which is represented by Jacob; for where good is, there is truth, each being necessary for the other's existence. All the thinking principle, even with infants, is of truth adjoined to the will-principle, which is of good; wherefore after that the Lord had reduced to order the natural [principle] as to good and as to truth in Himself, so that it might receive the Divine [principle], and thus Himself from his Divine [principle] might flow in, and after that He had successively expelled all the human [principle] which was from His mother, in this case Esau represents the Lord's Divine Natural [principle] as to good, and Jacob, his Divine Natural [principle] as to truth. But Esau and Jacob represent the Divine Good and Divine Truth of the Lord's Divine Natural [principle], as conjoined with each other like brethren, which principles considered in themselves, are nothing else but one power (or potency) together to form and receive actual good and truth. This good and truth, namely, actual, is the subject afterwards treated of. From these considerations, it is evident how great arcana are contained in the internal sense of the Word, which arcana are such, that their most general or common principles are not apprehensible by man's understanding, as is the case possibly with the things here said. How then should the innumerable particulars relating thereto be apprehended? Nevertheless they are adequate to the understanding and apprehension of the angels, who, concerning these and like arcana, receive celestial ideas from the Lord, illustrated by representatives of ineffable pleasantness and blessedness. Hence some conception may be formed of the nature of angelic wisdom, yet but remotely, inasmuch as such arcana are in the shade of the human understanding.

3600. "Behold of the fatnesses of the earth shall be thy habitation"—that hereby is signified that life is from Divine Good, and that by the dew of heaven from above, is signified that it is from Divine Truth, appears from the signification of fatness, as denoting good, see 353, in the present case Divine Good, because it is spoken of the Lord; and from the signification of habitation, as denoting life, see n. 1293, 3384; and that habitation is predicated of good, see n. 2268, 2451, 2712; and from the signification of the dew of heaven, as denoting truth derived from the good of a state of peace and innocence, see n. 3579, in the present case Divine Truth, because it is spoken of the Lord. Similar words were spoken to Jacob, namely, God shall give thee of the dew of heaven and of the fatnesses of the earth, verse 28; but in that passage mention is made of dew, thus of truth, in the first place, and of the fatnesses of the earth, thus of good, in the second place, and also that God should give of them; whereas here, speaking to Esau, mention is made in the first place of the fatnesses of the earth, thus of good, and in the second place of the dew of heaven, thus of truth; and not that God would give, but that his habitation should be of them. Hence also it is evident that Jacob represents truth, and Esau good, also that truth apparently in the former place is first, but that this is the inverse of order, according to what has been frequently shewn above.

3601. "And upon thy sword thou shalt live, and shalt serve thy brother"—that hereby is signified that so long as truth is conjoining to good, good would be in an inferior place to appearance, is manifest from the signification of sword, as denot-ing truth combating, see n. 2799. Hence to live upon the sword denotes whilst truth is conjoining to good, for conjunction is effected by combats, that is by temptations, for without them truth is not conjoined; and from the signification of serving thy brother, as denoting to be in an inferior place. That nevertheless good is not in an inferior place, only apparently, is evident from what has been so often said above, see n. 3582.

3602. "And it shall be when thou hast dominion,"—that hereby is signified that he should be in a prior place, appears from the signification of having dominion, as denoting to be in a prior place. On this subject see what now follows.

3603. "And thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck"—that hereby is signified that in such case conjunction would be by good, and that truth would be of good, appears from the signification of breaking a yoke from off the neck, as denoting liberation (setting at liberty). That by neck is signified influx and communication, and thence conjunction, and that by a yoke upon the neck is signified interclusion and interception, may be seen, n. 3542; thus to break the yoke from off the neck denotes liberation (setting at liberty) from interclusion and interception, consequently it denotes conjunction by good, also that truth is become the truth of good, for when there is no longer any interclusion and interception, good flows in and conjoins itself to truth. How this is, may appear from what has been heretofore said and shewn; nevertheless it may be expedient to add a few words in the way of further illustration, inasmuch as few comprehend what is meant by the apparent priority of truth, and in the mean while the inferiority of good, and this principally by reason that few reflect on such things, yea, that they do not even reflect upon good, as being distinct from truth. All those also are ignorant what good is, who live a life of self-love and the love of the world, for they do not believe that there can be any good but from this source; and inasmuch as they are ignorant what good is, they are ignorant also what truth is, for truth is of good. They know indeed from revelation that it is good to love God and their neighbour, and that truth consists of doctrinals derived from the Word, but whereas they do not live according to such good and truth, they have no perception thereof, but only of knowledges separate from them; yea, even those who are regenerating, do not know what good is before they are regenerated, for before this they supposed truth to be good, and to do according to truth is good, when yet this is not good which in such case they do, but truth; when man is in this state, he is then in the state which is described by Jacob and in the blessing given to him; but when he comes into a state to do good from the affection of good, that is, when he is regenerated, he then comes into the state which is described in the blessing given to Esau. This may be illustrated by those things which appear with man in his first and second age, and afterwards in the third and fourth. Man, in his first age, knows only by memory the things contained in the Word, in like manner the things contained in the doctrinals of faith, and he then believes himself to be good, when he is acquainted with several particulars relating thereto, and can apply them, not to his own life, but to the lives of others. In his second age, when he is more grown up, he is not content to know only by memory the things contained in the Word, and in the doctrinals, but he begins at this time to reflect thereupon in his own thought, and so much as he superadds thereto from his own thought, this pleases him, and hence he is in an affection of truth grounded in some kind of worldly love, which love is also a means of his learning more things, which without it would have been left unlearned. But in his third age, if he be such as to be capable of being regenerated, he begins to think about use, and in this case to reflect on what he reads in the Word and imbibes from doctrinals, for the sake of use; and when he is in this state, the order is inverted, namely, that truth is no longer placed in the first place as heretofore. But in his fourth age, when it is the age of his regeneration, because then the state is full, concerning which see n. 2636, he loves the Word, and doctrinals which are derived from the Word, that is truth, for the sake of the good of life, consequently, from the good of life: thus the good comes to be in a prior place, which until this time was in a posterior place apparently. The ground and reason why good was apparently in a posterior place, is, because it lay intimately concealed in all his affection, nor was it able to manifest itself, inasmuch as such things had place without it, as it could not agree with, namely, vain and empty things, such as are those of self-glory and the glory of the world; but after he is regenerated, then these things recede, and the good which lay intimately concealed, comes forth as it were from its place of confinement, and flows into those things which are without, and makes truths its own, or truths of good, and thus manifests itself. Good with man in the mean time, like that involuntary [principle] which is in his voluntary (or will) [principle], is in all and singular the things which he thinks, and thence in all and singular the things which he acts. Man knows not that he has this involuntary [principle], because he perceives nothing else appertaining to himself but what is his own, that is, the voluntary [principle]. The involuntary [principle] here spoken of is twofold, one is his hereditary [principle] derived from his father and mother, the other enters by influx through heaven from the Lord. As man grows up, then that [principle] which he has hereditarily from his parents manifests itself more and more, if he be such as not to suffer himself to be regenerated, for thence he takes to himself evils and makes them his own or proper to him; but the involuntary [principle], which is from the Lord through heaven, manifests itself in adult age with those who are regenerated; and in the mean time it has disposed and governed all and singular things of their thought and also of their will, although it had not appeared.

3604. Verses 41, 42, 43, 44, 45. And Esau hated Jacob on account of the blessing with which his father blessed him, and Esau said in his heart, the days of mourning of my father will approach, and I will slay my brother Jacob. And it was told Rebecca the words of her elder son Esau, and she sent, and called to Jacob her younger son, and said unto him, behold Esau thy brother comforteth himself for thee to kill thee. And now, my son, hearken to my voice, and arise, flee thou to Laban my brother, to Haran. And tarry with him some days, until thy brother's fury turn away: until thy brother's anger turn away from thee, and he forget that which thou hast done to him, and I will send and receive thee from thence. Why should I be deprived of you both in one day? Esau hated Jacob on account of the blessing with which his father blessed him, signifies that natural good was averse to inverted conjunction of truth. And Esau said in his heart, signifies thought. The days of mourning of my father will approach, and I will kill my brother Jacob, signifies the inversion and privation of the self-derived life of truth. And it was told Rebecca the words of her elder son Esau, signifies the Lord's perception from Divine Truth concerning the mind of natural good at that time. And she sent and called to Jacob her younger son, and said unto him, signifies a state of the perception of the affection of truth by virtue of influx through Truth Divine. Behold Esau thy brother comforteth himself for thee to kill thee, signifies a purpose of inverting the state and of depriving truth of self-derived life. And now my son, hearken to my voice, and arise, signifies staying as yet. Flee thee to Laban my brother, to Haran, signifies to the affection of external or corporeal good. And tarry with him some days, signifies what is successive. Until thy brother's wrath turn away, signifies until the state is turned. Until thy brother's anger turn away from thee, signifies succession of state with natural good. And he forget that which thou hast done to him, signifies habit acquired from staying. . And I will send and receive thee from thence, signifies an end in such case. Why should I be deprived of you both in one day, signifies that otherwise conjunction would not be.

3605. "Esau hated Jacob on account of the blessing with which his father blessed him"—that hereby is signified that natural good was averse to the inverted conjunction of truth, appears from the signification of hating, as here denoting in the internal sense to be averse to, of which we shall speak presently;

and from the representation of Esau, as denoting natural good, and of Jacob, as denoting natural truth, concerning which see above; and from the signification of blessing, as denoting conjunction, see n. 3504, 3514, 3530, 3565, 3584. That in the present case it is an inverted conjunction of truth, which is represented by Jacob, is manifest from what was said and shewn above, n. 3539, 3548, 3556, 3563, 3570, 3576, 3603. The ground and reason why hating in the internal sense denotes to be averse to, is, because it is predicated of good, which is represented by Esau, and good does not even know what hatred is, being the direct opposite thereof, and opposites can in no wise exist in one subject; but good, or they who are principled in good, instead of hatred have a species of aversion. Hence it is, that hatred here denotes in the internal sense to be averse to; for the internal sense is principally for those who are in heaven, wherefore when it descends thence, and is derived into the literal sense, then when the historical things are such, the affection of aversion falls into the expression of hatred, but yet in such a sort, that there is no idea of hatred in those who are in heaven. The case herein is like what was related above, n. 1875, concerning these words in the Lord's prayer, "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil," in that temptation and evil are rejected, until what is purely angelical, namely, good, remains without an idea of temptation and of evil, and this with a species of indignation and aversion adjoined, in regard to evil being thought of when the Lord is thought of. The case is the same with all those passages in the Word, wherein it is said of Jehovah or the Lord, that He hates; as in Zechariah, "Think ye not evil in your heart a man of his companions, neither love ye the oath of a lie, because all these things I hate, saith Jehovah," viii. 17; and in Moses, "Thou shalt not set up to thyself a statue, which Jehovah thy God hateth," Deut. xvi. 22; and in Jeremiah, "Mine inheritance is become unto me as a lion in the forest, it hath uttered against me it's voice, therefore have I hated it," xii. 8; and in Hosea, "In Gilgal have I hated them, by reason of the wickedness of their works I will drive them out of mine house, I will love them no more," ix. 15; in which passages hatred, which is predicated of Jehovah or the Lord, in the internal sense is not hatred, but is Mercy, inasmuch as the Divine [principle] is Mercy; but when this flows in with man who is in evil, and he incurs (or runs into) the punishment of evil, it then appears as hatred, and it is by reason of it's so appearing, that in the sense of the letter it is called hatred. In like manner, and for the same reason, anger, wrath, and fury, are in the Word predicated of Jehovah or the Lord, on which subject, see n. 245, 592, 696, 1093, 1683, 1874, 2395, 2447, 3235. The Jewish and the Israelitish people above all others were of such a nature and quality, that as soon as they observed anything unfriendly, even amongst those to whom they were allied, they believed it lawful to treat them cruelly, and not only to kill them, but also to expose them to beasts and birds, and thus, because the inflowing mercy of the Lord was changed with them into such hatred, not only against their enemies, but also against those with whom they were allied, therefore they could not believe otherwise but that Jehovah also, entertained hatred, was angry, wrathful, and furious, and this was the reason why in the Word it is so expressed according to appearance; for such as man's quality is, such the Lord appears to him, see n. 1861, 2706. But what the quality of hatred is with those who are principled in love and charity, that is, who are principled in good, appears from the Lord's words in Matthew, "Ye have heard that it was said, thou shalt love thy neighbour, and shalt hate thine enemy, but I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that speak evil of you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that injure and persecute you, that ye may be the sons of your Father Who is in heaven," v. 43, 44, 45.

3606. "And Esau said in his heart"—that hereby is signified thought, appears from the signification of saying in the heart, as denoting thought.

3607. "The days of mourning of my father will approach, and I will kill my brother Jacob"—that hereby is signified the inversion and privation of the self-derived life of truth, appears from the signification of days of mourning, as denoting inversion of state; and from the signification of killing Jacob the brother, as denoting to deprive truth of self-derived life. The case is similar in regard to what is here said, as to what was just now said concerning the signification of hatred in the internal sense, namely, that it is not hatred; and it may also appear from what is the case continually in another life, where all the good, which flows down from heaven to those who are in evil, is changed into evil, and with the infernals into the opposite, in like manner truth is changed into what is false, see n. 2123; wherefore on the other hand, what is evil and false, as appertaining to such spirits, in heaven is good and truth. To the intent also that it may be good, there are spirits in the way who reject the idea of what is evil and false, that so the idea of what is good and true may be presented, concerning which rejection, see n. 1393, 1875; and moreover, when what is evil and false approaches towards those who are principled in good and truth, it does not appear as evil and false, but under another appearance, according to the peculiar quality and state of goodness appertaining to them. Hence also it may be evident, that to kill Jacob the brother in the internal sense does not denote to kill, but denotes a privation of that life which is not competent to truth; for truth of itself has not life, but receives it from good, inasmuch as truth is only a vessel recipient of good, see n. 1496, 1832, 1900, 2063, 2261, 2269, 2697, 3049, 3068, 3128, 3146, 3318, 3387; and in good there is life, but not in truth, except what it receives from good, see n. 1589, and in several other places. Wherefore the privation of the life of truth from itself is not the extinction of truth, but is its vivification, for when truth appears to itself to have life from itself, in such case it has not life, except such life as in itself is not life, but when it is deprived of that life, it is then gifted with essential life, namely, by good from the Lord, Who is essential Life. This appears manifest from the case of those who are in another life; with such as are principled in truth alone, the ideas appear closed, so that those things which are of heaven cannot flow in, except only in a manner so general, that the influx is scarce known to be from heaven; whereas with such, as are at the same time principled in good, the ideas appear open, so that the things which are of heaven flow in, as into an heaven in miniature, or as into an image of themselves, namely, by the good appertaining to them through truths, see n. 1869, 2425. That truth is deprived of self-derived life, when good begins to be in the prior place, or to have dominion, may appear from what has been above said and shewn concerning the apparent priority of truth at first, and concerning the priority of good afterwards; this privation of the life of truth as self-derived, is what is here signified. The reason why this is called the mourning of a father, is, because days of mourning signify inversion of state, which inversion of state was signified above by the exceeding great horror with which Isaac shuddered, verse 33, n. 3593; and by the great and exceeding bitter exclamation with which Esau exclaimed; verse 34, n. 3597.

3608. "And it was told Rebecca the words of her elder son Esau"—that hereby is signified the Lord's perception from Divine Truth concerning the mind (or intention) of natural good at that time, appears from the signification of its being told, as denoting to think and reflect, see n. 2862, thus to perceive; and from the representation of Rebecca, as denoting the Divine Truth of the Lord's Divine Rational [principle]; and from the representation of Esau, as denoting natural good, concerning which representations see above. Hence it is evident, that its being told Rebecca concerning the words of her elder son Esau, denotes the Lord's perception from Divine Truth concerning the intention of natural good at that time.

3609. "And she called to Jacob her younger son, and said unto him"—that hereby is signified a state of perception of the affection of truth from influx through Divine Truth, appears from the representation of Rebecca who called and said, as denoting the Divine Truth of the Lord's Divine Rational [principle] conjoined to Divine Good; and from the representation of Jacob, as denoting natural truth or the affection of truth therein, concerning which representations see above; and from the signification of calling to him and saying to him, as denoting a state of perception, concerning which see also above; in the present case denoting apperception, because the natural [principle] is the subject here treated of.

3610. "Behold Esau thy brother comforteth himself for thee to kill thee"—that hereby is signified a purpose of inverting the state and of depriving truth of self-derived life, appears from the signification of comforting one's-self for any one, as denoting to appease restlessness of mind with hope concerning any one, or concerning anything; for thee, implies the inversion of the state of truth; and from the signification of killing thee or Jacob, as denoting to deprive truth of self-derived life, concerning which see just above, n. 3607, where it was shewn, that to deprive truth of life is not to extinguish it, but to vivify it. For the case with respect to truth is this, when they who are principled in truth, or in the affection of truth, do not live according to the truth which they know, and with which they are affected, in such case there is somewhat of pleasure and delight derived from self-love, or the love of the world, which has adjoined itself to the affection of truth, and which appears as good, when nevertheless it is not good, except respectively in regard to use, in that truths may thus be introduced and learnt, which afterwards may be serviceable to essential good and the life thereof. When truth is in this state, that is, they who are in the affection of truth, then truth is said to have self-derived life, which is not life, as may appear from this consideration, that there is no life in self-love and the love of the world, or in their pleasure and delight, but only in celestial and spiritual love, and in their pleasure and delight; wherefore when truth, that is, they who are in the affection of truth, are deprived of that life, they then first receive life, or then first are vivified. These things cannot possibly be apprehended by those, who are in the affection of selfish and worldly love, for they suppose that no other life can be given, consequently that if they should be deprived of that life, they would altogether cease to live, for they who are in that life can in no wise know what spiritual and celestial life is; when yet the real case is this, that when they are deprived of that life, namely, of the affection of selfish and worldly love, then life flows in from the Lord, such as is the angelic and heavenly life, with ineffable wisdom and happiness, from which life, when the former life is viewed, it appears as if it was no life, or as the sordid life of brute animals, inasmuch as there is nothing of a Divine [principle] therein, except the faculty of thinking and speaking, and thus of appearing in an external form like men. In respect to this circumstance, that good had the purpose of inverting the state and depriving truth of self-derived life, which is signified by Esau comforting himself for thee to kill thee, the case is this; good with man, during regeneration, has continually a purpose of inverting the state, and of reducing it to such an order, that truth may not be in the prior place but in the posterior, as it is agreeable to the state of heaven; this purpose however lies deeply concealed, nor is it perceived until it is effected. The case herein is as with conjugal love, which does not appear in infancy and childhood, but still lies treasured up, nor does it come forth until all and singular things are so arranged, that it can manifest itself; in the meantime it produces all means suitable to itself, or they are produced. The case is similar in the vegetable kingdom, in every tree, and in every plant; there lies intimately hid therein a tendency (conatus) to produce fruit or seeds, but this tendency cannot manifest itself until it has first produced all necessary means, namely, branches, leaves, and flowers, and when these are produced, then the tendency comes forth into act. So also it is with those who are born anew; the conjugal [principle], which is that of good and of truth, lies secretly treasured up for a long time, but still it is present as a tendency (conatus) in the efficient cause and thence in the effect, yet it does not appear until all things are arranged in order, and when they are so arranged, it then first comes forth and manifests itself; this tendency, or effort, is what is meant by the purpose of inverting the state, and depriving truth of self-derived life. Hence it is evident, that the internal sense is altogether different from what is expressed in the letter, namely, that it is the reduction of truth into order and its vivification, not its destruction and privation of its life.

3611. "And now my son, hearken to my voice, and arise"—that hereby is signified staying (or tarrying) as yet, appears from the signification of hearkening to a voice, as denoting to obey, namely, that he should tarry yet in that inverted state, of which we shall speak presently.

3612. "Flee thee to Laban my brother, to Haran"—that hereby is signified to the affection of external or corporeal good, appears from the representation of Laban, as denoting the affection of good in the natural man, see n. 3129, 3130, 3160; and from the signification of Haran, as denoting what is external, and thence respectively obscure, see n. 1430. But what is here properly signified by Laban and Haran, may appear from what follows, where mention is made of Laban and Haran, namely, that it is the collateral good of a common stock (or stem), for goods and truths have conjunction with each other like the conjunction of parents, brethren, kinsmen, and relations, which has place in families, see n. 685, 917, 2508, 2524, 2556, 2739. These things however, are altogether hidden to man, who is not principled in the life of good; he does not even know what good is, and consequently neither what truth is. If he first knew these, namely, from doctrine conjoined to life, or from life conjoined to doctrine, he would then know and perceive innumerable things concerning good and truth, and this successively more and more distinctly, and afterwards their mutual respective conjunctions with each other, and at length their proximities in their series, and in each proximity again things innumerable, thus lastly heaven in its form, that is, in its beauty and felicity.

3613. "And tarry with him some days"—that hereby is signified what is successive, appears from the signification of tarrying, as denoting nearly the same as to dwell, thus the same as to live, see n. 1293, 2268, 2451, 2712, 3384; but to tarry is predicated of the life of truth with good, and to dwell is predicated of the life of good with truth; and from the signification of days, as denoting times and states, see n. 23, 487, 493, 2788, 3462; thus it is the life of subsequent times and states, consequently what is successive, which is here signified by tarrying with him some days. This successive, or tarrying of Jacob with Laban, is treated of in the chapters which follow.

3614. "Until thy brother's wrath turn away"—that hereby is signified until the state changes; and that, "until thy brother's anger turn away from thee," signifies succession of state with natural good, appears from the signification of wrath and anger, as denoting states which are repugnant, of which signification we shall speak presently. When these states become such, as to be no longer repugnant, but to begin to conjoin themselves, it is then said that wrath turns away, and that anger turns away. Hence it is, that "until thy brother's wrath turn away," signifies until the state changes; and that "until thy brother's anger turn away," signifies succession of state with natural good. That somewhat distinct is implied in the two expressions, wrath and anger, may appear from this consideration, that they are similar words, and that unless they had had a distinct signification, it would have been an idle repetition to say, "Until thy brother's wrath turn away, and until thy brother's anger turn away." What is implied in each expression, appears from the general explication, and also from the predication of wrath and the predication of anger, for wrath is predicated in respect to truth, in the present case in respect to the truth of good which is represented by Esau, whereas anger is predicated in respect to that essential good. Wrath and anger are frequently mentioned in the Word, but in the internal sense they do not signify wrath and anger, but that which is repugnant, and this by reason that whatever is repugnant to any affection produces wrath or anger, so that in the internal sense they are only repugnancies; but that is called wrath which is repugnant to truth, and that anger which is repugnant to good; and in an opposite sense, it is wrath which is repugnant to what is false or the affection thereof, that is, to principles of what is false; and it is anger which is repugnant to evil or its lust, that is, to self-love and the love of the world. In the former sense, wrath is properly wrath, and anger is anger; whereas, when predicated of good and truth, wrath and anger is zeal; which zeal, inasmuch as in its external form it appears like wrath and anger, therefore in the sense of the letter it is so called. That wrath and anger in the internal sense are only repugnancies, may appear from the following passages in the Word, "The fervour of Jehovah is against all nations, and wrath against all their army," Isaiah xxxiv. 2; where the fervour of Jehovah against all nations, denotes repugnance against evil. That nations denote evils, see n. 1259, 1260, 1849, 1868, 2588. Wrath against all their army, denotes repugnance against the false principles thence derived. That stars which are called the army of the heavens, are knowledges, and thus truths, and in an opposite sense false principles, may be seen, n. 1128, 1808, 2120, 2495, 2849. Again, in the same prophet, "Who hath given Jacob for a prey, and Israel to them that spoil, hath not Jehovah to Whom we have sinned, and He hath poured out upon him the wrath of His anger," xlii. 24, 25; where the wrath of anger denotes repugnance against the false [principle] of evil. Jacob denotes those who are in evil, and Israel those who are in the false [principle]. Again, "I have trodden the wine-press alone, and of the people no man was with Me, and I have trodden them in Mine anger, and have destroyed them in My wrath; and I have trampled down the people in Mine anger, and have made them drunk in My wrath," lxiii. 3, 6; speaking of the Lord and His temptation-victories, where to tread and trample down in anger denotes victories over evils, and to destroy and make drunk in wrath denotes victories over false principles; to trample upon in the Word is predicated of evil, and to make drunken of what is false. So in Jeremiah, "Thus saith the Lord Jehovah, behold Mine anger and My wrath is poured out upon this place, upon man and upon beast, and upon the tree of the field, and upon the fruit of the ground, and it shall burn and not be extinguished," vii. 20; where mention is made both of anger and wrath, because the subject treated of is both concerning what is evil and what is false. It is usual with the prophets in speaking of evil, to speak also of the false [principle]; as in speaking of good, to speak also of truth, and this by reason of the heavenly marriage, which is that of good and of truth, in all and singular things of the Word, see n. 685, 793, 801, 2173, 2516, 2712; hence also mention is made both of anger and wrath, otherwise one expression would have been sufficient. Again, in the same prophet, "I will fight with you in a stretched-out hand and a strong arm, and in anger and in wrath, and in great fervour, and 'I will smite the inhabitants of this city, both man and beast," xxi. 5, 6; where in like manner anger is predicated of the punishment of evil, and wrath of the punishment of what is false, and fervour of the punishment of both. Anger and wrath, as being repugnant, is also punishment, for things which are repugnant are in collision, and in such case evil and the false [principle] are punished; for in evil there is repugnance to good, and in what is false there is repugnance to truth, and inasmuch as there is repugnance, there is also collision; that hence comes punishment, may be seen, n. 696, 967. So in Ezechiel, "And Mine anger shall be consummated, and I will cause My wrath to rest in them, and I will comfort Myself, and they shall know that I Jehovah have said, and in My zeal, in consummating Myself, My wrath in them, in doing judgment in thee, in anger and in wrath, and in the corrections of wrath," v. 13, 15; where also anger denotes the punishment of evil, and wrath the punishment of what is false, arising from repugnance, and thence oppugnance (assault). So in Moses, "It shall not please Jehovah to pardon him, because then the anger of Jehovah will smoke, and His zeal upon that man, and Jehovah will separate him unto evil out of all the tribes of Israel: sulphur and salt, and a burning shall the whole land thereof be, it shall not be sown, and shall not bud forth, neither shall any herb rise up in it, according to the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah, of Admah and Zeboim, which Jehovah overthrew in His anger and His wrath; and all nations shall say, wherefore hath Jehovah done thus to this land, what is the heat of His great anger," Deut. xxix. 20, 21, 23, 24. Inasmuch as Sodom is evil, and Gomorrah the false [principle] thence derived, see n. 2220, 2246, 2322, and the nation of which Moses here speaks, is compared thereto as to what is evil and false, therefore anger is spoken of in respect to evil, and wrath in respect to what is false, and heat of anger in respect to both. That such things are attributed to Jehovah or the Lord, is according to appearance, because so it appears to man when he runs into evil, and evil punishes itself, see n. 245, 592, 696, 1093, 1683, 1874, 2395, 2447, 3235, 3605.

3615. "And he forget that which thou hast done unto him"—that hereby is signified habit acquired from staying (or tarrying), appears from the signification of forgetting; in the present case, as denoting the successive abolition of repugnance, and as this is effected by staying (or tarrying), and habit thence acquired, therefore such habit is signified by the words, "And he forget that which thou hast done unto him."

3616. "And I will send and receive thee thence"—that hereby is signified the end in such case, appears from what goes before and from what follows; for the end, which is here signified by sending and receiving thee thence, has place, when truth is in agreement with good, and thus truth serves in subordination to good. This end, after the time of Jacob's tarrying with Laban was accomplished, is represented by Esau's running to meet Jacob, and embracing him, and falling upon his neck, and kissing him, and their both weeping, Gen. xxxiii. 4; for when the end is, or conjunction, then the good of the rational [principle] flows immediately into the good of the natural, and through the good into it's truth, and also mediately through the truth of the rational [principle] into the truth of the natural, and through this into the good therein, see n. 3573. Hence it is evident why it was said by Rebecca, by whom is represented the truth of the rational [principle], to Jacob, by whom is represented the truth of the natural, "I will send and receive thee thence."

3617. "Why should I be deprived of you both in one day?"—that hereby is signified that otherwise conjunction would not be effected, appears from this consideration, that if those things were not done, which are represented in what follows, in the internal sense, by Jacob sojourning with Laban, truth could not have been conjoined with good, thus good could not have been united to truth in the natural [principle], consequently the rational [principle] would be deprived of both; for without the conjunction of truth with good, and the uniting of good with truth in the natural [principle], there is no regeneration, which is the subject treated of in this chapter, in a respective sense. This also is the closing period (clausula) of what goes before.

3618. Verse 46. And Rebecca said unto Isaac, I loathe my life on account of the daughters of Heth, if Jacob take a woman of the daughters of Heth, as they of the daughters of the land, wherefore have I lives. Rebecca said unto Isaac, signifies the Lord's perception from Divine Truth. I loathe my life on account of the daughters of Heth, signifies the adjunction of natural truth from another source. If Jacob take a woman of the daughters of Heth, signifies that natural truth should not be associated thereto. As they of the daughters of the land, signifies because not from that ground. Wherefore have I lives, signifies that thus there would not be conjunction.

3619. "Rebecca said unto Isaac"—that hereby is signified the Lord's perception from Divine Truth, appears from the signification of saying, as denoting to perceive; and from the representation of Rebecca, as denoting the Divine Truth of the Lord's Divine Rational [principle]; and from the representation of Isaac, as denoting the Divine Good therein, concerning which see above; and whereas Divine Good is the very esse, and Divine Truth is life thence derived, on which account the Lord is the Lord principally by virtue of Divine Good, therefore it is called the Lord's perception from Divine Truth. Perception from Divine Truth of the rational [principle], is from the intellectual [principle], whereas perception from Divine Good is from the will-principle; but perception from the intellectual principle is not of the intellectual principle, but is of the inflowing will-principle, for the intellectual principle is nothing else but the will-principle in form. Such is the intellectual principle when it is conjoined to the will-principle, but before it is so conjoined, the intellectual principle appears to be by itself, and the will-principle by itself, although it is nothing else, but a separation of what is external from what is internal; for when the intellectual principle inwardly wills and thinks any thing, the end regarded is from the will-principle, which constitutes its life and governs the thinking principle therein. The reason why the intellectual principle has life from the end regarded, is because the end regarded with man is his life, see n. 1909, 3570. Hence it may in some sort appear what is meant in a representative sense by any one's perception from truth, and what, in a supreme sense, by the Lord's perception from Divine Truth.

3620. "I loathe my life on account of the daughters of Heth"—that hereby is signified the adjunction of natural truth from another source, appears from the signification of loathing life, as denoting no adjunction, namely, of natural truth to truth of the rational [principle], for when there is no such adjunction, then to the rational [principle] its life appears as if it was no life, as may be manifest from what was said above, n. 3493; and from the signification of the daughters of Heth, as denoting affections of truth grounded in what is not genuine, in the present case the affections of natural truth because spoken of Jacob, by whom natural truth is represented, as has been shewn above. That daughters are affections, see n. 2362; and that Heth or Hittite is truth grounded in what is not genuine, may be seen, n. 3470. Hence it appears, that by these words, "I loathe my life on account of the daughters of Heth," is signified that there should be no adjunction of the natural [principle] by truth not grounded in what is genuine, consequently that there should be adjunction of natural truth from another source. The adjunction of natural truth is treated of in what follows, where mention is made of Jacob's stay with Laban, namely, that truths derived from a common stock were adjoined thereto; and by the truths which the daughters of Heth represent, as not being from that stock, adjunction could not be effected, because they were in a state of disparity and discordance; for by the sons of Heth is represented the spiritual Church amongst the Gentiles, see n. 2913, 2986; and inasmuch as this Church is not in possession of the Word, therefore truths in this Church are not from that origin.

3621. "If Jacob take a woman of the daughters of Heth"—that hereby is signified that natural truth should not be associated thereto, appears from the signification of taking a woman, as denoting to be associated; and from the signification of the daughters of Heth, as denoting the affections of truth grounded in what is not genuine, see above, n. 3620, or, what is the same thing, denoting truth, for truth without affection is not conjoined, see n. 3066, 3336. How this case is, appears from what was said above concerning the daughters of Heth.

3622. "As they of the daughters of the land"—that hereby is signified because not from that ground, namely, from truths of the genuine Church, appears from the signification of daughters, as denoting Churches; for daughters signify affections of good and of truth, see n. 2362. And land (or earth) signifies the tract where the Church is, thus the Church, see n. 662, 1066, 1067, 1262, 1733, 1859, 2117, 2118, 2928, 3355; thus daughters of the land are the goods and truths of the Church.

3623. "Wherefore have I lives"—that hereby is signified that thus there would not be conjunction, appears from the signification of lives, as denoting conjunction by truths and goods; for when no truth from a common stock, or genuine fountain, could be adjoined to natural truth, in such case neither would there be adjunction of the natural principle to truth of the rational; thus to the rational principle it's life would appear as no life, see n. 3493, 3620. Hence by these words, "Wherefore have I lives," is signified that thus there would not be conjunction. The reason why in this and in other passages mention is made of lives in the plural, is, because there are two faculties of life in man, one which is called understanding, and which is of truth, and the other which is called will, and is of good. These two lives, or faculties of life, make one, when the understanding is of the will, or, what is the same thing, when truth is of good. Hence it is that in the Hebrew tongue so frequent mention is made of life, and also of lives. That frequent mention is made of lives, is evident from the following passages, "Jehovah God formed man, dust out of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of lives, and man was made into a living soul," Gen. ii. 7: "Jehovah God caused to bud forth out of the ground every tree desirable to the sight, and good for food, and the tree of lives in the midst of the garden," Gen. ii. 9. "Behold I bring a flood of waters upon the earth, to destroy all flesh, in which is the breath of lives," Gen. vi. 17: "There entered in to Noah into the ark, two and two of all flesh in which was the breath of lives," Gen. vii. 15. n. 780: "Every thing expired which had breath, the spirit of lives in his nostrils," Gen. vii. 22: So in David, "I believe that I shall see the good of Jehovah in the land of lives," Psalm xxvii. 13. Again, "What man desiring lives, loving days to see good," xxxiv. 12. Again, "With thee, Jehovah, is the fountain of lives; in thy light we see light," Psalm xxxvi. 9: and in Malachi, "My covenant was with Levi, of lives and of peace," ii. 5: and in Jeremiah, "Thus saith Jehovah, behold I give before you the way of lives, and the way of death, xxi. 8 : and in Moses, "To love Jehovah thy God, to obey His voice, and to cleave to Him, because He is thy lives, and the length of thy days, to dwell upon the earth," xxx. 20. Again, "It is not a vain word from you, because it is your lives, and by this Word ye shall prolong your days upon the earth," Deut. xxxii. 47 ; and in other places. Mention is made of lives in the plural, because they are two, as was said, and yet one ; as also mention is made of heavens in the Hebrew tongue, which are several, and yet one. In like manner of waters, which are superior and inferior, Gen. i. 6, 7, 9, which are things spiritual in the rational and natural principles, and which also should be one by conjunction. In respect to lives, they signify in the plural both what is of the will and what is of the understanding, consequently what is of good and what is of truth ; for the life of man is nothing else but good and truth, wherein is life from the Lord ; inasmuch as man, without good and truth, and the life therein, is not man. For man, without these principles, would not be able to will any thing or to think any thing ; all his faculty of willing being derived from what is good or not good ; and all his faculty of thinking being derived from what is true or not true. Hence man has lives, which are one life when his thought is derived from his will-principle, that is, when truth, which is of faith, is derived from good, which is of love.

CONCERNING THE CORRESPONDENCE OF ALL MAN'S ORGANS AND MEMBERS, BOTH INTERIOR AND EXTERIOR, WITH THE GRAND MAN, WHICH IS HEAVEN.

3624. IT is now allowed to relate and describe things wonderful, which, so far as I know, have never as yet come to the knowledge of any one, nor even entered into his mind to conceive, viz. that the universal heaven is so formed as to correspond to the Lord, His Divine Human [principle] ; and that man is so formed, as to correspond to heaven in regard to all and singular things appertaining to him, and by heaven to the Lord. This is a great mystery : which is now to be revealed, and of which we shall treat here and at the close of the subsequent chapters."

3625. It is from this ground that it has been occasionally asserted above, in speaking of heaven and angelic societies, that they belonged to some province of the body, as to that of the head, or of the breast, or of the abdomen, or of some particular member or organ therein ; and this by reason of the correspondence here spoken of.

3626. That such a correspondence exists, is a thing most perfectly known in another life, not only to the angels, but also to

spirits, and even to the wicked. The angels are hence acquainted with the most secret things which are in man, and with the most secret things which are in the world, and in it's universal nature; this was discoverable to me also from this circumstance, that when I spoke of any part of the human body, they not only knew all the structure of that part, it's manner of acting and use, but likewise innumerable things besides, more than man is capable of exploring, yea of understanding; and this in their order and in their series, from intuition into the heavenly order which they followed, to which the order of that part corresponded, thus, in consequence of being in principles (or the first rudiments of things), they thence know the things derived from them.

3627. It is a general rule (or law) that nothing can exist and subsist from itself, but from another, that is, by another, and that nothing can be kept in form except from another, that is, by another, as is manifest from all and singular things in nature. That the human body from without is kept in form by the atmospheres, is a known thing, and unless it was also kept in form by some acting or living force, it would instantly fall to pieces. Every thing unconnected with what is prior to itself, and by things prior with what is prime (or first), immediately perishes. That the GRAND MAN, or influx thence, is that prior thing by which man, as to all and singular things appertaining to him, is connected with the First, that is, with the Lord, will be manifest from what follows.

3628. On this subject I have been instructed by much experience, whereby it has been evidenced to me, that not only the things appertaining to the human mind, viz. to it's thought and affection, correspond to things spiritual and celestial, which are the things of heaven from the Lord, but also that the whole man in general, and in particular whatever is in man, has such correspondence, insomuch that there is not the smallest part, nor even the smallest constituent of a part, which does not correspond; also that man thence exists and continually subsists; and further, that unless there was such a correspondence of man with heaven, and by heaven with the Lord, thus with what is prior to himself, and by what is prior with what is prime (or first), he would not subsist a single moment, but would fall into annihilation. There are always two forces, which, as was observed, keep every thing in it's connection and in it's form, viz. a force acting from without, and a force acting from within, in the midst of which forces is that which is kept in connection and form; thus also man is kept in his connection and form as to singular his parts, even the most minute. That the atmospheres are what keep the whole body in connection, by their continual pressure or incumbence from without, is a known thing; and also that the aerial atmosphere by it's influx keeps the lungs in their connection and form, and likewise it's organ, which is the ear, with it's forms constructed in it, agreeable to the modification thereof. In like manner it is a known thing, that the ethereal atmosphere keeps the interior parts of the body in their connection, for this atmosphere flows in freely through all the pores, and keeps the interior viscera of the whole body inseparable in their forms, by nearly the same pressure or incumbence, and consequent acting force; it also keeps in connection and form it's organ, which is the eye, with the forms contained therein and adapted to it's modifications. To these forces unless there were correspondent internal forces, which should react against those external ones, and thus keep the intermediate forms in due connection and equilibrium, they would not subsist a moment. Hence it is manifest, that there needs must be two forces, in order that any thing may exist and subsist. The forces which flow in and act from within, are from heaven, and by heaven from the Lord, and in themselves have life. This is very evident from the organ of hearing; unless there were interior modifications, which are of life, and to which there corresponded exterior modifications which are of air, hearing would not exist. The same also is evident from the organ of sight: unless there was interior light which is of life, and to which corresponded exterior light which is that of the sun, it would be impossible for vision to exist. The case is the same with all the other organs and members in the human body; there are forces acting from without, which are natural, and in themselves not alive, and there are forces acting from within, in themselves alive, which keep each in it's connection, and cause it to live, and this according to the form, such as is given it for use.

3629. That the case is really thus, few can believe, by reason that few are acquainted with what is spiritual and what is natural, and still fewer know how these principles are distinct from each other, also what correspondence is, and what influx, and that the spiritual principle, when it flows into the organical forms of the body, presents living operations such as appear; and that without such influx and correspondence, not even the most minute particle of the body could have life and be moved. In respect to this circumstance, I have been informed by living experience, not only that heaven in general flows in, but also societies in particular; likewise what the societies are and of what quality; what flows into this and that organ of the body, and into this and that member thereof; and further, that it is not one society only which flows into each organ or member, but several, and that in each society also there are several; for the more there are, so much the better and stronger is the correspondence, inasmuch as perfection and strength arises from unanimity of many, who act as one in an heavenly form; hence results a more perfect and stronger tendency of acting (conatus) upon particulars according to plurality.

3630. Hence it may appear, that all and singular the viscera and members of the body, or organs of motion and sensation, correspond to societies in heaven, thus to so many as it were distinct heavens, and that from those societies, that is, by them, celestial and spiritual things flow in with man, and this into adequate and suitable forms, and present thus the effects which are apparent to man; these effects however appear to man no otherwise than as natural, thus altogether under another form and under another appearance than what they are in their origin, insomuch that they cannot be known to be from heaven.

3631. It was also once shewn me to the life what societies they are, and of what quality, and how those flow in and act, which constitute the province of the face, and flow into the muscles of the forehead, of the cheeks, of the chin, and of the neck, and how they communicate with each other; in order that this might be presented to the life, it was allowed them to draw an effigy of a face in various methods, by influx. In like manner it was shewn me what societies, and of what quality, flow into the lips, into the tongue, into the eyes, and into the ears; and it was also given me to discourse with them, and thus to be fully instructed. Hence also it may appear, that all who come into heaven, are organs or members of the GRAND MAN; and also that heaven is never shut, but in proportion to the numbers who enter, the stronger is the tendency to action (conatus), the stronger the force, and the stronger the action; and further, that the heaven of the Lord is immense, so as to exceed all belief; the inhabitants of this earth are very few respectively, and but as a pool of water in comparison with the ocean.

3632. Divine Order, and the celestial order thence derived, is not terminated but with man, in his corporeal principles, namely, in his gestures, actions, looks, speech, external sensations, and in the delights thereof; these are the extremes (outermost principles) of order, and the extremes of influx, which are then bounded. But the interior things which flow in, are not such as they appear in externals, but have altogether a different appearance, a different countenance, a different sensation, and a different pleasure; correspondencies teach what are their qualities, and also representations, of which see above. That there is such difference, may appear from actions which flow from the will, and from discourse which flows from the thought. The actions of the body are not such in the will, neither are verbal discourses such in the thought. Hence also it is manifest, that natural acts flow from spiritual principles, for the things appertaining to will and thought are spiritual; and that these spiritual things are effigied in natural acts correspondently, but still differently from what they are in themselves.

3633. All spirits and angels appear to themselves as men, both in respect to face and body, organs and members; and this by reason that their inmost principle conspires to such a form. As the primitive principle of man, which is from the soul of the parent, has a forcible tendency to the formation of the whole man, in the ovum and the womb, although this primitive principle is not in the form of the body, but in another most perfect form, known only to the Lord; and inasmuch as the inmost principle with every spirit and angel in like manner conspires and has a powerful tendency to such a form, therefore they all appear in the spiritual world as men. Moreover, the universal heaven is such, that every one is as it were the centre of all, for he is the centre of influxes through the heavenly form from all, and hence an image of heaven results to every one, and makes him like unto itself, that is, a man; for such as the general (principle or form) is, such is a part thereof, inasmuch as the parts must needs be like unto their general (principle or form), in order to belong thereto.

3634. Man who is in correspondence, that is, who is principled in love to the Lord, and in charity towards his neighbour, and thence in faith, as to his spirit is in heaven, and as to his body in the world; and inasmuch as he thus acts in unity with the angels, he is also an image of heaven; and whereas there is an influx of all, or a general influx, into particulars or parts, as was observed, therefore he is also a little heaven, under a human form; for it is by virtue of good and truth that man is man, and distinct from brute animals.

3635. There are in the human body two (parts or principles), which are the fountains of all it's motion, and also of all external or mere bodily action and sensation, namely, the heart and the lungs. These two (parts or principles) correspond in such a manner to the GRAND MAN or heaven of the Lord, that the celestial angels therein constitute one kingdom, and the spiritual another kingdom, for the Lord's kingdom is celestial and spiritual; the celestial kingdom consists of those who are principled in love to the Lord, the spiritual kingdom of those who are principled in charity towards their neighbour; see n. 2088, 2669, 2715, 2718, 3235, 3246. The heart and it's kingdom in man corresponds to the celestial angels, the lungs and their kingdom correspond to the spiritual; the celestial and spiritual angels also flow into the things appertaining to the heart and lungs, insomuch that such things exist and subsist by influx thence. But concerning the correspondence of the heart and lungs with the GRAND MAN, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, we shall treat particularly.

3636. It is a most universal principle, that the Lord is the sun of heaven, and that thence comes all light in another life; and that to angels and spirits, or those who are in another life, nothing at all of the light of the world appears, and also that the light of the world, which is from the material sun, is no other than darkness to the angels. From the sun of heaven, or from the Lord, there is not only light but also heat ; howbeit it is spiritual light and spiritual heat ; the light in the eyes of the angels appears like light, but it has in it intelligence and wisdom, as being thence derived ; and the heat to their senses is perceived as heat, but there is in it love as being thence derived ; wherefore also love is called spiritual heat, and likewise constitutes the heat of man's life, and intelligence is called spiritual light, and likewise constitutes the light of man's life ; from this universal correspondence the rest are derived ; for all and singular things have relation to good which is of love, and to truth which is of intelligence.

3637. The GRAND MAN, in respect to man, is the universal heaven of the Lord ; but the GRAND MAN, in a supreme sense, is the Lord alone, for heaven is from Him, and all things therein correspond to Him. Inasmuch as the human race, by the life of evil and the persuasions of what is false thence derived, became altogether perverse, and inasmuch as in this case the inferior principles with man began to have rule over the superior, or his natural principles over his spiritual, so that Jehovah, or the Lord, could no longer flow in through the GRAND MAN, that is, heaven, and reduce them into order, therefore hence came a necessity for the Lord's coming into the world, that hereby He might put on the human [principle], and make it Divine, and by it might restore order, so that the universal heaven might have relation to Him as to the only Man, and might correspond to Him alone, those being rejected who were principled in evil and thence in what is false, beneath the feet, that is, out of the GRAND MAN. Hence they who are in the heavens are said to be in the Lord, yea, in His body, for the Lord is the all of heaven, wherein all and every one share by distribution their respective provinces and offices.

3638. Hence it is, that in another life all societies, how many soever they be, keep their situation constant in respect to the Lord, who appears as a sun to the universal heaven ; and what is wonderful, and can scarce be credited by any one, because not apprehended, is, that the societies therein keep the same situation in respect to each individual, wheresoever he may be, and howsoever he may turn himself and move about ; as for instance, the societies which appear on the right, are continually to his right-hand, and those which appear on the left, are continually to his left-hand, although he changes his-direction as to face and body. This also it has been given me frequently to observe by a turn of the body. Hence it is evident, that the form of heaven is such, as to have a constant reference to the GRAND MAN in respect to the Lord ; and that all the angels are not only with the Lord, but in the Lord, or, what is the same thing, that the Lord is with them, and in them ; otherwise this circumstance could not have place.

3639. Hence all situations in heaven are determined in respect to the human body, according to points of direction (plagas) from it, that is, to the right, to the left, forwards, and backwards, in whatever position, and also according to planes, as to the plane of the head and of its parts, as of the forehead, of the temples, of the eyes, and of the ears: also to the plane of the body, as to the plane of the shoulders, of the breast, of the abdomen, of the loins, of the knees, of the feet, and of the soles of the feet; likewise above the head, and beneath the soles of the feet, in every inclination; to the back too, and from the hinder part of the head downwards. It is known from the situation what the societies are, and to what provinces of man's organs and members they belong, and this in all cases infallibly; but more so from their genius and particular temper as to affections.

3640. The hells, which are very numerous, have also a constant situation, so that from the situation alone it may be known which they are, and of what quality. With respect to their situation the case is similar; all things beneath man are in planes in every direction under the soles of the feet. Some appear thence also above the head, and dispersed in other places, not that they have their situation there, for it is owing to a persuasive phantasy which illudes, and appears to have a situation which in reality it has not.

3641. All appear erect, both they who are in heaven and they who are in hell, with the head upwards and the feet downwards; nevertheless, in themselves, and according to angelic vision, they are in another position, namely, they who are in heaven are with the head towards the Lord, who is the sun there, and thus the common centre, from whom all position and situation is determined; whereas the infernals, when viewed by the angels, are with the head downwards and the feet upwards, thus in a position opposite, and also oblique; for, to the infernals, that is beneath, which to the celestials, is above; and that is above which to the celestials is beneath. Hence it is in some degree manifest, how heaven may, as it were, make one with hell, or how they may together have one respect as to situation and position.

3642. One morning I was in consort with angelic spirits, who acted in unity of thought and speech according to custom; this penetrated also towards hell, whereunto it was continued, insomuch that they appeared as it were to act in unity with the infernals; but the reason was, that the good and truth appertaining to the angels was changed, by a wonderful turn, into what was evil and false with the infernals, and this by degrees as it flowed down where hell acted in unity by persuasions of what is false and by lusts of what is evil. The hells, notwithstanding their being out of the GRAND MAN, are nevertheless in such a manner reduced as it were into one, and thereby kept in order, according to which are their consociations. Thus the Lord from His Divine [principle] rules also the hells.

3643. It was observed, that they who are in the heavens are in a serene aura of light, like as of morning light, and of mid-day even verging to evening, in like manner that they are in heat, as of spring, of summer, and of autumn; whereas they who are in hell are in an atmosphere gross, cloudy, and dark, and are also in cold. It was further observed, that between these in general there is an equilibrium; also, that in proportion as the angels are in love, charity and faith thence derived, in the same proportion they are in an aura of light and of vernal heat; and in proportion as the infernals are in hatred, and thence in false principles, in the same proportion they are in darkness and in cold. Light in another life, as was said above, has in it intelligence, heat has in it love, darkness insanity, and cold hatred.

3644. All men, in the universal orb of the earths, have their situation either in the GRAND MAN, that is, in heaven, or out of the GRAND MAN in hell, as to their souls, or, what is the same thing, as to the spirit, which is to live after the body's decease. Man does not know this during his life in the world, but still such is his situation, and he is thence ruled. All are in heaven according to the good of love and the truth of faith thence derived, and in hell according to the evil of hatred and the false principle thence derived.

3645. The universal kingdom of the Lord is a kingdom of ends and uses. It has been given me manifestly to perceive that Divine Sphere, namely, of ends and uses, and certain things at the same time which are inexpressible. All and singular things flow forth from that sphere, and are ruled by it. So far as the affections, the thoughts, and actions, have in them an end of doing good from the heart, so far man, spirit, and angel, is in the GRAND MAN, that is, in heaven; but so far as man and spirit has an end of doing evil from the heart, so far he is out of the GRAND MAN, that is, he is in hell.

3646. With brute animals the case is similar as with men as to influxes and correspondencies, namely, that with them there is influx from the spiritual world, and afflux from the natural world, by which they are kept in form and order, and live: but the real operation exhibits itself differently according to the forms of their souls and the forms of their bodies thence derived. The case herein is as with the light of the world, which flows into various objects of the earth in a like degree and manner, and nevertheless acts diversely in different forms, producing beautiful colours in some, and colours not beautiful in others. Thus when spiritual light flows into the souls of brutes, it is received altogether differently, and thereby acts differently upon them, than when it flows into the souls of men; for the latter are in a superior degree, and in a more perfect state, and are such that they can look upwards, thus to heaven and to the Lord, wherefore the Lord can adjoin them to Himself, and give them eternal life; but the souls of brutes are such, that they cannot do otherwise than look downwards, thus to earthly things alone, and thereby be adjoined solely to such things, in consequence whereof they also perish with the body. The ends regarded are what shew the nature, and quality of the life which man has, and the nature and quality of the life which a beast has. Man may have spiritual and celestial ends, he may see them, acknowledge them, believe them, and be affected with them, whereas beasts can have no other than natural ends; thus man may be in the Divine Sphere of ends and uses, which is in heaven and which constitutes heaven, but beasts can be in no other sphere than that of earthly ends and uses. Ends are nothing else but loves, for the things which are loved are regarded as ends. The reason why very many men do not know how to distinguish between their own life and that of beasts, is, because they in like manner are in things external, and at heart are solely concerned about terrestrial, corporeal, and worldly objects, and persons of such a character believe themselves also to be like the beasts in respect to life, and that after death they shall be dissipated in like manner; for having no concern about things spiritual and celestial, they are likewise without knowledge of such things. Hence comes the insane notion of the men of modern times, in that they compare themselves to brute beasts, and do not see the internal distinction. But whosoever believes in celestial and spiritual things, or suffers spiritual light to flow in and act, he sees altogether according to a different view, and likewise discovers his superiority above brute animals. But concerning the life of brute animals, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, we shall speak in a treatise apart.

3647. How the above case is, was also shewn to me. 'It was given to see and perceive certain spirits as they were entering into another life, who in the life of the body regarded only things terrestrial, and accounted nothing else as an end to be pursued, nor were they initiated by any knowledges into good and truth. Their employment had been that of sailors and husbandmen. They appeared, as it was also perceived, to have so little life, that I thought it impossible for them to share eternal life like other spirits, being like machines scarcely animated; but the angels had tender care for them, and by the faculty, which as men they possessed, insinuated into them the life of good and truth, whereby they were more and more restored, from a life resembling that of animals, to human life.

3648. There is an influx of the Lord through heaven also into the subjects of the vegetable kingdom, as into trees of every kind, and into their fructifications, and into plants of various kinds, and their multiplications. Unless a spiritual principle from the Lord within continually acted upon their primitive forms which are in the seeds, it would be altogether impossible for them to vegetate and grow in so wonderful a manner and succession; but the forms therein are such, that they do not receive anything of life. It is by virtue of this influx, that they have in them an image of what is eternal and infinite, as is evident from this circumstance, that they are in a continual tendency (conatus) to propagate their genera and species, and thus to live as it were forever, and also to fill the universe; this tendency is in every seed. Nevertheless man attributes all these things, which are so wonderful, to mere nature, nor believes in any influx from the spiritual world, because in heart he denies it; although he might know, that nothing can subsist except by what it exists, that is, that subsistence is perpetual existence, or, what is the same thing, production is continual creation.. That hence universal nature is a representative theatre of the Lord's kingdom, may be seen, n. 3483. But on this subject also, and on the correspondence of the vegetable kingdom with the GRAND MAN, by the Divine Mercy of the Lord, we shall speak elsewhere. *
